FEAR GERMAN CIVIL WAR

SENATE DROPS RULES TO LAUD LEAGUE CRITIC

Don't Give Up What Washington Won, Reed Pleads.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The United States senate cast off its traditional reserve and swept aside its most sacred rules today to give vent to its enthusiasm in vigorous applause when Senator Reed, Democrat, of Missouri, assailing the proposed league of nations constitution, warned the nation "not to surrender with the pen what Washington won with the sword."

The Missouri senator's speech followed immediately upon the customary observance of Washington's birthday—the reading of the farewell address warning against entangling foreign alliances.

The galleries, crowded as seldom before in the history of the senate, caught up the applause and the chair was powerless to preserve order when the Missouri senator concluded.

Business Is Suspended.

For nearly ten minutes, while senators and congressmen pressed forward to congratulate Senator Reed, the business of the senate was entirely suspended.

Senator Reed characterized the proposed constitution of the league of nations "as a deed of power" and declared that "in this league the United States will become a mere small factor in a body dominated by foreign nations and despots."

He said that the United States always would be outvoted four to one in the executive council, and charged that any denials that this did not mean a surrender of American sovereignty were "ridiculous and dishonest."

The senator, furthermore, called upon American labor not to be misled by the international labor regulations contained in the league constitution.

Summary of Arguments.

Senator Reed summed up his argument against the league by declaring these five things are demonstrated:

"1. That the control of the league from the first will inevitably be in European and Asiatic nations having many interests in common and who have common antagonisms against

"2. The British empire, in all probability, will constitute the controlling influence in the league.

"3. If at any time England shall lose control the Germanic powers will be likely to succeed to her position of dominance.

"4. This is then the background, the menace of world bolshevism. Indeed, that monster is the most earnest advocate of internationalism. Its fangs are plainly visible in the constitution of the league.

"5. Whoever controls the league will control the world."

Belittles the Nation.

"This league of nations," Senator Reed declared early in his speech, "is the most obscure document I have ever read. In the control of it there would be of the five dominating powers Great Britain, an empire; Italy, a monarchy; Japan, a monarchy; France, a republic, and the United States, a republic. Thus the league would be composed of three monarchies and two republics.

"Now, it becomes evident that in any controversy that may come up before the league of nations there will be the votes of four aliens against the single vote of the United States, and these four aliens are united by treaties and common interests. Clearly the United States is from the first at a disadvantage."

Here are some of the questions which Senator Reed said might properly come within the jurisdiction of the league of nations:

"The Monroe doctrine, border disputes, the right of aliens to enter and remain in the United States, the privileges of aliens while so remaining, the slaughter of American citizens along the Mexican border, the destruction of American ships upon the high seas, the seizure and search of American vessels, the imprisonment of American seamen, the building of forts to command the Panama canal, and the seizure of the canal.

"These and a thousand other vital questions, including indeed all questions," said Senator Reed, "can be brought by any of our antagonists to decision by a vote of the executive council, consisting of eight foreigners and one American."

ALL CONFIDENT OF VICTORY AS VOTE TEST NEARS

G. O. P. Primary Fight a Puzzle; Easy for Sweitzer.

BY CHARLES N. WHEELER.

"Anything may happen Tuesday, but—we will win!"

This was the burden of the same song sung at all political headquarters last night as the tumult and shouting subsided and the primary armies got set for the "zero" hour.

The Thompsonites were making claims that their chief would have as many votes as his two opponents combined.

With the anti-Thompson vote united Thompson, the opposition agrees, would be snowed under. Whether he will be swept out of the political arena for good Tuesday is not so clear in view of the inability of the opposition to get together.

Each Thinks He Is Stronger.

It depends largely, the political managers say, on whether the anti-city hall forces go to the polls on Tuesday evenly divided, or approximately so. If at the last moment the Olson vote could be switched to Merriam or the Merriam vote switched to Olson, they see no chance for "your mayor" to win a renomination.

The question as to which of the two "anti" candidates has developed the greater strength was a matter of analysis by the respective camps.

Mr. Merriam thought he had. Judge Olson and his friends were sure, on the practical dope, he had far the better of the argument with Capt. Merriam, and that it now was up to Merriam followers to join in disposing of Thompson at the primaries.

The Merriam people based their analysis on the captain's anti-boss and anti-machine attitude, holding that the majority of the people have become sick and tired of the "professional politician" and want a new deal all around.

Olson Banks on Organization.

Opposed to this view is the "practical" lineup of the Olson managers. However fascinating, they said last night, the anti-boss and anti-machine appeal to the people may be to the ear, the fact remained that the men who do the hard work on primary day, in most of the wards of the city—the men behind the organized effort to get the voters to the polls—are with Olson.

They point out that in a city the size of Chicago much must depend on the thoroughness of the organization with which a candidate goes to the polls, provided the candidate himself is a man of sound character and ability. The Republican leaders—the responsible ward leaders—are for the most part supporting Olson, they pointed out. This is true both of the so-called Deneen and Brundage factions.

The harmony they have brought about, it was explained, was due to the effort to bring about a united Republican party, not only for the mayoralty election, but for the presidential campaign that is approaching.

Point to Olson Vote Record.

They were, they explained, absolutely convinced at the start that Capt.

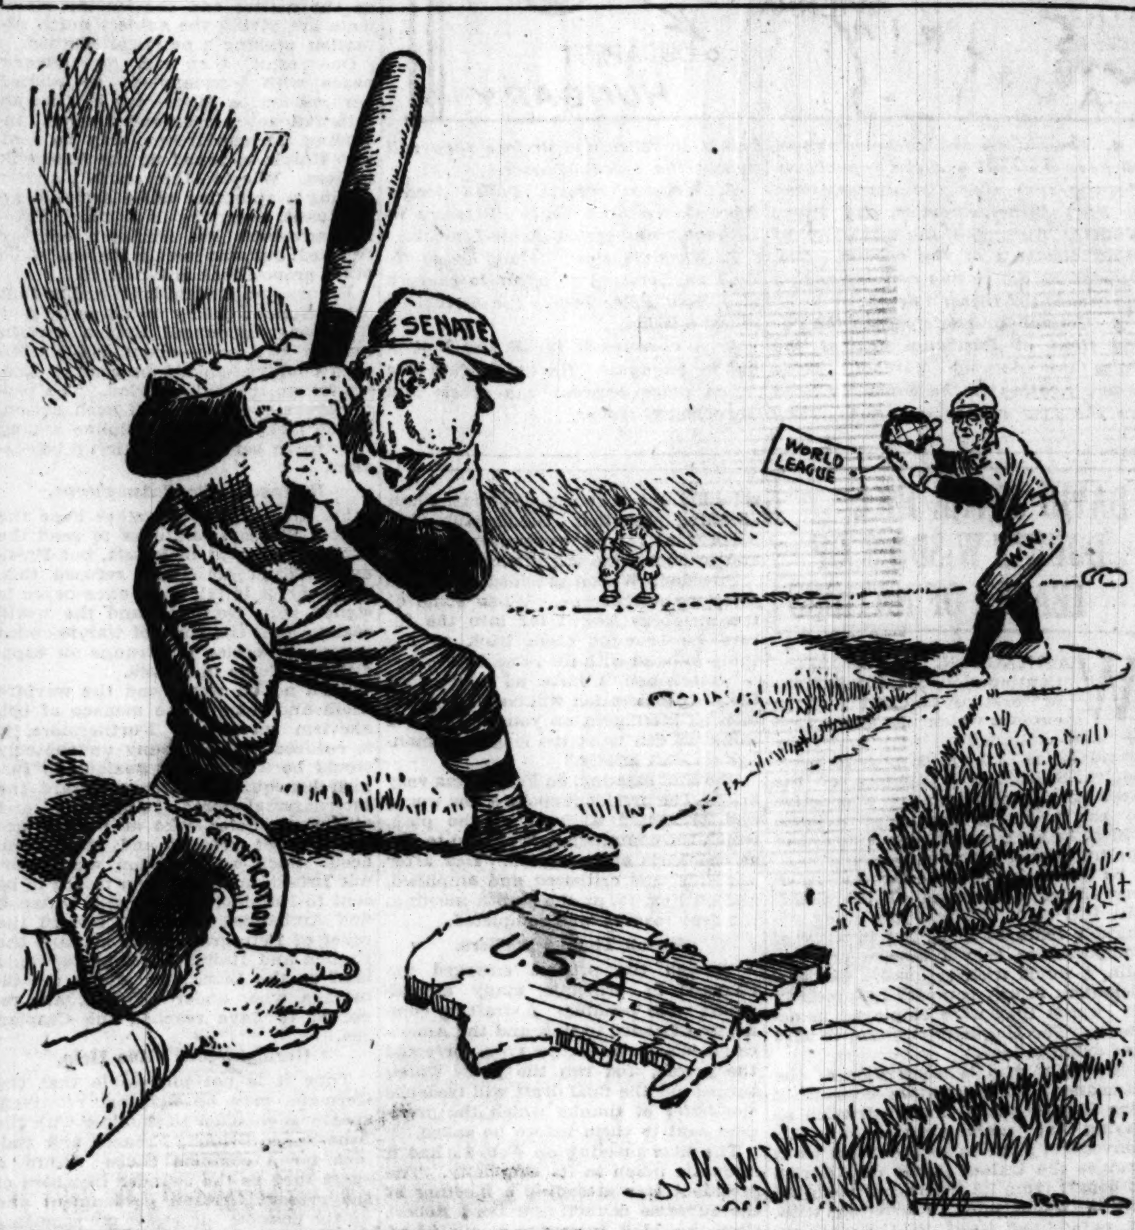
CAN HE PUT IT ACROSS?



AN APPEAL FROM A CHICAGO SOLDIER IN LUXEMBOURG

IN ACTIVE SERVICE WITH THE A. E. F., BERDOFF, Luxembourg. Jan. 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In a recent issue of the Paris edition of the Daily Mail there appeared an article to the effect that Mr. William Hale Thompson, present mayor of Chicago, was seeking renomination for that office, with two worthy and honorable men for opponents on the Republican ticket. Though we are far removed from the scene of the political turmoil, and are unable to cast our votes at this primary election, we feel that, should Mr. Thompson again represent the Republican party in the mayoralty campaign the grand old party would suffer from the stigma of a stain that could never be effaced.

It will be remembered that shortly after our nation entered the war Mr. Thompson, as mayor of Chicago, was openly charged with refusing to officially receive the war commisson sent to America by the people of France. His motive, it was said, was to insure for himself the support of the Germanic peoples in Chicago. Since arriving in France I have read several articles in the daily press quoting him as making utterances favorable to the then imperial German government. At present I am unable to quote from or refer to the papers and articles containing these statements. But so far I have never read a denial by Mr. Thompson.

But the war has had its effect on our people. Many sons of German parents have bravely fought and fallen, suffered and endured the misery and hardships incident to the war. And they join us in their resentment toward the representation of Mr. Thompson on the Republican ticket. They realize that the war is costing our people billions in gold. They have seen the little white crosses in the shell torn fields of northern France that mark the last resting place of their comrades. They are of us. But while our millions were here in the death grapple with the Hun, Mr. William Hale Thompson sat at home, behind the barrier of our bodies.

You in America have many times expressed a fervent admiration for what we have accomplished over here. You have often expressed the desire that we who have suffered so much for our country shall have a voice in the management of its affairs on our return.

And we appeal to you—if you respect the memory of those who have fought for you, endured and suffered for you—to keep the name and honor of Chicago stainless till our return by defeating Mr. William Hale Thompson for the Republican nomination for mayor of Chicago. NINE KILLED, 75 HURT, IN WRECK

Train Crashes Into Two Engines on Pittsburgh Elevated Tracks.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 22.—Nine persons are known to have been killed and about seventy-five others injured tonight when a double header engine, running light on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad here, went through an open switch and was struck by passenger train No. 166, known as the Versailles local.

Nine bodies had been taken from the wreckage at midnight and removed to the Allegheny county morgue. None was identified. Police and firemen continued the search for additional bodies believed to be in the débris.

Many Seriously Injured.

Among the severely injured taken to the hospitals were the following:

GRACE LECK, aged 4, McKeesport.

MRS. CLARA BERTOLIN, aged 35, McKeesport, aunt of the Leck girl.

MRS. ROBERT HEWITT, aged 45, McKeesport. Husband and baby are also in the hospital seriously injured.

INEZ ROBINSON, aged 23, McKeesport.

MRS. A. M. EVANS, aged 65, McKeesport. Her daughter, Annette, is seriously injured and her husband is missing.

MRS. ABRAHAM LINKOFF, aged 20, McKeesport.

HELEN JONES, aged 19, Mount Washington.

Wreck on Elevated Tracks.

The accident occurred near Swinburn street, in Second avenue, the tracks at this point being elevated above the surface of the avenue. The two locomotives, running light, went through the open switch on the main line.

The engineer saw the passenger train approaching and tried to back out, but before he could do this the passenger crashed into the engines. Three of the passenger coaches were ripped from the remainder of the train, but they held the rails.

Panic ensued among the passengers as they were hurled from their seats. Lights were extinguished and the survivors struggled furiously to free themselves from the splintered cars. Police reserves were compelled to fight off the curious. Ambulances were rushed from all parts of the city.

Twenty-one Hurt Near Marion, Ill.

Marion, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Twenty-one persons were injured, some seriously, when train No. 374 on the Illinois Central, north bound from Paducah, Ky., was wrecked this afternoon between Reevesville and Grantsburg, twenty miles south of Marion.

The train struck a broken rail after the engine and two cars had passed over. Two cars were derailed, but remained upright, but the last two cars turned over and slid down a fifteen foot embankment. All the injured passengers were in these coaches.

The injured were placed in the undamaged coaches and with the engine hurried to Marion, where the three ambulances rushed the wounded to the city hospital, where all the surgeons of the city had been summoned.

Circuit Judge D. T. Hartwell of Marion, who was returning from Metropolis, where he has been attending court, was seriously injured. The flagman was on a stepladder lighting a lamp when the crash came. In falling, his feet struck Judge Hartwell in the abdomen.

The injured passengers were from southern Illinois and Kentucky.

FORT SHERIDAN LIEUTENANT IS SENT TO SIBERIA

Just what the United States army authorities think of the Siberian expedition of American forces abroad was illustrated yesterday in the transfer of Lieut. O. W. Hinds, formerly registrar of general hospital No. 28, at Fort Sheridan. Lieut. Hinds is now on his way to catch a boat which sails on Monday towards Siberia. He has been ordered to join the Siberian expedition.

"Lieut. Hinds had charge of the records here at the hospital," said Col. W. N. Bifspham, commandant at the fort. "I found that he has been grossly inefficient, and that is the reason for his transfer to Siberia. Lieut. L. E. Harris replaces him.

"I found that Lieut. Hinds was always so busy that he kept the mothers who came here from other cities to see their sons waiting several hours. I found that he kept nurses waiting when they needed his help."

ALLIES FIX NEW TERMS TO MAKE FOE HARMLESS

Treaty to End War Cuts German Army to 100,000 Men.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—The supreme war council has completed the main details of the military treaty which Marshal Foch will soon present to the Germans. It will be further perfected in detail at a meeting of the council Monday and then finally passed upon by the council of the great powers on Tuesday.

This document is a highly important one, being in its terms a permanent armistice but in effect a military treaty, disarming and demobilizing the German forces down to a small police basis, understood to be between five and ten divisions of 10,000 men each, with a similar complete naval and aerial disarmament and the dismantlement of the frontier fortifications as well as Helgoland and the Kiel canal.

Delay Boundary Questions.

The economic and boundary questions with Germany are left for later determination, but from the military and naval standpoint this treaty will be completely effective in terminating the war, making impossible any resumption of it.

The treaty also will have the effect of releasing all the allied troops except in the established areas to be occupied until the definite peace treaty is signed.

This military treaty will be so effective in ending the possibility of hostilities that it is construed in some quarters as definitely ending the war.

Premier Lloyd George now has arranged to come over to Paris the latter part of next week, when it is expected that Premier Clemenceau will be able to discuss affairs.

Denmark Claims Territory.

Denmark's claims for a portion of Schleswig-Holstein were heard by the supreme council yesterday. H. A. Bernhoft, the Danish minister in Paris, who appeared to represent Denmark, told the council that the northern half of Schleswig-Holstein rightfully belonged on historical and national grounds to Denmark, but that Denmark was willing to have a plebiscite determine its disposition.

While the Danish minister did not make a flat claim for the southern half of Schleswig-Holstein, including the Kiel canal, he said that in justice to the population of this district he believed it should have the right to determine its future by a popular vote.

The whole question was referred to a commission.

Discuss Neutral Zone.

An official communique issued by the supreme council of the conference last night follows:

"The allied and associated representatives were in session at the Quai d'Orsay today from 3 till 5:30 p. m. Stephen Pichon, French minister of foreign affairs, presided. The following matters were considered:

"The question of the creation of a neutral zone between the Hungarians and Roumanians in Transylvania was referred to the supreme war council at Versailles.

"It was decided that the allies, as a result of the session of the Polish diet, at which the powers of the Polish ministers were confirmed and at which Ignace Jan Paderewski was acclaimed as head of the government, should recognize the Polish government.

Economic Plans Discussed.

"Conclusions reached by the commission formed to draw up a plan of procedure for disposing of economic questions were considered. It was decided to refer to the economic council appointed by the conference at the suggestion of President Wilson all economic measures of a transitory nature. Matters of a permanent nature will be examined by a special commission to be appointed by the conference at an early session.

"Five delegates of the powers have been intrusted with the task of drafting a plan of procedure for the new cabinet, a subcommittee being formed to make suggestions regarding its composition."

Would Enforce Labor Laws.

Methods of dealing with complaints against a state for failing to observe the provisions of the international labor conferences to which it is a party were considered by the commission on international labor legislation at its

Condition of Clemenceau Seems Worse

PARIS, Feb. 22.—Some apprehension was expressed in official circles tonight regarding Premier Clemenceau's condition, despite the assurance of his physicians that he is "making satisfactory progress."

The premier's coughing had become more frequent and had increased in intensity, it was learned. Tearing of the lung tissues by the assassin's bullet resulted in a slight hemorrhage Wednesday afternoon, a few hours after he was shot. He was forbidden to talk today. Although no fever had developed in the vicinity of the wound his temperature was slightly higher.

The official bulletin on the premier's condition issued this morning reads:

"The premier is a little more fatigued and will receive nobody today. He is absolutely forbidden to speak. Temperature 98.7 [Fahrenheit], pulse normal, 72."

Tonight's bulletin shows that his temperature had gone up to 99.7.

Can't Talk with Family.

The members of his family were permitted to see him, but not to talk with him. Foreign Minister Pichon was received by the premier at 11:50 o'clock and A. J. Balfour, British foreign secretary, at noon.

Clemenceau probably will not receive any visitors tomorrow, as his physicians declare he should remain another forty-eight hours without talking.

The premier's increased fatigue today was believed to have been the result of his exertions yesterday when he received and conversed with nearly forty visitors. He was fully dressed, ate heartily, and spent some time walking about his garden. Last night, however, he did not go to bed, but spent the night in an arm chair. His sleep was said to have been troubled.

Premier Refuses Morphine.

All the physicians agreed that the action of the premier's lungs should be reduced as much as possible, as movement causes the edges of the wound to rub against each other. The only way of effecting this was an injection of morphine, which no one cared to propose to the premier, foreseeing how he would receive the suggestion.

At last Dr. Laubry volunteered, says the Petit Journal. He appealed to the premier as a "brother doctor," but M. Clemenceau sprang up, seized the physician by the shoulders, and shouted: "What! What! Morphine! Morphine! You want to finish me? Are you in the pay of the bolsheviki?"

THINKS WILSON WILL BE NAMED FOR THIRD TERM

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Norman E. Mack of Buffalo, member of the Democratic national committee and chairman of the committee in the last Bryan campaign, says from present indications President Wilson will be renominated by the Democrats in 1920.

"From present indications it looks as if President Wilson will be a candidate to succeed himself in 1920," Mr. Mack said. "I do not know that the has any desire to continue. I do not wish to appear as booming him, for I am not doing so; I am merely discussing the trend of things political in the Democratic party as influenced by the war and reconstruction.

"Quite naturally the Democrats are on the defensive. Grievances accumulate. Mistakes are made. Doubtless the voters will say we have made many mistakes, and many voters who were with us in 1916 will be against us in 1920. If we cannot win with President Wilson I don't know now how we could win at all."

Death Claims Bride of Lieut. Carpenter

Rosamond Goodrich Carpenter, bride of Lieut. Kenneth Carpenter, who has been active in Chicago Red Cross work, is dead of influenza-pneumonia. She was the daughter of Albert W. Goodrich of 200 East Pearson street.

Following her graduation from the special nursing course given in St. Luke's hospital, Mrs. Carpenter, then Miss Rosamond Goodrich, entered active war service in Chicago and in December, 1917, visited Camp Grant to distribute the 150 helmets she had knitted for national army soldiers. She was married to Lieut. Carpenter on Feb. 5, 1918, on the eve of the officer's call to Texas, where he reported for flying duty. The couple returned from Dallas shortly before last Christmas, following Lieut. Carpenter's discharge from the service.

Funeral services will be held in St. James' Episcopal church at 11 a. m. Monday. Burial will be in Rosehill.

PAPERS TALK OF ENTRY BY ALLIED ARMY

Reds Grasp Bavaria and Soviet Forms in Munich.

BULLETIN.

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—(By the Associated Press.)—A message from Munich says evidence has been gathered by the soldiers and workmen's council that the assassination of Kurt Eisner was done in behalf of a secret organisation of officers and aristocrats.

The Majority Socialists, Independents, and Spartacans have formed a coalition government, which is headed by a central council of eleven. The soldiers,' workmen's, and peasants' soviet has been dissolved.

BULLETIN.

Berlin, Feb. 22.—(By the Associated Press.)—Bavaria last night was declared a soviet republic by the soldiers and workmen's council in Munich, the Vossische Zeitung today says.

BULLETIN.

MUNICH, Feb. 21.—(By the Associated Press.)—Count Arco-Valley, the young student who shot and killed Premier Eisner, was lynched by a crowd.

GENEVA, Feb. 22.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Vienna Fremdenbladt, displaying much anxiety, says that, owing to the menacing situation in Germany, allies "must hasten to arrange peace on moderate terms, to preserve calm and order in central Europe."

Other Austro-German newspapers ask whether the allied armies will be forced to intervene.

Fear Nation-Wide Revolt.

Further disorders, and even civil war, are feared, as the Munich population is greatly excited over the assassination of Kurt Eisner, who was generally loved and respected and considered the founder of the German revolution.

Revolutionary groups, according to advices from Munich, have occupied all the newspaper offices and the post and telegraph offices, and a counter revolution may be set afoot, not only in Bavaria, but throughout Germany, which is encouraged by Spartacans and bolshevists.

Lenine's Friend Leads.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 22.—A state of siege has been proclaimed in Munich, according to a dispatch from Berlin under date of Feb. 21, quoting advices from the Bavarian capital.

A committee of action has been formed from the three Socialist parties, including the communists and the executives of the workers, peasants, and soldiers' councils.

The leaders have proclaimed a "proletariat dictatorship." The bolshevik Lewin, a friend of Lenine and Karl Radek, is said to be a member of the executive council.

Call Three Day Strike.

The foregoing dispatches are in conflict with a telegram from

Munich received today by way of Berlin, which says the report of an outbreak of civil war there is unfounded.

A general strike has been proclaimed for three days, but the strikers "are behaving quietly." This dispatch says Kurt Eisner, the late premier, will be buried Wednesday.

Owing to sanguinary disturbances Hanau, Prussia, was occupied by government troops this morning, according to advices from Berlin. The government forces disarmed the Red soldiers and arrested their leaders.

A state of siege has been proclaimed at Augsburg, Bavaria, says a dispatch from Berlin. There was a great riot at Augsburg last evening. Cavalry and sailors repeatedly cleared the streets, firing volleys into the crowds.

Proof of German Trickery?

BERNE, Feb. 22.—Kurt Eisner's murder, it is said in allied circles here, gives justification for the belief held by those who know Germany that her democracy and republicanism are only a blind for the allies to extort favorable peace conditions from them. Once the conditions are settled Germany will throw democracy and republicanism to the winds, it is expected.

REVOLTS SPREAD FAR

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Germany was in the throes of another revolution tonight.

The Spartacans, unlike their recent unsuccessful revolt, which centered in Berlin, were concentrating their efforts in the industrial regions, particularly the Rhine and Ruhr districts. Sanguinary fighting was reported at several points, with the Spartacans apparently winning a majority of the battles.

The Bavarian government has been completely overthrown, according to dispatches from various sources. A soviet government was said to have been proclaimed in Munich by the workmen's and soldiers' executive council. The three Socialist parties formed a coalition to administer the "proletariat dictatorship."

"Death to Bourgeoise."

The shooting of nine government officials during a session of the Bavarian diet yesterday, which followed the assassination of Premier Eisner, apparently was the signal for the uprising in Munich. A few hours later the city was in the hands of the radicals. Government troops offered only a feeble resistance.

Business became paralyzed. Civilians began an exodus from the city. Mobs were parading the streets tonight shouting "Death to the bourgeoise!"

The demonstrations were described as identical with those of the first revolution.

Victims of Diet Tragedy.

The victims of the assassin in the diet chamber included:

Minister of the Interior Auer, Minister of War Rosshaupter, Minister of Justice Timm, Minister of Public Worship Hoffman, Minister of Communications Fraudendorfer; Minister of Social Affairs Unterlienter; Councilor of the War Ministry Garres; Under Secretary for War Jahreis, and Deputy Oesel.

Auer and Oesel were killed outright and Timm was said to have been fatally wounded. Rosshaupter was variously reported to have died of his wounds and to have been made prisoner by the Spartacans. The injuries of the others were said to have been serious.

It was reported that Deputy Autel, a Centrist, who had conducted a bitter campaign against Eisner in the newspapers, was shot by the premier's friends.

Gain in Rhine Cities.

The Spartacans were said to be gathering recruits rapidly in the Ruhr and Rhine regions. In some places they were suppressed by government troops, but new demonstrations would immediately break out at other points. They were said to be firmly established in Bottrup.

Although German government reports said that 700 Spartacans had been killed in fighting at Dorsten and Hervest, the radicals were understood to be holding out in those towns. New riots were reported in Hamburg, Gotha, and Stettin.

When government troops approached Wilhelmshaven, the Spartacans withdrew and gave up the city without a contest.

SIEGE IN BUDAPEST

PARIS, Feb. 22.—A state of siege has been proclaimed in Budapest, following a communist riot Thursday evening, according to a Zurich dispatch to the Matin today.

The insurgents are said to have stormed the offices of the Socialist newspaper Nepzava, occupied the principal railroad station, and the postoffice. Government troops recaptured the station.

A dispatch from Budapest today reported that a street battle between unemployed workers and the police, resulted in the death of four persons and the wounding of twenty-four.

EBERT FACTION TO FIGHT

WEIMAR, Feb. 21.—[Delayed.]—Chancellor Scheidemann, after stating that the assassination of Premier Eisner and Minister Auer left Munich in control of the Spartacans, today declared that relentless warfare will be waged against the radicals.

The government has been ordered to employ every force at its command to crush terrorism eveywhere, the chancellor said. The cabinet feels that the new revolution has actually begun and is determined though apprehensive.

"Robbers, murderers, and terrorists are menacing the safety of Germany and ridiculing in the eyes of the world the young republic, which trembles not from foreign but from intra-national dangers," said Scheidemann. "The government will use every force to crush the Spartacans. Government troops are going into the Rhineland, confident that they will soon be completely successful in suppressing lawlessness."

FIXING DAMAGE STAGGERING JOB; DELAYS PEACE

Reparation Is Now Chief Task Before Peace Congress.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, Feb. 21.—Reparation is the vital question which may prevent a preliminary peace with Germany at an early date. Realizing a return to safe and stable conditions of peace is necessary as soon as possible in order to stem the tide of social unrest and war weariness which is surging over the world, the peace commissions are bending every energy to reach an agreement regarding the amount of money which can be demanded from Germany and which Germany can pay.

All other questions, even the realignment of frontiers, can be disposed of quickly, it is believed, during the president's absence, so the enemy delegates can be called Parisward soon after Wilson arrives here.

The reparation problem does not form a deadlock—merely a stumbling block. The question resolves itself into this: How much can Germany pay?

Difficult to Fix Sum.

That question interlocks with the allies' trade relations after peace is signed, as the sum Germany must pay will be immeasurably greater than the billion wrung from France in 1871 and which the French paid almost overnight.

The French are working night and day preparing estimates of damages from cities, towns, villages, hamlets, and farms in the devastated region 400 miles long and anywhere from five to fifty miles deep. In many instances where communities were entirely wiped out by four years of bombardment the inhabitants have not returned and their losses can only be roughly estimated. In cases like the large cities of Ypres, La Bassee, Lens, Soissons, Reims, and Verdun, where practically everything is in ruins, it is a difficult task to form even the roughest approximate idea of the damage.

A delegation of distinguished American engineers inspected the devastated regions in order to formulate estimates of the damage wrought, then threw up their hands, declaring it is so enormous and formidable as to be practically incalculable, saying the peace conference had best accept the French figures.

The Belgians and Serbians are said practically to have completed the estimate of their claims for reparation, but the French and Polish claims are far from completed.

Damage to France.

The French, meanwhile, are trying to ascertain just what reparation means, according to Wilson's fourteen points. In certain quarters it is declared it entitles the allies to collect the entire cost of the war, as well as the military damage inflicted everywhere, including battlefields, air raided communities, marine losses, and the damage to Paris by the big Bertha.

Calmer judgment, however, points out such a titanic total could never be paid by Germany for eternity, although the justice in making the aggressive power which precipitated the war pay the bill is undisputed.

One hundred and twenty billion dollars has been suggested as the French claims for reparation alone, but these figures are merely approximate. Before presenting the staggering bill to Germany, the allied and associated powers must agree on the industrial and commercial terms of the peace treaty in order that they can prove to the enemy that Germany can pay the toll levied.

These subjects are under consideration by experts of the various commissions and subcommittees and the big ten are speeding up their work to the highest pitch.

Settling of Frontiers.

The frontiers, so far as Germany is concerned, are not so difficult, as the Polish claims offer the only serious obstacle, for the Germans undoubtedly will protest making the boundary along the Danzig-Vistula-Oder line, which the Poles demand.

The western front does not offer problems, although the Belgian claims to Malmedy and the French demands for the Sarre basin will be hotly disputed.

Two problems must be decided before the enemy is called to the preliminary peace tables.

First, will the Germans be called alone and first, without Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria, and Turkey?

Second, will the Germans be handed the peace pact and fountain pens and told "Sign here," or will they have a hearing and the right of discussion?

For expediency it is highly probable that peace will be signed by Germany alone at first, as the elimination of the chief enemy power and thus simplify the situation, permitting more rapid and easier progress in dealing with the lesser enemies. Austria-Hungary probably still will be in a "fluid condition" for a couple of months, hence making it difficult to deal with an unstable and disintegrating double empire.

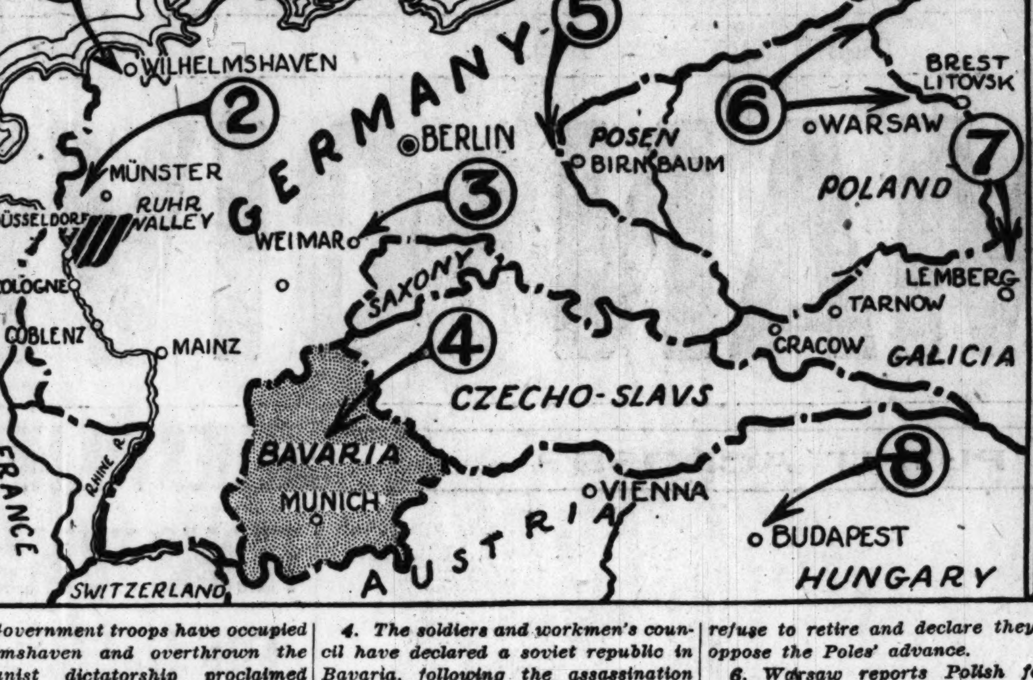
GERMAN REVOLT GROWS—FIGHT IN POLAND



1. Government troops have occupied Wilhelmshaven and overthrown the communist dictatorship proclaimed there by the radicals.

2. Reports from Ruhr district state that the Spartacan uprising is getting beyond the control of the government forces.

3. Chancellor Scheidemann at Weimar has taken a firm stand against Spartacan uprisings in various parts of country and announced the government forces will be used relentlessly against disorder.

4. The soldiers and workmen's council have declared a soviet republic in Bavaria, following the assassination of Kurt Eisner, premier, and Home Minister Auer, and the wounding of other members of the cabinet. The Spartacans are rioting and demanding vengeance for Eisner's death.

5. German troops defending the Posen front at Birnbaum against the Poles are defying Marshal Foch's orders relating to the boundary fixed by the new armistice terms. They refuse to retire and declare they will oppose the Poles' advance.

6. Warsaw reports Polish forces have driven back bolshevik forces in Lithuania and east of Brest-Litovsk.

7. Ukrainians are making heavy attack on Lemberg in effort to capture city from Poles before the arrival of allies' mission.

8. A communist revolt has broken out in Budapest. Heavy fighting has taken place between the rebels and government troops.

meeting yesterday. The official statement issued after the meeting follows:

"The twelfth meeting of the commission on international labor legislation was held this morning under the presidency of Samuel Gompers. Continuing examination of the British scheme, the commission discussed articles dealing with the procedure in regard to complaints lodged against a state for failure to carry out the provisions of the international labor conference to which it is a party."

Germans Protest Allied Policy.

BERNE, Feb. 22.—The national assembly, with the exception of the independent Socialists, yesterday passed the following resolution, according to a Weimar dispatch received here today:

"The German people, who laid down their arms only after acceptance of President Wilson's fourteen points, await a peace of right.

"The national assembly asks permission to use all means to defend the country against the bolsheviki.

"It protests against the entente's maintenance of the hunger blockade, detention of raw materials, and refusal to release German prisoners. Such things are driving the people to desperation. The assembly solemnly protests to the world."

PLAN BOUNDARY SCHEME

BY RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.

[Copyright: 1919.]

PARIS, Feb. 22.—In the realization that it will be practically impossible to harmonize all differences over boundaries within any reasonable time, the chief peace delegates have under consideration a proposal for a provisional boundary arrangement subject to future revision, and to be respected until revision is possible.

The definitions would be made originally by experts, who would then submit them through the peace conference to the interested nations. Should these nations be unable to agree, the supreme council would fix the boundaries and call upon the disputants to accept them temporarily. The temporary arrangements would be written into the general peace treaty.

One phase of this plan provides that all boundaries shall be delimited before an effort is made to adjust any particular boundary controversy, so every nation will see what it is proposed to give every other nation.

The theory is that after the provisional arrangements have been in force for a period long enough to test their practicability the nations will decide to accept them as permanent.

HOW LEAGUE WAS BORN

PARIS, Feb. 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—For the first time the veil which has concealed the inner workings of the commission of the peace conference which prepared the plan of the league of nations has been lifted. It is now possible to disclose at least some of the facts connected with the achievement by which nineteen men in thirty working hours wrought the plan.

The scene was in room 351 of the Hotel de Crillon, Col. House's workshop. Around a big red table sat the nineteen members of the commission and behind them were seated translators, secretaries, and experts.

In this room the commission met ten times in eleven days. The hours were irregular, as most of the commissioners were obliged frequently to interrupt the special work to attend meetings of other commissions. No time was set for the sessions or for the termination of the day's work and nobody looked at the clock.

At the outset the task was cut in half by dispensing with the tedious process of retranslation. Instead, interpreters sat close behind the commissioners, and in low tones translated the remarks of the speakers word by word.

Much time was also saved by preparatory work, each statesman coming to the conference with well formulated and definite ideas regarding the league of nations, as a result of many private conferences held from the time President Wilson landed in France.

The members met on the hour, greeting each other politely but shortly; took their documents out of their portfolios, and proceeded immediately with the next article.

Extreme simplicity prevailed. Diplomatic dress disappeared. Business suits were worn. There were no orations, no spinning out of technical points. Plain speaking prevailed. Stenographic reports were barred, to restrain oratory and to encourage the reticent.

President Wilson presided at all the meetings except one. When some of the members looked far into the future he brought them back to the thing in hand with the remark:

"Gentlemen, I have no doubt that the next generation will be made up of men as intelligent as you or I, and I think we can trust the league to manage its own affairs."

The first meeting, on Feb. 1, was very brief. The president spoke a few words and presented a draft of the plan, which the commissioners agreed to use as the basis of discussion. Day after day this was criticized and amplified, and on Feb. 12, at the eighth meeting, the first reading was completed.

Wilson Thanks Soldiers.

Though the propect emerged unchanged in principle, many amendments were pending. A drafting committee attended to this, and the American soldiers who set the type, corrected the proofs, and ran the press which turned out the final draft will treasure the letter of thanks which the president sent to them before he sailed.

The final meeting on Feb. 13 had a dramatic finish in its simplicity. The president was attending a meeting of the supreme council and Lord Robert Cecil presided over the commission. The remaining articles were passed upon. At 7:28 o'clock in the evening Lord Robert read the twenty-sixth and last article and quietly asked:

"Is there any objection to this article?"

He waited a moment and added:

"If not, it is adopted. Gentlemen, our work is done. The president of the United States will report our conclusions to the plenary session of the conference tomorrow."

DAVID JAYNE HILL DOUBTS WISDOM OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 22.—Continuation for the defense of world law and justice of the entente which has suppressed German imperialism was urged by David Jayne Hill, speaking here today before Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution, as an alternative to the proposed league of nations, which, he said, meant abandonment of the traditional policy of Washington.

"I would not be understood as offering offensive criticism of the plan," Mr. Hill said. "There are many admirable features in it; but in view of complications that I believe are certain, I would wish to qualify our participation in any compact by precisely the words that were employed in accepting The Hague convention in 1899 and again in 1907."

Mr. Hill, who is a member of the permanent administrative council of The Hague, quoted this restriction as saying that "nothing contained in this convention shall be so construed as to require the United States of America to depart from its traditional policy of not intruding upon, interfering with, or entangling itself in the political questions . . . of a foreign state."

"It is absurd to assume," Mr. Hill declared, "that because we desire peace we have a warrant for believing that national and racial motives no longer exist. For centuries compacts of peace have been made and broken, but the people have remained the same." Mr. Hill expressed the belief that George Washington would regard this "as a time for this nation to put its trust in itself, and not too much in others."

Eisner Knew That Death Would Follow His Expose

PARIS, Feb. 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—Deputy Jean Longuet, in his newspaper, Populaire, says that after the speech of Kurt Eisner, the late Bavarian premier, at the Socialist congress at Berne, he congratulated Eisner on the bravery he had shown. Eisner replied:

"Yes. Returning to Bavaria I shall be killed."

MAY SEND ARMY OF VOLUNTEERS AGAINST RUSSIA

Allies Seek a Solution After Failure of Conference.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, Feb. 22.—The Prinkipos meeting with the Russians may be considered definitely off. The peace commissions have not yet reached an agreement regarding the next step toward ending the conflict in Russia, but the subcommittees are working on the matter and the leading diplomats are giving the subject much attention, seeking a practical solution.

One result of an early preliminary peace with Germany—to be signed perhaps during May—may be that an international expeditionary force, including German troops, may be sent into Russia to round up the bolshevik leaders. Winston Churchill's plan for raising a volunteer allied army to go to Russia along the lines which Sazonov advocates has not been entirely rejected, but was merely shelved while other propositions are awaited.

France and Britain both realize that a tremendous outcry would go up now if it was announced that a certain number of troops—about 50,000 from each country—should be sent to Russia for an indefinite period. The people are sick of war and such action, beside menacing the discipline among the troops sent, might stir up bolshevism.

Refused to Send Americans.

For this reason the allies hope the United States would offer to send the entire contingent to Russia, but President Wilson absolutely refused this. However, it is felt that, once peace is signed with Germany and the world realizes that the state of war is ended it may be easier to arrange an expeditionary force in Russia.

Such action would end the warfare there and remove the menace of bolshevism spreading. Furthermore, it is realized that Germany undoubtedly would be willing and anxious to furnish her quota of troops toward the international force, reinforcing and aiding the Poles, who at present are the hardest pressed and most menaced. Such an operation would permit British and American troops to be sent to Russia via Dantzig, Murmansk and Archangel, marching toward the relief of Petrograd, while perhaps the French and Italian contingents would land on the Black sea, aiding the Siberians who, under Denikin, are reported to have reached the Caspian sea.

Germans May Give Help.

Thus it is not impossible that the Germans may be fighting, relatively speaking, shoulder to shoulder with the Americans, British, French, and Italians for a common cause within a short time as the sounder members of the present German government and all the possible successive governments fear the dissemination of bolshevism in Germany, realizing it would be the last straw and entirely disrupt the nation into separatist groups, whereas so far national unity has been urged everywhere, even by the Spartacans.

In fact, one of the strongest reasons that Germany will oppose against the allies' disarmament policy which will be submitted to her in the preliminary peace will be that she cannot demobilize the entire army for fear the bolsheviki will invade East Prussia. The German leaders believe that the Russian question approximates the old Mexican problem—that Lenine and Trotzky compare with Villa, and that once these ringleaders are killed or captured the entire fabric of bolshevism will collapse.

Crisis Due in Spring.

The crucial period for bolshevism is believed to be coming in April, when, it is figured, the present military stores, left by the Germans or seized from the allied shipments, will be exhausted and when the food supplies will be about used up.

POLISH ARMIES PUSH ON TOWARD ANCIENT BORDERS

Lenine Predicts Own Hanging for His 'Noble Work.'

WARSAW, Feb. 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Polish forces are steadily advancing along the railways, with Grodno, Slonim, Pinsk, and Lutsk as their temporary objectives. Their aim is to establish order and prepare the way for civil government, with the final intent of occupying Poland's historic frontiers. Thus far they have met with no determined resistance from the bolsheviki.

The Moscow government is bitter against the Poles, according to prisoners captured, since the failure of Poland to fall into the arms of the bolsheviki last December when an invasion of Poland was planned and was thwarted by the arrival of Ignace Jan Paderewski.

Firmer Resistance Indicated.

An indication that the Poles may meet with the firmest opposition later is seen in a general meeting of the Minsk soviets of Lithuania and those of White Russia to discuss measures of resistance. The meeting proclaimed the union of Lithuania and White Russia and also established a Polish central committee under the leadership of two Poles, Dolecki and Leszczynski.

The Tribuna attributes to Nikolai Lenine, the bolshevik premier, this statement:

"In 1919 I shall be hanged for my noble work and you will be hanged as hooligans."

The diet today adopted provisional statutes, including one fixing the salary of members at $2,000 a year, which they must accept with free railway transportation.

It is expected that the large estates belonging to the aristocracy, which often include from 50,000 to 100,000 acres, will be paid for and then divided so that no man will be allowed to own more than 1,000 acres.

Germans Defy Treaty Orders.

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—German troops defending the Posen front against the Poles at Birnbaum have addressed a communication to National Assemblyman Ohler, protesting against an official order to vacate territory held by them in accordance with the armistice conditions. The communication declares:

"We propose to remain in the positions held by us so long as we have a cartridge left and no Poles will succeed in invading our lines. The path to the point designated by Marshal Foch will lead over the bodies of thousands of German men. If Marshal Foch is determined to force matters to the uttermost extreme we will open the gates to bolshevism, which will overflow Europe."

Resume Lemberg Battle.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—The battle of Lemberg has been resumed, according to a Havas dispatch from Cracow, filed on Friday. The Ukrainians attacked violently. They are credited with the object of capturing the city before the arrival of the allies' mission.

'Not Yet,' 'Tiger' Tells Priest Offering Services

PARIS, Feb. 22.—The Eclair tells the story of how, at the moment of the attempt on the life of Premier Clemenceau, a Jesuit priest living close by happened to come to his house. He ran to the premier's assistance, helped him get out of his automobile, and said with emotion:

"Do you need my services, M. Premier?"

M. Clemenceau answered dryly: "No, thanks, sir, not yet."

Think Missing Yanks Dead.

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN NORTH RUSSIA, Feb. 20.—[Delayed.]—While vague reports have reached the American forces on the front, indicating that there perhaps may be a few American soldiers held captive at Vologda or Moscow, it appears that the majority of the thirty-five Americans, which is the total number listed as missing in action since the beginning of the campaign, must be counted as dead.

Some of these were wounded men who became lost in the woods, while others were members of small detachments which were surrounded and are believed to have died fighting.

Foe Takes No Prisoners.

One American captain who commanded the force operating near Shekursk said that the seventeen men who were missing after that attack were undoubtedly dead, as the bolsheviki apparently had conducted their campaign on the basis of making no prisoners.

Although the American casualties in the field during late December and in the month of January were heavier than those for all the other months combined, the total losses in killed, died of wounds or disease, or missing for the entire expedition up to today are only 192, of which number eight were officers. This is less than 4 per cent of the forces involved.

WILSON DUE AT BOSTON TONIGHT; TO LAND MONDAY

Presidential Party Leaves for the Capital at 4:30 P. M.

On board the U. S. S. George Washington, Feb. 22.—[By wireless to the Associated Press.]—The George Washington at noon today was only 500 miles from Boston, and making such good time that it probably will anchor some time Sunday night.

The presidential party will remain aboard, however, not landing until Monday after breakfast, and in time to get into the city about noon.

The president has not prepared his Boston speech in advance, and it seems assured that he will speak very briefly.

Celebration on Board.

Today was given over aboard ship to the celebration of Washington's birthday.

At noon a presidential salute of twenty-one guns was fired in honor of the first president, for which the president and all his party came on deck. They remained to witness the sailors' sports, of which there were many.

To Leave Same Day.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 22.—President Wilson who will deliver his first address on his return from France here Monday, will leave for Washington by special train in the afternoon.

A late message asked that the reception be made as brief and informal as possible.

At the request of the president Secretary Tumulty, who also came here today, arranged for an earlier meeting Monday than had been planned so that President Wilson's special train may leave at 4:30 p. m. As now proposed the meeting will start at 2:30 p. m.

Secretary Tumulty brought with him from Washington the engrossed copy of the $6,000,000,000 war revenue bill, which will be submitted to the president for signature when he reaches his hotel.

May Name Cabinet Member.

The president will have no other important subjects to dispose of while here, according to Secretary Tumulty, although the secretary said he could not say positively whether an announcement of the successor to Attorney General Gregory might be forthcoming.

With Mr. Tumulty, to receive the president, came Ray Baker, director of the mint at Washington; Congressman Charles C. Carlin of Virgina, former Congressman T. T. Ansberry of Ohio, and Dr. John P. Coughlin of Fall River, Democratic national committeeman for Massachusetts.

Guard Against Suffragists.

Prospects of suffragists interfering with President Wilson while here were very slight today, despite assurances of suffrage leaders, headed by Miss Alice Paul of Washington, that they are going to tell the president he should have remained in Washington and demanded certain Democratic senators vote for the suffrage amendment.

Drastic action by the police is threatened if any attempt at a demonstration is made by the militants. In spite of this, however, the suffragists are said to be planning a bonfire on Boston common, following the arrival of President Wilson, when speeches delivered by him will be burned.

Plans for Reception.

The George Washington will not dock and the president and party will be transferred to the revenue cutter Ossipee, on which he will be taken to Commonwealth pier.

Speeches of welcome will be delivered to the president, and as he steps upon the deck of the revenue cutter, the presidential pennant will be thrown to the breeze. On the way up the harbor, the Ossipee will be guarded by eight naval vessels.

Arriving at the pier, the president will be greeted by Mrs. Coolidge, Mrs. Peters and an executive committee. From the pier, the party will parade in automobiles through the downtown streets to the Copley Plaza hotel, where the president will remain until his speech at Mechanics' hall.

For his speech 75,000 applications for tickets of admission have been received by the mayor's office.

In addition to President and Mrs. Wilson, there are Rear Admiral Grayson, Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, and Mrs. Roosevelt; Mr. Spellacy, a state department representative, and his wife; David R. Francis, ambassador to Russia; Lieut. Corcoran, Col. McLean, Maj. Polk, Congressmen Helvering, Norton, and White; ten secret service men, three newspaper correspondents, and several secretaries, servants, and others in the party.

Admiral Sims to Come Home Late in March

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—Vice Admiral Sims, commanding American naval forces in European waters, has been authorized by Secretary Daniels to return to the United States in the latter part of March, provided nothing develops in the international situation which requires the officer's continued presence in Europe. 'KISSING SOUNDS LIKE BARRAGE' AS 332D HITS HOME

Blackhawks Get Warm Welcome Even in Snow.

Twelve hundred stalwart artillerymen of Chicago's Three Hundred and Thirty-second regiment came home yesterday to complete the demobilization movement of the famous Blackhawk gunner brigade.

With a rear guard of 500 Illinois and Wisconsin men, bound for Camp Grant in the same discharge contingent, they waded happily through sloppy downtown streets to receive the noisy welcome of noon hour thousands, enjoyed an old fashioned reunion at the First Regiment armory and a big cabaret luncheon at the Congress hotel.

Gunner's Tale of Welcome.

Here is the story of homecoming day told by Gunner McGuirk of Headquarters company to his "bunky" who remained behind as troop train guard:

"It's mighty tough, Jack, to get detailed as troop train guard on the day old Chicago unlimbers to welcome us Blackhawk roughnecks, but you would go A. W. O. L. at the port. Come on in and while we draw down on Camp Grant, I'll tell you all about it.

"You remember I told the top kicker in Cincinnati last night we'd never clear the crest through all that snowstorm with this four section troop train? You didn't know it because you were snorin' the S. S. Banner, but I was right. Before we pulled into Chicago this mornin' a breech block or something dropped from the lead gun and we stalled. The south side guys had a great time. Their folks came to the stalled train. It was about 10 o'clock when we wheeled into the old I. C. station and they put you on as car guard, wasn't it?

"Well, we got 'assembly' and rolled out to find the platform packed with folks and some way-up guys of Chicago wearing welcome home badges.

Doubled to Armory.

"It was late and we doubled right to the First Regiment armory. You know how big that joint is. You couldn't hardly get in for the crowd. They didn't read any orders there—just let everybody on the floor, and the kissing sounded like a box barrage. Serge Cameron Urqhart nearly answered sick call after his mother and the girls got through with him.

"My old grandmother came all the way from Oak Park in the slush and brought me some home made candy. Can you beat it?

"That armory was so full the band couldn't swing into position, and we got the 'assembly' again at 11:15 to march through the loop. They fell us in behind the Three Hundred and Thirty-second band, and, say, Sousa has nothing on that band. It's led by Loot Leo Sourby—you know the little Chicago composer who came to Camp Grant from a studio and was assigned to manicurin' mules in the stables. I was glad to see him get his commission. He earned it.

Up Michigan Avenue.

"We headed up the same old Michigan avenue. Everybody along the line had strung out the flag. It looked great, and we got real cheers from both flanks, where people jabbed each other with umberellas and waded hub deep in sloshy snow. They didn't care, and neither did we. The skipper gave us 'eyes right' at the Art institute, and we gave 'em the old fifteen millimeter shift. The committee and chief guys of the central department were on the stands to 'once-over' the bunch.

"We had to break through the crowd at Randolph street. We went up and down the loop until we picked up the sight on the Congress hotel. I worked there once. Well, these rough-necks jammed into that hotel and filled the gold room with water dripping from their bennies, and they set us down to some real grub.

"There wasn't a single sausage! I can't look a sausage in the muzzle, can you? Germany musta paid part of her indemnity in sausage the way they fed it to us for the last fourteen days.

"The chaplain, John Timothy Stone, you remember him in Camp Grant, gave us the glad hand at lunch. He said Washington's birthday was the right sector for homecoming and that if we followed where Gen. Washington led in civil life we'd get nothing but direct hits. 'Now, who's George Washington?' he says, and the whole outfit stood right up and told him and gave 'em a 'Kia-Kiak' yell to back it up.

"Two toppy looking girls sang then and the jackie band played and another girl whistled for us, but those cooties in B battery jimmed the range.

"'We want Jim Havens!'" they yelled, and beat on the table. Everybody started then and old Jim Havens had to take command. There's another Chicago guy who's right. They made him drum major from buck private. What would we have done without him and his songs? He sure kept us up in France.

"Jim sang 'Smiles' and knocked 'em clear off the limbers.

Buglers Beware.

"I'm goin' to kill a flock of buglers when I get time. One of 'em blew 'Assembly' again about 2:30. Capt. Montgomery took us down to the street and we did attention all the way to the Union station and here we are. Uncle Sam's Three Hundred and Thirty-second 'fatigue army' goin' home to stay.

"It's been a great life, eh, buddy, even if we didn't get into it. How long does it take a guy to get out of this man's army?"

An advance welcome was accorded the gunners by the Y. M. C. A. war service secretaries, who boarded the troop trains at Kankakee to distribute 500 copies of THE TRIBUNE and announce homecoming plans. In addition to distributing TRIBUNES, the secretaries took hundreds of telegrams, telephone and other messages for Chicago relatives and friends of the men.

Maj. Garrard Winston had command of the regiment, which is made up almost entirely of Chicago officers and men.

Other officers who came home with the unit include Capt. W. H. Jenkins, Capt. R. E. Bard, Capt. J. P. Montgomery, Capt. Louis Legner, regimental adjutant; Capt. William Seymour, Capt. Harry Hooper, Capt. J. Burns Allen, Lieut. Glen Carpenter, Lieut. Mike Mason of track team fame, and Lieut. Arthur Prussing.

MINUS MASCOT

French Orphan, Adopted by Blackhawk Sergeant, Held Up by U. S. Agents.

BLACKHAWK artillerymen came home yesterday without their little French orphan mascot, Noel Tesseyre. After "joining up" with the regiment in Bordeaux, where he was adopted by Sergt. Robert B. Burch, 729 South Cuyler avenue, Oak Park, and trooping with it through months of training, Noel said a brave au revoir to his big guardians at Newport News where port authorities held him temporarily awaiting permission from Washington for his official adoption by the Oak Park man.

"Where's our orphan boy?" demanded Mrs. Burch as her husband stepped from his troop train.

"Bring him out," ordered C. A. Woodworth, the artilleryman's uncle. "There's a regular home waiting for him in Oak Park."

The entire family pledged themselves to work for Noel's early release and to bring him directly to Chicago.

Russell Krebs and Elmer Peterson, two 16 year old warriors who ran away from Sparta to join the regiment in its overseas movement, marched with Battery A.

ALL CLASSES OF BRITISH INSIST ON THEIR LIQUOR

Science and Labor Are United in Demand for More Rum.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Demon rum, apparently about to become a pariah and an outcast in my native land, has many warm friends in these islands. They are more than friends; they are advocates and sturdy defenders. They include, I should guess, more than 90 per cent of the inhabitants of Great Britain. Included are men of title, men of science, statesmen, and labor leaders.

Almost daily in parliament up rises some member to demand how soon the government is going to release sufficient whisky to protect the British people from the ravages of the grip germ. With equal frequency the labor members inquire when the labor unrest will be allayed by the distribution of more and stronger beer.

How strong is the feeling is indicated by the fact that one of the contributing causes of the great Glasgow strike was the absolute refusal of the dock laborers to load cases of Scotch whisky on the steamships for export until they were certain that enough would be left behind in Scotland for their own comfort, convenience, and good health.

Medical Men Make Plea.

Nearly every day the columns of the Times and the other great London dailies contain letters from medical men—who sign their names and degrees—declaring that wine and whisky are the best preventives of grip and urging that steps be taken to increase the available supply.

Most of the Britishers with whom I have talked look on the American experiment in total prohibition with incredulity and indignation. They declare it an infringement of individual liberty to which they would never submit.

Personally, having just spent a winter in London with more than the usual amount of rain, fog, and damp cold and with the wartime rations of coal in force, I am in a better position to appreciate the British viewpoint than if I had remained in the banana belt along Lake Michigan.

Appeal Made in Commons.

It is unfair, however, to be playful on this subject. The British war cabinet is this very day considering the release of further supplies of spirits, in view of the influenza epidemic.

Col. Ashley is a gallant soldier and a member of parliament. Yesterday he stood in the house of commons and, addressing the minister of food, declared:

"Surely, if there are large stocks of whisky in bond, the government should allow it for those who need it during the influenza outbreak—while people are dying."

Loud cheers greeted him.

Maj. Newman, another member, inquired if the government was aware that whisky was being sold at Christie's as a valuable curiosity.

Appeal to War Board.

Mr. Roberts, the food controller, said that one could not fail to be in sympathy with the public demand for further supplies of whisky when the influenza was rampant. He had made representation to the war cabinet. It is constantly urged by labor and other organizations that the shortage of beer and spirits contributed to the unrest. More and better beer was promised.

An official of the British Medical association says: "We have had many complaints from the medical men that they cannot procure spirits for their influenza patients. Whether the association will take action is uncertain."

The London papers print cartoons showing the influenza victims down on their knees before a locked case containing several bottles of whisky, while a dilatory government holds the key out of their reach.

STARVATION IN VIENNA, FEAR; PLEA TO U. S.

Say Allies Must Bring Aid if the Population Is to Live.

BY LADISLOV CZAPSKI.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

VIENNA, Feb. 21, via Paris, Feb. 22.—So critical has Vienna's food situation become the last few days that unless there is a miracle or an organized effort on the part of the allied countries to rush to the rescue the Austrian metropolis will offer a world spectacle of 2,250,000 men, women, and children doomed to slow starvation. Such a grim fact burns itself into one's mind after days spent in visiting Vienna's hospitals, poorhouses, orphan asylums, and municipal kitchens.

My own impressions to this effect received vivid confirmation today from the first American woman to venture into Vienna for the purpose of lending a hand to the interallied food mission in its effort to save the city from disaster.

The woman is Mrs. Martin Egan of New York, whose husband is connected with J. P. Morgan & Co. Accompanied by two interpreters, Mrs. Egan made the rounds of the slum districts, public kitchens, and other institutions, where famine is causing the greatest ravages.

Cables for Help.

Today she was busy writing an urgent cable message to the United States for the biggest possible shipments of condensed milk to feed Vienna's starving children. Although she has seen much human distress in Italy and Jugo-Slavia since the allied victory and during the early part of the war, when she nursed in military hospitals in Serbia and Turkey, Mrs. Egan asserts "no large city in the world just now is suffering so intensely from sheer hunger as Vienna."

At this moment Vienna is cut off from food supplies in Hungary, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, and Italy. Big stocks of food said to be accumulating at Trieste do no good for Vienna. Railway communication has been broken as a result of the bitter conflicts between the Jugo-Slavs and the Germans on the one hand and the Italians and Jugo-Slavs on the other. Strikes by Italian railroad and dockhands at Trieste have further crippled the transportation planned by the interallied mission.

Prague Also Suffers.

Prague likewise is wanting food. Lieut. Col. William B. Casey, head of the American section of the interallied food mission in Vienna, has gone to Trieste to try to break the tieup. Lincoln Hutchinson of Berkeley, Cal., and Lieut. Robert Beifeld of Chicago are leaving for Prague to see why the Czechs are not getting the food for which the United States granted a special credit of $10,000,000.

LEAGUE AID, BUT NOT MILLENNIUM, CECIL ASSERTS

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Lord Robert Cecil, in an interview with Reuters' Limited before his return to Paris to attend the sessions of the peace conference, admitted that it was absurd to suggest that the mere signing of the league of nations covenant would then and there produce a millennium, but if given a fair chance, he said, it would certainly produce a better international atmosphere.

"If you can get into the heads of those who direct the affairs of nations that war is the worst possible way of settling international disputes, you will have made a great advance," he continued. "Once you have impressed the world with the fact that war is stupid—stupid and barbarous—you will have gone far to create the feeling of security that will render disarmament possible."

ARMY OPERATION IN MEXICO SAID TO BE POSSIBILITY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—In urging that congress give authority for the army to take options on materials which might be needed in an emergency, Maj. Gen. Black, chief of the engineers corps, disclosed today before the senate military affairs subcommittee that preparations for the possibility of extensive operations in Mexico were being made just prior to the declaration of war on Germany.

"You don't expect any trouble during the next fiscal year, do you?" asked Senator Hitchcock.

"I'm no prophet," replied the general, "but in case there were any, such a provision would save the country money."

FLYERS, LOST IN SKY STORM, LAND SAFELY IN LAKE

Abandon Plane, Wade to Land, and Complete Trip by Train.

Battling a raging blizzard 2,000 feet above Lake Michigan, unable to see more than 100 feet in any direction because of the blinding snow, fearful they would drift far out into the lake and be lost, their engine giving trouble and finally "going dead," two naval officers yesterday landed after a wild time in a sea plane. They are Ensign Ray P. Applegate, Great Lakes Naval Training station aviator, and Lieut. George M. Weichelt.

Their experience was the result of an attempt to carry a message from the War Mothers of Chicago to those of Milwaukee, opening the War Mothers' victory celebration there. After they had dropped into the lake and abandoned their plane they got the message through—by interurban train. They arrived in Milwaukee dripping wet.

Caused Worry at Station.

Also they caused much alarm as, for some time after the empty and abandoned flying machine had been found and towed into harbor at Great Lakes, the station had received no word from them. After they had delivered the message, Ensign Applegate reported his safe arrival.

Telling of his misadventures of the day, he said:

"We left Chicago in a heavy fog, and were about opposite Racine, as nearly as I could judge, when a blizzard hit us. I had been flying at an altitude of 2,000 feet, and we quickly became engulfed in the snow. We could not see 100 feet ahead.

Feared They Would Get Lost.

"Fearing I would lose all sense of direction and head out into the lake, I turned about and tried to follow the shore line south, flying as low as possible. About this time our engine commenced to give trouble. The oil feed stopped and the motor commenced to heat. Finally it stopped altogether and we were forced to land near the beach about a mile north of Waukegan."

Ensign Applegate modestly recounted the prominent facts in their experience, but it was apparent the two men had given up all hope of landing safely.

"Terre firma looked mighty good to me, and I have made some rough trips, too," said Ensign Applegate, grinning.

VICTORY SHORT TERM NOTE BILL IS INTRODUCED

House to Act Finally on Measure Early Next Week.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The bill authorizing the issuance of short term notes as a substitute for bonds in the forthcoming victory loan was introduced in the house today by Representative Kitchin after the ways and means committee had taken final action approving it.

The committee action was by practically a unanimous vote, but some of the members reserved the right to offer amendments on the floor. An effort will be made to pass the bill early next week.

Authority to Borrow.

The bill authorizes the president "to borrow from time to time on the credit of the United States for the purposes of this act, and to meet public expenditures authorized by law, not exceeding in the aggregate $7,000,000,000, and to issue therefor notes of the United States at not less than par in such forms and denominations, containing such terms and conditions, and at such rate or rates of interest as the secretary of the treasury may prescribe.

"Each series of notes so issued shall be payable at such time not less than one year nor more than five years from the date of its issue, as he may prescribe, and may be redeemable before maturity (at the option of the United States), in whole or in part, upon not more than one year's nor less than four months' notice and under such rules and regulations and during such period as he may prescribe."

Specifies Four Classes.

The language of the bill specifying the four classes of notes which may be issued is as follows:

"The notes herein authorized may be issued in any one or more of the following series as the secretary of the treasury may prescribe in connection with the issue thereof:

"1. Exempt, both as to principal and interest, from all taxation (except estate or inheritance taxes) now or hereafter imposed by the United States, any state, or any of the possessions of the United States, or by any local taxing authority.

Provides for Exceptions.

"2. Exempt, both as to principal and interest, from all taxation now or hereafter imposed by the United States, any state, or any of the possessions of the United States, or by any local taxing authority, except (a) estate or inheritance taxes, and (b) graduated additional income taxes, commonly known as surtaxes, and excess profits and war profits taxes, now or hereafter imposed by the United States, upon the income or profits of individuals, partnerships, associations, or corporations.

"3. Exempt, both as to principal and interest, as provided in paragraph 2, and with an additional exemption from the taxes referred to in clause b of such paragraph, of the interest on an amount of such notes the principal of which does not exceed $30,000 owned by any individual, partnership, association, or corporation.

The Fourth Specification.

"(4) Exempt, both as to principal and interest, from all taxation, now or hereafter imposed by the United States, any state, or any of the possessions of the United States, or by any local taxing authority, except (a) estate or inheritance taxes, and (b) any income, excess profits, and war profits taxes now or hereafter imposed by the United States upon the income or profits of individuals, partnerships, associations, or corporations."

Different rates of interest are to apply to the various classes in the discretion of the secretary of the treasury, those carrying the greatest exemptions having the lowest rate.

Plan for Conversion.

Additional provisions relating to tax exemptions on previous bond issues and conversion from one issue to another are contained in the bill.

The sinking fund is provided by direct appropriation from the treasury of 2½ per cent of the aggregate amount of Liberty bonds and notes that will be outstanding on July 1, 1920. The amount, the committee said, was expected to be $18,000,000,000, so that the first year the contribution to the fund would be $450,000,000, with that in the future dependent on the rapidity of retirement.

BRIEF BUT HEROIC

Such Was the Record of Chicago Flyer Who Won War Cross.

Lieut. Daniel W. Cassard

It's a simple and short record. Daniel W. Cassard; born in Chicago, March 11, 1894; graduated from Yale, 1916; entered the first officers' training camp at Fort Sheridan in the summer of 1917; was among the first to answer the government's call for volunteers for air service; was sent with seventeen picked American men to the Royal Flying Corps school at Toronto, Canada; arrived in France in June, 1918, where he was made a chasse pilot in the First pursuit group of the One Hundred and Forty-seventh United States aero squadron.

On July 16, 1918, he fell near Dormans, France, when, with two other airplanes, he entered into a running fight with twelve enemy machines. His body lies buried where it fell, on the edge of an orchard. At his head is a white cross. At his feet is an airplane signal, and on the tree that shades his grave are hung parts of his airplane.

Day before yesterday his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cassard of Grand Rapids, Mich., who are visiting Mrs. Cassard's sister, Mrs. Herbert Schwarz, received from the French government a Croix de Guerre with a palm (an added honor) and a citation which spoke of their son as an "incomparable chasse pilot, having always shown the highest courage and great audacity," etc. In the engagement which cost him his life he brought down two of his adversaries. He was his parents' only child.

Princeton's President Decorated by the French

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 22.—President John Grier Hibben of Princeton university was today decorated by the French government with the cross of the Legion of Honor. The decoration was presented in the name of France by Capt. Paul de Fourmestraux, an instructor at the university during the military training here.

BRITISH MINERS VOTE TO STRIKE; OTHERS MAY AID

Offer of Lloyd George Fails to Obtain an Agreement.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—British miners have voted overwhelmingly in favor of a nation-wide strike, according to official figures made public tonight.

The ballot, practically complete, showed 207,955 for and 51,644 against the strike. It was apportioned, by districts, as follows: Wales, 117,302 for, 38,261 against; Northumberland, 24,316 for, 6,909 against; Lancashire and Cheshire, 60,663 for, 5,219 against; Sterlingshire, 5,674 for, 1,255 against. Yorkshire also returned a majority in favor of the strike, but the actual figures were not announced.

Other Unions May Join.

Meantime the miners were contemplating the advisability of forming an alliance with the railway and transport workers for a simultaneous strike. A decision was to be reached at a meeting of officials of the three unions Tuesday.

The Evening Standard said today it had learned that it is probable the miners, at a conference Wednesday, will accept Premier Lloyd George's proposal to investigate conditions looking toward nationalization of the mines and that the strike would be held up until the special parliamentary commission which would conduct this investigation would report, probably March 31.

Robert Smillie, president of the Miners' federation, told the United Press today, however, that "Lloyd George's proposals thus far have not lessened the certainty of a miners' strike," and that "he has not showed any disposition to meet us even half way regarding wages and hours."

Want Mines Nationalized.

The premier, according to Smillie, has offered an advance in wages equivalent to the increased cost of living since 1914, "which is not satisfactory."

"He will not pledge nationalization of the mines," said Smillie, "merely promising to introduce a bill in parliament creating a committee to investigate the desirability of such a thing. He must make a definite pledge.

"He is noncommittal regarding payment of wages to jobless and demobilized miners. He said it is regarded as a national question, affecting not only miners, but all workers. We agree regarding the scope of the question, but demand that the government act."

Clash at Labor Conference.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—Serious friction is believed to be developing in the special labor commission between the advocates of the British and American labor plans, respectively, especially in regard to the question of the freedom of labor to seek employment in any country. Such freedom is directly opposed by the American labor representatives as conflicting with the proposition to restrict the immigration of foreign labor into America.

The American labor commissioners were in consultation with the American delegates to the peace conference today seeking advice and instructions.

Lotos Club to Give Dinner for French Commission

New York, Feb. 22.—The Lotos club will give a dinner on Saturday evening, March 1, to the members of the French high commission. The decoration of the legion of honor has recently been conferred on Frank A. Munsey, a member of the club, in recognition of his services to the allies during the war.

San Diego, Cal., Feb. 22.—A new aviation record is claimed here today by Col. Wallace G. Kilner, who flew here from Riverside, 115 miles, yesterday, in 38 minutes, with Maj. Albert Smith as passenger. The average rate of speed was 180 miles an hour. The flight was made with a 400 horsepower De Haviland plane.

HOUSE PASSES GUARANTY BILL FOR $2.26 WHEAT

Changes Date of Expiration of Price to June 1, 1920.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—The wheat guaranty bill, authorizing the president to use existing agencies or create new ones to buy wheat of the 1918 and 1919 crops at the government guaranteed price and dispose of it at market prices was passed today by the house by a vote of 277 to 15.

The bill provides for the carrying out of the government's guaranty of $2.26 for the 1919 wheat crop.

Carries Two Amendments.

Just before adjourning last night the house adopted amendments changing the date of expiration of the government's guaranty from Oct. 15, 1920, to June 1, 1920, and giving the president authority to prohibit wheat export should unfair tactics be used to force down the price.

The president is given blanket authority to provide all the machinery for handling the wheat from the time it is purchased from the farmer until sold to the consumer, with control over millers, wholesalers, jobbers, and bakers, importers, manufacturers, and exchanges.

Expect Senate Adoption.

Senators interested in the wheat guaranty said favorable action by the senate virtually was assured.

Though some members criticized the large appropriation involved, they said it was necessary to keep the government's promises made to stimulate wheat production, and that the measure will be put through without delay.

DR. MARY WALKER OF MALE ATTIRE DIES; WAR HERO

Earned Right to Dress Like Other Officers in the Army.

Watertown, N. Y., Feb. 22. — Dr. Mary E. Walker, aged 87 years, died at her home on Bunker hill, near Oswego, at 8 o'clock last night after a long illness. She was a surgeon in the civil war and a congressional medal of honor was awarded her. She gained fame by being the only woman allowed to appear in male attire by an act of congress.

Dr. Walker was injured in a fall on the capitol steps in Washington two years ago and returned home last spring considerably weakened in health. She declined to accept the proffered assistance of neighbors in caring for her house, but later yielded to the suggestion of the town authorities that she go to the United States general hospital at Fort Ontario, where she remained for several weeks and was apparently much improved in health. At her request she was permitted to leave the hospital and return home. She died in the house of a neighbor who had been caring for her.

Dressed in Male Attire.

Dr. Walker led a picturesque career. Following the civil war, her active life was spent chiefly in fighting for feminine dress reform and woman's right to political suffrage, in which movement she was a pioneer. She claimed to be the first American woman to attempt to cast a ballot at an election. She adopted male attire during the war and continued to wear it—a black frock coat, trousers, and a high silk hat, and she carried a cane.

Born in Oswego in 1832, Miss Walker was a graduate physician at the age of 23. She entered the union army as an assistant surgeon with the rank of lieutenant and dressed like her brother officers.

Advice to Suffragists.

"When I had on my overcoat," Dr. Walker declared, "I looked every inch the man, and I am sure I acted it."

Although a pioneer in the woman suffrage movement, Dr. Walker was out of sympathy with the methods of some of her sister workers.

"Women will get suffrage just as soon as they stop making fools of themselves," she declared recently with considerable vigor. "They've got to stop talking so much and do some work. They want to state what they want and stick to it."

Payment of Allotments Is Ordered Resumed

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—The senate tonight passed the house bill directing the war risk insurance bureau to resume payment of allotments to enlisted men of the army and navy, which it discontinued last July. Because of minor senate amendments the bill was sent to conference. The cases of more than 20,000 men in the service are affected by the measure.

WOODEN SHIPS FOR TRAINING.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—Two wooden ships, the Alabat and the Sturgeon Bay, allotted to the recruiting service of the shipping board, have arrived at Boston to be fitted out as training ships for merchant marine.

PRINCIPALS GIVE DEMONSTRATION FOR MORTENSON

School Head Outlines Progressive Plan of Education.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Peter A. Mortenson, superintendent of Chicago public schools, was given a demonstration of approval last evening at the banquet of the Chicago Principals' club at the Auditorium hotel.

When he was introduced by Chester C. Dodge, president of the club, the principals received him with waving of hands, shouts, and such continuous applause he was obliged to respond with bowing.

His address was on the subject, "The School of Tomorrow," in which he named as characteristics supervised recreation, physical training and sanitation, the use of English alone in public and parochial schools, military tactics for national defense, vocational guidance, and universal compulsory education.

Emphasizes the Physical.

"The school of tomorrow," he said, "will provide adequate physical training, involving early detection of defects, including abnormal teeth, defective nutrition and posture, and will apply corrective measures.

"It will establish recreational facilities and devise games for muscular development, as well as for the growth of attention, skill, accuracy, and standards of honor.

"Training in tactics in secondary and higher schools might well develop the material for army officers as a part of a great national insurance policy against war.

A National Asset.

"The school is undertaking a training in thrift and economy that must not stop with the passing of the need. Let this work go on as a national asset for economy.

"The school will provide more and better training in social, club, and civic activities.

"Compulsory education should be made universal. The counting of 75,000 illiterate young men in the first draft is a sad commentary on the efficiency of the American melting pot. Americanization has come to mean more. English must be the basic language of instruction in every school, public and parochial.

"The school of the future must provide for an adequate retiring pension for teachers."

Tribute to Mrs. Young.

Mrs. Mary C. C. Bradford, former president, now vice president of the National Education association, paid a tribute to the character and work of the late Mrs. Ella Flagg Young.

E. C. Hartwell, president of the department of superintendence of the N. E. A., illustrated by quotations from addresses by George Washington his interest in education.

The banquet was preliminary to the meeting of the department of superintendence of the N. E. A., which meets this week.

Deny Proposal Made U. S. to Share Debt of Allies

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—No proposal that the United States share the war expenses of the entente allies, or wipe out the debt of the allies to the United States, ever has been discussed among financial representatives of the nations, it was stated today by treasury officials. This statement was prompted by reports that French officials had agitated this course among peace conferees in Paris.

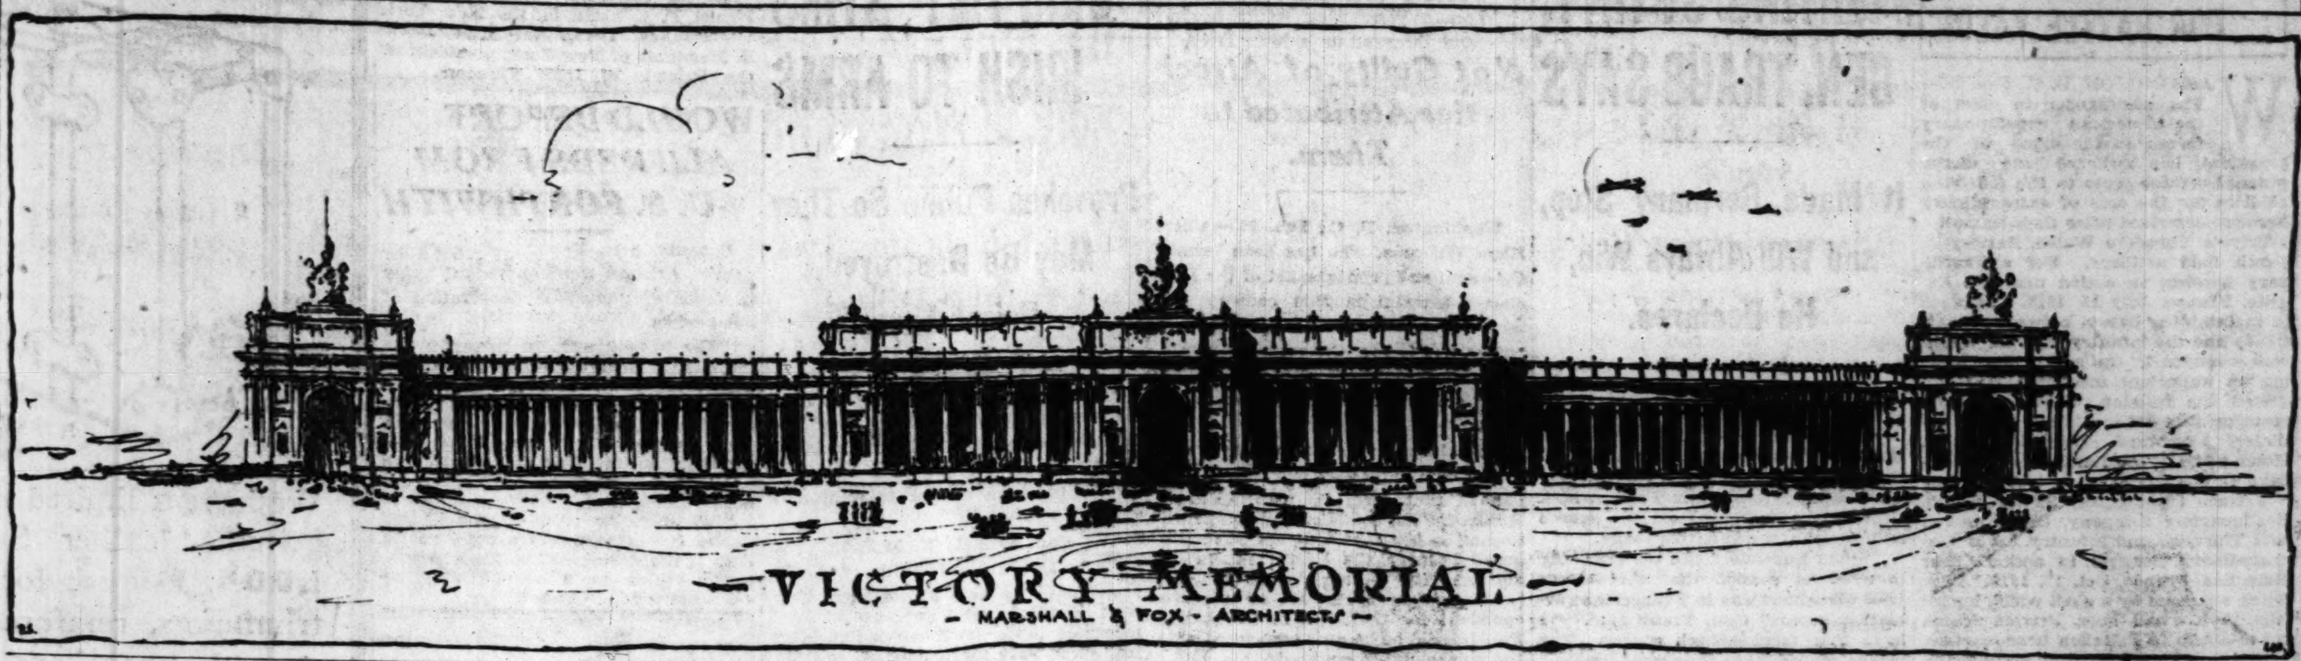
Colossal Monument, Suggested as Chicago's Tribute to Heroes of Great War



VAST STADIUM AS MEMORIAL TO HEROES PICTURED

Chicago Club Considers Capital for World's Food Center.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Not a big mute monument—but a live memorial, busy every day in the year, a structure of utility and beauty, surpassing in size anything on earth, which would be the capitol of a national chamber of agriculture, the symbol of the food center of the world, an institute of agricultural education, propaganda, and exhibition, at the same time a stadium for outdoor sports seating a minimum of 75,000, then covered with a movable roof for a convention hall accommodating 25,000, and would provide exhibition floor space at least ten times that of the Coliseum, arches of triumph—inside of which the Romans could easily have placed their arches—for the Rainbow, Blackhawk, and other divisions, statuary for other units, niches for aces and unmentioned doughboys, tablets and columns by the score, and sculpture on the roof to rival that on the Grand Palais in Paris—that is the sort of memorial plan presented yesterday noon at the Chicago club for those who took the risks, endured the hardships, and made the sacrifices in the war.

The man with the idea was Charles E. Fox of Marshall & Fox, architects. He explained the sketches he had made.

"A Wonderful Vision."

When he had finished Joseph H. Defrees referred to the idea as "a wonderful vision." W. W. Baird said it was "dazzling and entrancing." Harry Wheeler said: "It is a large vision, with a patriotic purpose and admirably set forth." Col. M. D. Munn of Minneapolis pleaded that it be made a Mississippi valley memorial, instead of a local one. He said in part:

"Chicago is not an accident. It is a necessity. Its location, its tributary territory, its unusual endowments, its natural resources will make it the greatest city of the Mississippi valley. That is the richest on earth, and Chicago, if it will take advantage of its opportunities as have all cities in the world that have been classed as great in history, will become the city of the world. Never before have the people realized that it is possible to have a world famine. Never before have we appreciated the value of food. Chicago will become great because she is located in the center of the food producing territory.

"I think that such a memorial as you propose is the most fitting that could be devised. But it should not be a city or a state memorial. It should be for the whole of the Mississippi valley. Other states and cities would be glad to be a part of such a memorial."

Governor Interested.

The plan was presented yesterday to Gov. Lowden by the representatives of the Illinois Manufacturers' association. The governor has indicated much interest in the sort of memorial proposed.

The meeting at the Chicago club appointed a committee on organization to push the scheme as folows: Joseph H. Defrees, J. K. Dering, and William E. Skinner.

Mr. Dering, who presided, explained how the plan was started. He said:

"Some time ago THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE asked for suggestions on a memorial and that same day I discussed the subject with the national dairymen, who were having a meeting. He presented our idea to THE TRIBUNE for a national chamber of agriculture. We have had other meetings, the last one of which was attended by Charles H. Wacker and a representative of the University of Illinois. It was then urged that we get our plan on paper. Knowing that Mr. Fox was still a dollar a year man, I prevailed upon him to make some sketches of the structure."

Architect Explains.

Mr. Fox explained the plan. In the center is a large structure shaped like a race track, the floor of which is to be twenty-four feet below the ground level. It rises up on all sides as a stadium to a height above the ground level of eighty feet. Around this amphitheater are to be seats for 75,000 to 100,000. In the arena below is space for baseball, football, dairy show, live stock show, and other large exhibitions. The floor as sketched is to be 345x650 feet.

On each side of this enormous stadium are to be two large buildings. On those are to be pylons supporting a movable roof for use over a large part of the stadium, which can be heated.

These buildings on the side are to have a larger floor area than the Coliseum and to be in two stories. The ceilings in each will be 100 feet high.

At each end of the stadium are to be the arches of triumph, towering in the air 150 feet. Taking all of the floor space available for exhibition purposes, which is to be on one level, Mr. Fox reckons on having 670,000 square feet, in addition to 200,000 in the basement for storage and packing purposes.

Comparative Sizes.

To give the layman an idea of this size, the International amphitheater at the stockyards has about 75,000 square feet, the Coliseum about 60,000, the First regiment armory 23,000, and the Medinah temple seats about 4,500 and has in addition about 30,000 square feet of exhibition space.

Mr. Fox estimates that with cement and stucco the structure will cost about $5,000,000, with Bedford stone about $7,000,000, with domestic marble $8,750,000, and with granite $10,000,000.

The question of financing was discussed at some length, but it seemed to be the concensus that the problem "dwindles down to one of work."

Those who spoke, other than those heretofore mentioned, were Emil Wetten, J. A. Walker, and former Judge Judson F. Going.

Chicagoan Leads Red Cross Mission to Aid Roumania

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—[Delayed.]—The American Red Cross mission to Roumania, headed by Col. H. Gideon Wells of Chicago, and consisting of forty-nine members, left here today for Constanza with 4,000 tons of relief supplies. The suplies will supplement three boatloads of flour already sent to Roumania by the American food administration. The American Red Cross has 10,000 tons of additional foodstuffs, medicines, and clothing on the way.

TROOPS ABROAD WILL INSIST ON GOLD CHEVRONS

Claim That Service Gives the Right to Wear Them.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, Feb. 22.—Within the next few days the senators and representatives from all the states may expect an avalanche of cablegrams from France, registering the widespread popular protest of the American expeditionary force against the proposed legislation depriving the overseas forces of the gold service chevrons.

In plain, every day language, the army is angry about this—and, like Ring Lardner's prairie flower—it is growing wilder every hour.

The officers and men of the American expeditionary force contend—and they point out their contentions with many examples—that the noncrossers got the biggest share of promotions.

The proposed elimination of the service chevrons revives the entire promotion discussion, making it possible for many of the doughboys to point out that the great majority of the enlisted men here received no promotion at all and assert the same is true in the case of a number of officers.

Late Comers Get Jobs.

Another angle entering into the situation concerns a considerable number of cases in which officers who received promotions in the United States came to France at the last moment and were used to fill the vacancies existing in the combat divisions, thus depriving the men of those divisions of the promotion for which they had been recommended. The American soldier in France observes that he has heard no howl from congress about this alleged discrimination.

The American expeditionary force prefers to consider the entire matter from the standpoint of fairness. What could be found more fair or more democratic, they ask, than a little mark worn on the sleeve by all, from general to private, to indicate their common service under conditions which could have meant wounds or death for all and which did so for many?

In the estimation of the American expeditionary force, the service of the men who stayed at home could not be better expressed than by silver chevrons, and that of those who went abroad by a gold one.

Plan Post-War Organization.

The inclination toward post-war organization among the American expeditionary force is extending itself to include all those who wore the uniform at home and who in reality were reinforcements for their comrades who wore it in foreign fields. The organization spirit is developing in some instances along the lines of military units, such as the corps, division or regiment, but there is also an inclination toward provincial organizations based on the native states and localities.

The Paris edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is receiving frequent letters from various soldiers and officers requesting the publication of prepared invitations for the soldiers of certain states to correspond with certain officers for the proposed organization of the members of the American expeditionary force from such state.

U. S. TO ENFORCE AIGRETTE LAW.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 22.—B. J. Shaver, United States game warden, is in Fort Wayne with a view of seeking if the law of 1918 prohibiting the wearing or possession of aigrettes is being violated. Mr. Shaver stated that it is the aim of the government to enforce the law to the letter. The law provides a maximum penalty of $500 fine and six months' imprisonment.

BAKERS DEMAND AN 8-HOUR DAY; STRIKE POSSIBLE

Chicago may be confronted with a bakers' strike within two months unless employers agree to an eight hour day and other demands. Union and nonunion bakery employés met yesterday at Hod Carriers' hall.

President John Fitzpatrick of the Chicago Federation of Labor urged all nonunion workers to become affiliated with organized labor at once. As soon as the bakers' union is strengthened their demands will be presented to employers, officials stated.

That the adoption of the eight hour day and observance of legal holidays throughout the state would provide for the 75,000 now unemployed, was the declaration of President Fitzpatrick.

"If all branches of organized labor unite in this fight the returning soldiers, sailors, and other unemployed will be cared for," he said.

Daylight work is another point sought by the bakers.

The present wage scale for journeymen bakers is between $28 and $30. An increase to $35 to $40 is sought.

KEEP U. S. FLAG ON EVERY SEA, CHICAGO URGES

E. N. Hurley Talks of Shipping Plans at Meeting Here.

Edward N. Hurley, head of the United States Emergency Fleet corporation, met members of the Illinois Manufacturers' association in the Hotel La Salle yesterday to discuss plans for operating the new merchant marine and to furnish tonnage to keep the ships running.

A committee is to be appointed by the association for the purpose of cooperating with the business interests and farmers of the middle west and obtaining views of leaders in various industries.

This was the first conference which Mr. Hurley has attended since his return from abroad. Next Tuesday he is to meet members of the New York Chamber of Commerce and the National Foreign Trade council. Thursday, in, Washington, he will confer with the American Bankers' association.

To Establish World Agencies.

Later, it is expected, the Emergency Fleet corporation will establish agencies in all parts of the world. An office has been opened in Paris and another will soon be opened in London.

"Now that the war is over it is likely that we will have a surplus of ships," Mr. Hurley said, after the meeting. "We are anxious to supply cargoes for these ships and to arrange matters so that the country as a whole will be benefited.

"All who were at the meeting urged as a first principle that our flag must fly over American ships in every sea. I think we will have a surplus of tonnage until the allies are able to reorganize their industries and resume shipments.

"The allies accumulated large amounts of raw materials for the manufacture of munitions and are now diverting it to commercial purposes. This material was bought at high prices. When their manufactures are again restored they will require a large amount of tonnage.

Seek Permanent Policy.

"Our ships are now hauling foreign products to points on the Adriatic, to Roumania, and elsewhere. We have had nearly 100 ships hauling foodstuffs to France and the devastated districts.

"We will endeavor at future hearings to determine upon a permanent policy regarding our merchant marine, to decide whether government ownership, coöperation, or private ownership would be best. I am confident the problem will be worked out in a satisfactory manner."

$400,000 GIVEN ANONYMOUSLY TO JOHNS HOPKINS

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 22.—Secretary of War Baker and Dr. George E. Vincent, president of the Rockefeller foundation, were the guests of honor at the commemoration day exercises of Johns Hopkins university today. Dr. William Welch announced that a sum approximating $400,000 had been given for the erection of a building at the Johns Hopkins hospital to serve as a woman's clinic. The gift was an anonymous one.

Another important anonuncement concerned the act of Sir Wiliam and Lady Osler in making provision for a memorial at Hopkins for their son, Revere, who lost his life in the war. The Revere Osler memorial will be the "Tudor and Stuart" club, to be composed of members of the university and friends of the donor. It will be devoted to good fellowship and the cultivation of good taste for literature. It will have its own library and its own endowment, made possible by Sir William and Lady Osler.

Dr. Welch referred with gratification to other gifts, aggregating a considerable sum, the university has recently received.

SOLDIER, CITIZEN, HONOR MEMORY OF WASHINGTON

With the steady tread of Blackhawks back from France, with patriotic oratory, with many dances and a few costume balls, Chicago yesterday celebrated the one hundred and eighty-seventh anniversary of the birth of Washington. Many business houses were closed, all the banks, all the brokerage houses, and practically all offices.

Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, commander of the Central department, and Capt. Frederick B. Bassett, commandant at Great Lakes, were the chief speakers at the Casino club. Gen. Wood spoke later to the West End Women's club in the La Salle hotel. The Rev. John Timothy Stone, who earlier appeared at the Union League club celebration, and Lieut. Albert Bissel also spoke.

The Hamilton club held a colonial costume ball. The Spanish and American society gave a dance.

A colonial ball was held at the Hotel Morrison by the Loyal Order of Moose.

The Arts club gave the first of a series of programs. The Saddle and Cycle club celebrated with a "Birthington's Washday" party. Capt. Reed Landis spoke before the Chicago chapter, D. A. R. The Women's Athletic club held a ball last night in the gold room at the Congress hotel.

Again Postpone Date of Clayton Anti-Trust Act

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—A joint resolution by Senator Kellogg of Minnesota, extending again for two years the effective date of section 10 of the Clayton anti-trust act prohibiting carriers from making contracts with corporations with which their directorates interlock, was adopted by the senate today without debate. This date has been postponed several times since the Clayton law was enacted.

DANCE IN SHERMAN PARK.

An informal dance will be given next Thursday night at the Sherman Park clubhouse, Fifty-second street and Racine avenue, by the fathers and mothers of boys in Battery C. "Reilly's bucks."

SHERMAN STIRS UP SENATE BY ATTACK ON TAFT

Quotes Illinoisan's Letter Rapping Ex-President and Peace League.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Senator Sherman of Illinois paid his respects to former President Taft in the senate today by having read a letter from Richard Ashkum, "a farmer and brush lawyer" of Swan Creek, Ill. In it Mr. Ashkum declared "about all a fellow need to do to get right is to find out what Taft is doing and then hit the trail the other way," and warned the Republicans they surely would go into the ditch again if they followed the ex-president in his advocacy of the league of nations.

Senator Sherman told the senate that Mr. Ashkum expressed his sentiments exactly. The letter stirred up a lively row. Senator Ashurst, Democrat, of Arizona, rose to the defense of Mr. Taft. He declared Senator Sherman's action in having the letter read was "undignified," and predicted Senator Sherman would be ashamed of it in later years.

Sherman Raps Taft.

Thereupon Senator Sherman took the floor and elaborated the views of Mr. Taft set forth in the letter. He could readily understand, he said, why the Democrats were so eager to defend Mr. Taft. He would feel the same way, he said, if he were a Democrat. The Democrats, he explained, ought to be grateful for the benefits they received from Mr. Taft's mistakes.

"Upon the whole," Senator Sherman continued, "I indorse the sentiments in the letter from my constituent. However it may arouse the indignation of the certain senators, I regard the conduct of the ex-president in its entirety as not only undignified, but as grossly partisan and unfair.

"I regard his conduct as meriting the homely observation conveyed in the letter from my constituent."

At this juncture Senator Pittman of Nevada raised the point of order against Senator Sherman's remarks. The vice president sustained the point, thus bringing the discussion to a close.

Maine Republican Raps Sherman.

Bangor, Me., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Speaking before a large gathering of the Washington club this afternoon, several prominent state Republicans bitterly scored their party leaders at Washington for activities which they termed as decidedly injurious to the welfare of the country and to the Republican party as a whole.

After referring to the refusal to accept the White House dinner invitation which he stated was an act that many a good Republican deplored, Stanley B. Bisbee of Runford, in Oxford county bitterly censured Senator Sherman of Illinois for the resolution he introduced designed to prevent President Wilson from discussing the league of nations policy until he had first discussed it with the foreign relation committee.

10,000 SOLDIERS REACH NEW YORK AFTER HARD TRIP

J. T. McCutcheon Among the Civilians Aboard Transports.

BY C. V. JULIAN.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Ten thousand fighting Yankees celebrated Washington's birthday by returning to the homeland of democracy triumphant in the knowledge that they had successfully preserved the ideal of the man whose birth the nation celebrated. And never were 10,000 men so glad to see the shores of their native land, for they had been storm-tossed until most any kind of land was a welcome sight.

Three of the big vessels were overdue. The fourth, the Pueblo, was not expected to make port until tomorrow, but preserved its reputation of running on schedule by sailing into port this afternoon. The Illinois casual company, which was supposed to be aboard her, had not embarked, it was learned on her arrival. The one Chicago civilian passenger was John T. McCutcheon, cartoonist for THE TRIBUNE.

Large holiday crowds gathered in the streets outside the piers to greet the soldiers and, while cheers of happy doughboys were ringing through the yards, a little tragedy was being enacted in a store across the street.

Her Romance Shattered.

Miss Isabelle Nixon of New York had gone to Hoboken to greet her fiancé, Sergt. James E. Fagan of Brooklyn, who was coming on the Manchuria. Hundreds of soldiers passed by her, but she failed to see the doughboy she waited for. She heard some one say that there had been an epidemic of influenza on the transport and learned that she might get news by phoning to the vessel. As she waited in a store to use the phone a newspaper reporter was talking to his paper. The door of the booth was open.

"Four men died from influenza on the Manchuria," the reporter was saying. "They were Sergt. James Fagan of Brooklyn——"

He phoned in the rest of his story after he had called a doctor to attend Miss Nixon.

In all there had been 168 cases of influenza and twenty-four of pneumonia among the 4,447 officers and men who returned on the Manchuria.

Wears Church War Cross.

Capt. George T. McCarthy, rector of Ascension church at Harvey for twelve years, came back wearing the church war cross, a recognition of bravery granted only to chaplains. It was conferred upon him by Maj. Brent, senior chaplain of the A. E. F., who in private life is Bishop Brent of the Episcopal church.

Capt. McCarthy had been gassed once and wounded once. He was given the church war cross for going into No Man's land in daylight to dress the wounds of men who fell.

"The Yankee doughboys have wonderful spirits and as a whole they are a fine, clean lot of men," said Capt. McCarthy. "They swear an awful lot sometimes, but I never paid much attention to it because it was just their way of working off steam. And they were very religious at times—just before they went into battle."

On Nov. 21 in the village of Gorsey in Lorraine, Capt. McCarthy and some army men found 200 children and 150 old women near death from starvation. Germans had stripped the village clean of food. Yankee canned goods saved their lives.

The hospital classification camp at St. Aignan, which returning soldiers nicknamed "St. Agony," was defended to a certain extent by Lieut. W. C. Schiele of Lombard, Ill., who in 1907 was a member of the University of Chicago track team. Lieut. Schiele is a member of the medical corps and was stationed at St. Aignan.

"It is true that there is no flooring in the tents," he said, "and that there is a great deal of mud there. But there is mud everywhere in France."

The lieutenant denied men stood in line for hours to get "chow," but doughboys on the same ship insisted that they did, and added protests regarding St. Aignan.

WOUNDED CHICAGO MEN WIN CROSSES FOR BATTLE VALOR

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 22.—The commander in chief of the American expeditionary forces, in the name of the president, has awarded the distinguished service cross to the following soldiers for the acts of extraordinary heroism described after their names:

Private Theodore Walsh, Battery A, Tenth field artillery. For extraordinary heroism in action near St. Eugene, France, July 15, 1918. Engaged in maintaining liaison between the artillery and the infantry, Private Walsh was wounded in the arm while carrying an important message. He completed his mission, however, before securing first aid treatment and immediately afterward returned to duty. Home address, 530 Laramie street, Chicago.

Private [first class] Sidney Hatch, headquarters company, One Hundred and Thirty-second infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Brieulles, France, Oct. 11, 1918. After being wounded by a shell which buried him in a small hole, Private Hatch made a trip to battalion headquarters, carrying a message from his platoon, and, after returning with an answer, assisted in carrying ammunition until the sergeant discovered that he had been wounded and sent him to the aid station. Home address, River Forest, Ill.

TRUST AMERICAN FIGHTING SPIRIT, GEN. TRAUB SAYS

It Made Germany Stop, and Will Always Win, He Declares.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Germany realized she was beaten when she learned there were 2,000,000 American soldiers in France, Maj. Gen. Peter E. Traub told the senate military affairs committee today.

"When Ludendorf told the reichstag in a secret session that there were 2,000,000 Americans in France the revolution began," Gen. Traub said. "I have that from a high source. The people realized that they were beaten."

Gen. Traub further declared that during the battle of the Argonne a German officer had been captured, and upon his person was found a document from a high German authority stating:

"If all of the American troops have the same fighting qualities that those we have met have had, the German cause is lost."

True American Spirit Won.

"It was American soldiers fighting with the rifle and the bayonet in open—the American fashion—that won for us," Gen. Traub continued. "I tell you, gentlemen, that those men were wonderful, and as long as we have got the men in America that we have today we needn't fear any power or any combination of powers."

Gen. Traub again appeared before the committee to refute charges made by Gov. Henry J. Allen of Kansas that American troops were killed by their own artillery fire in the Argonne forest battle, and that the lack of artillery and aircraft cost the Americans heavily.

Three Wounded by Short Fire.

"But six shells fell among ourselves from our own artillery," Gen. Traub said. "This was stopped as soon as we could send a message back 300 yards to the telephone exchange to notify the batteries to lengthen their range. The total casualties caused by these six shells were three wounded."

With regard to the scarcity of aircraft, Gen. Traub declared it was an impossibility to maintain supremacy of the air on all sectors at all times.

"Control of the air is a difficult proposition," the general said. "It was constantly switching; now we would have it, and now the boche would have it. There isn't a time when a single plane can't dart through the lines, and when it does why, of course, the men are strafed, and they always look around and say: 'Where the deuce are our planes?' You can't have control of the air everywhere at the same time."

"But we might have had control of the air everywhere, if we had as many planes as we had planned to have?" queried Senator Sutherland of West Virginia.

"Perhaps," answered the general, "but you must remember the whole western front was aflame. There were five different battles. In my estimation it would have taken 50,000 planes to have kept control."

Quota of Artillery, Horses.

Questioned as to the artillery which the Thirty-fifth division was supplied with, Gen. Traub said that all of the complement of artillery was supplied when the division went into action, despite Gov. Allen's charge.

"We had forty-eight 75s, twenty-four 155s, and thirteen French 75s, and all of the divisional and corps artillery needed," he said.

BOLSHEVIKI NOT BAD AS PAINTED, WITNESS SAYS

Not Guilty of Atrocities Attributed to Them.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—Albert Rhys Williams, who has been termed the agent and propagandist of the Russian bolsheviki in this country and who described himself as a lecturer, writer, and former Congregational minister, appeared today before the senate committee investigating lawless propaganda.

He said he returned to America to set up for the bolsheviki a bureau similar to that formerly maintained in Russia by the committee on public information, but that the plan was abandoned because the United States did not recognize the soviets.

After going to Russia as a correspondent for the New York Evening Post he said he became associated with the bolshevik government.

What Bolshevism Means.

The witness said Russians did not look with favor upon conditions in the United States or on what they termed the "bitter class war" here.

Responding to a question by Senator Overman, Williams said the word bolshevik actually meant "the shortest cut to socialism." He declared stories of terrorism in Russia were exaggerated, and, describing what led to the bolshevik success, said when conditions became intolerable under Kerensky the people determined to take care of things themselves. He asserted that not more than eighteen persons were killed in the seizure of the government by the bolsheviki and denied the truth of stories of the "rape of the women's battalion."

Says Stories Are Untrue.

The witness said if he believed all the terrible things that had been said about the bolsheviki during this hearing he would favor hanging them all, but that he knew many of the stories were untrue and simply were rumors which had no foundation in fact.

BODY OF SLAIN NUN IS FOUND IN MICHIGAN

Traverse City, Mich., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The body of Sister Mary Johns, a nun, who mysteriously disappeared from Isadore in 1907, near this city, is reported to have been discovered in the basement of the Catholic church in that village. The priest who was in charge of the church at the time left the place soon after the sister's disappearance. A search for him has been started. That Sister Mary was murdered is the belief of officials of Leelanau county who are conducting the investigation.

A short time ago a young woman of the community became entangled with a man of that vicinity. When she threatened to reveal this intimacy she was warned that if she did so she would be placed alongside Sister Mary, "under the church."

Undaunted, she told her story and the investigation resulted, according to officers. It was then learned, the authorities stated, that a campaign was recently launched to rebuild the church basement, but that before the work was started an anonymous letter reached the church officials that they should first exhume the body of Sister Mary and rebury it in the cemetery.

According to an affidavit held by officers from one man who helped exhume the body this action was to have been kept secret and but for his story the body of Sister Mary would never have been discovered.

ASSERTS BRITAIN CRAFTILY STIRS IRISH TO ARMS

Provokes Public So They May Be Destroyed, Priest Says.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 22.—"The British government means to provoke the Irish people to armed resentment; it will have an excuse to annihilate them."

The Rev. Francis X. McCabe, president of De Paul university, made the statement in a fiery attack upon England, amid the wild applause of 5,000 delegates to the Irish convention opening here today for a two day session.

"The time to plead is gone forever," declared Dr. McCabe. "We want promises of Irish freedom fulfilled. We demand that the military forces be withdrawn from Ireland so that the strain of the present may be taken away.

Must Keep Faith with Dead.

"Self-determination for small nations, promised to the parents who gave up their sons in the war, must be applied to Ireland. We must not ask for the fulfillment of this promise; we must demand it.

"With all due respect to the fighting qualities of other nations, America won the war and now we have a right to demand that president and congress keep faith with those who died."

Appeals for Ireland.

Eloquent appeals for the freedom of Ireland and bitter arraignment of England marked the opening session.

The convention, which is being held under the auspices of the Friends of Irish Freedom, sent a cablegram to Cardinal Mercier of Belgium, thanking him for his contribution to the cause of world freedom, and another to Edward de Valera of the provincial government of Ireland, explaining the purposes of the meeting, which was called to demand for Ireland the right of self-determination.

All the speakers, including Justice Daniel F. Cohalan of the New York Supreme court, the Very Rev. Peter E. Magennis of New York, president of the Friends of Irish Freedom.

WOULD DEPORT ALL REDS FROM U. S. FORTHWITH

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 22.—Gov. Campbell of Arizona went on record today in favor of immediate deportation of bolshevists.

"The surest way to preserve the republic against those disciples of destruction who seek to overthrow it and to overturn our institutions is to send them forthwith back to lands from where they came," he telegraphed, in accepting appointment on a governors' committee to stamp out bolshevism.

"We have no room in the United States for those who are not loyal in both thought and deed to the great republic which he whose birthday we celebrate today founded."

AGED ESCORT OF GIRL WAYLAID BY 6 AT LOOP CAFE

Regular Drama Stuff Is in Scene at De Jonghe Restaurant.

Out in the streets the snow whirls. But in De Jonghe's restaurant at 12 East Monroe street, it was peaceful and warm and quiet, for it was not yet 10 o'clock in the evening last Friday. The scene in the restaurant was the usual one of the early evening, a few tête-à-têtes, here and there a lone diner, waiters lolling about.

Gang of Six in Waiting.

At one table a portly man of 50 or thereabouts—a man with thin gray hair—arose. His companion, a young woman of 22, sipped her last mouthful of wine hurriedly. The man swayed slightly as he held her coat for her and then he led the way toward the door. The head waiter bowed him out into the marble corridor—and then it started.

Six young huskies who had apparently been idling—waiting—in the corridor there, suddenly came to life. The young woman seemd to shrink back when she saw them. They quickly surrounded the gray haired man.

"This is the man and there she is," one of them yelled.

"You will steal my friend's wife and ruin her!" another shouted. And he struck the older man under the eye with a hard fist.

The gray-haired one went down heavily. His head struck the sharp corner of a marble pillar as he fell, and almost at once, it seemed, his gray head lay in a pool of crimson.

Six Huskies Melt Away.

Waiters now rushed out of the restaurant. Men in evening clothes and women in décolleté mingled with them —rubbed elbows with them. The six young huskies melted away. The young woman who had been his companion bent over the gray-headed one, who lay, quiet and white, as he had fallen. The young woman turned to some waiters.

"Pick him up and bring him inside—upstairs," she said impatiently.

They gave him hot coffee, upstairs, until he regained consciousness. They had been watching him anxiously—it is unpleasant to have such things happen in or about one's restaurant—and they were glad when he opened his eyes. He called a waiter over feebly and told him to put in a "long distance call for his wife—Mrs. Cochrane—at Hot Springs."

Goes to the Congress.

For a while he waited for the call to come, holding his head. Then he and the young woman with him arose. He leaned rather heavily on her arm as they left. A spot where the youth had struck him under the eye was already starting to discolor. He turned back to the head waiter as he went out.

"Transfer that call, when it comes, to the Congress hotel," he ordered weakly.

"Yes, there was a Mr. Cochrane here shortly after 10 o'clock last night," said F. R. Florentine, manager of the Congress. "He had a spot under one eye. If he had trouble before I saw him he had forgotten about it when he was talking to me—and he was very talkative."

De Jonghe's? Henry H. Hanause, the manager, and all his waiters apparently went suddenly deaf, dumb, and blind just about the time things started to happen to Mr. Cochrane Friday night.

"I have not heard about it," said Mons. Hanause. "Mr. Cochrane? Mr. Cochrane? Ah, no."

Woman Returning from Movie Robbed on Street

Mrs. Julius Stanger of 1122 North Oakley boulevard was returning home from a moving picture show last night with her two children and her niece. At Robey and Thomas streets a young man rushed up, grabbed her pocketbook, and ran. The purse contained $8, besides jewelry and her keys.

QUENTIN ROOSEVELT LYING DEAD BESIDE HIS AEROPLANE

German Post Card, Recovered from Prisoner, Depicts Tragic End of Son of the Late Former President.

On July 18, 1918, Lieut. Quentin Roosevelt was brought down inside the German lines in the Chateau Thierry sector, and the American marines in their advance a few days later found his grave.

A few weeks ago, in the hospital at Royette, a wounded marine was exhibiting a picture post card he had taken from a German prisoner. Lieut. Perkins of the aviation corps recognized aviator and airplane. On the back of the card was printed in German:

"Ex-President Roosevelt's son. The Americans are in such need of flyers that they are using their presidents' sons."

The card was filed in the record of the Seventh aviation instruction center, only three copies having been made. Two were retained by Lieut. Perkins and Lieut. Crawford, friends of Roosevelt, and the third given to Corporal John A. Scully, aviation photographer.

PREDICTS COOK GIRL WILL BE AT TRIAL MONDAY

Man Close to Hoyne Says She'll Be a Witness.

"Norma Cook will be in the hands of the state's attorney when her father is placed on trial. She will be found and will appear as a witness."

This prediction was made last night by a man close to State's Attorney Hoyne. That the girl is not far away is the general belief. The finding of the "missing" girl seems to be only a matter of hours.

The "young aviation lieutenant," who has figured in the case, it became known last night, had recently carried a message from Norma Cook to her mother. His identity was revealed as Lieut. Charles Heade, said to be stopping at the Hamilton club. At the club last night it was said he was out. When he would return, attachés could not say.

Girl Calls Heade Up.

Lieut. Heade told an assistant state's attorney that the girl had called him up and had requested him to meet her. She asked that he carry the message, he said, and he agreed to do so, being an old friend of the family. He insisted he did not know Norma's present whereabouts, but it was indicated that information which he gave up caused Hoyne's men to announce they expected to have her at the trial opening tomorrow.

Mrs. Myrtle Cook, the girl's mother, spent more than six hours yesterday afternoon closeted with Mr. Hoyne personally and with James C. O'Brien, assistant state's attorney. Two men whose names were not revealed sat in conference with them.

Mrs. Cook told them she had not tried to disappear, but had changed her address to seek seclusion. She said:

"I was asked to move from 4322 Sheridan road because of the publicity."

She declined to tell her present address, but later, followed by investitors, went to an apartment building at 602 Gary place, rang a bell, and was admitted.

Eludes Reporters in Hotel.

"I don't want to be followed," said Mrs. Cook, when she left Hoyne's office. "I don't want any men to go with me or to trail me."

A reporter offered to get her a taxicab.

"All right," she said. Then in a moment she changed her mind. Another reporter suggested that he get her a taxi. She agreed, but immediately changed her mind again. Then she walked out. She tried to get a taxi, but, owing to the weather and the demand for them, none could be obtained at the moment.

She then went into a drug store at the Revere house, ducked out a side door, doubled back into the Revere house and out of another door. Mrs. Cook then took a Broadway car. At Gary place she left the street car alone and went at once, alone, to the building at 602 Gary place.

Denies She Is There.

Entering the hallway, she rang the bell of an apartment and said through the tube she wished to see Joseph Lipkey. Immediately the buzzer rang and the door opened.

Mr. Lipkey later was called on the phone. A request for Mrs. Cook brought the reply from him:

"She is not here. I don't know anything about her. I'm surprised that you expect to find her here. I can't understand how you connect her name with this address or me."

CATS IS CATS OR THEFT? MYSTERY

Ralty, 3 years old, and Argo, 6 months old, cats of the Thomas sex, which, according to their owner, Mrs. M. A. Merriam, 615 Church street. Evanston, have never roamed the alleys at nights, but were brought up in a state of cat refinement and culture in her sun parlor, were let out in the rear yard Thursday for an airing and a short time later disappeared.

Yesterday an advertisement appeared in an Evanston newspaper requesting the young man seen carrying two cats in Sherman avenue to return them to the owner.

According to Mrs. Merriam, Ralty had been out in the alley consorting with the common pussy cats but once in its three years of life, while Argo had never been missing a single night.

Iowa to Try Fake Slayer of Josephine McDonald

Dubuque, Ia., Feb. 22.—James Monroe, alias Love, alias Darling, now in the Cook county jail, Chicago, will be brought to Dubuque at once under the Mann act, according to United States District Attorney F. A. O'Connor of Dubuque.

Monroe is alleged to have taken a young married woman from here into Illinois and then on to Cedar Rapids, where they registered as man and wife. He then went to Rock Island, Ill., where he confessed to killing Miss Josephine McDonald, a Chicago woman, by running her down with his automobile. The confession was repudiated.

WOMAN FOILS BOY BANDIT IN "L" STATION

Two holdups yesterday afternoon in full daylight started off the weekly Saturday series of robberies. Two young Negroes, armed with revolvers, got $120 in the real estate office of F. L. Langridge, 4654 South State street. A white boy, about 18 years old, attempted to hold up the Northwestern elevated station at Halsted street, but failed.

The Negroes, apparently about 23 years old, shoved guns under the nose of Peter J. Davy, a clerk in the realty office, and threatened to kill him if he didn't "fork over." After they had grabbed all the money in sight they ran south in State street.

One of the robbers wore an army overcoat and Davy gave the police an excellent description of both. The police believe that they are the same pair that has figured in a number of recent south side robberies.

Mrs. Catherine Sullivan frustrated the attempt of the boy bandit when two women, entering the station, distracted his attention. They are Mrs. Catherine Bauer, 1858 Burling street, and Miss Laura Beehan, 1843 Burling street.

The youth had Mrs. Sullivan covered with his weapon when the two passengers walked down the stairs. Switching his gun to them, he commanded, "Hands up."

Mrs. Sullivan seized the opportunity to call for help over the company phone. Seeing this, the boy quickly pocketed his gun and took to his heels.

Drama of Incandescent Life Ends in Court.

"Along Sheridan Road."

Cast: Carroll Cadwell, 4656 Lake Park avenue. Her husband, George W. Cadwell, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Enk, volunteer detectives. Judge Hopkins, waiters, taxi drivers, etc.

Act 1.

Green Mill Gardens—Cadwell is seen chasing rainbow colored refreshment. A gal is at his side (gal 'cause this is a melodrama). Waiters hurry with heavy trays. Jingle, jingle, sounds the cash register. The rainbow dies out at 1 o'clock and Cadwell with his gal exit. They are followed by the Enks.

Act. II.

Sheridan road apartment house—Cadwell and gal enter. Enks wait until 2:30 a. m., outside. No Cadwell appears.

"We've seen enough—let's snake home," says Mrs. Enk.

Act. III.

Courtroom—"That husband o' mine knew so many women in the Sheridan road district that he decided to live there," testifies Mrs. Cadwell. "It's a wild neighborhood, you know. Beauty, luxury, and incandescent life does there exist. He was faithless."

The Enks add their bit.

"Too bad—give her a decree," sighs the jurist.

You'd be satisfied if a set of tires lasted you a year, wouldn't you?

But buying a tire every other month or oftener is some nuisance — and it costs.

If you're one of those drivers who use only two wheels on corners and wear out your brake lining every month or so, maybe it's a tire a month for you anyway, but, if you're an ordinary man and ten or twelve thousand miles a year is about your average there's a way you can save trouble and spend your money for Liberty Bonds.

You're not interested in why-and-how — but you do want facts. If that's so, they're to be had.

OLD FASHIONED, LOYAL, A FIGHTER IS TOM CAREY

There's Many a Change in Him Since He Fought for His Job.

When the wife and the priest and the children and the newspapers begin to talk about a man's intentions to sell himself you have got that man where he must be honest.

FROM THE WIT AND WISDOM OF TOM CAREY.

BY EYE WITNESS.
V: THOMAS CAREY.

Here's "a bit of the old—the good old, my boy," as Irving, the play actor, used to say to the young men when he wanted them to put more drive and weight and roundness into their work.

"Good old Tom Carey," as the saying is back of the yards, though may the saints forgive me for calling him old, for 'tis young he is in the heart of him still, and ever young in the kind thoughts of his friends.

Ah, the days and the nights and the fights he's seen—in the time of "Carey's Indians," with the wigwam in every block of the old Twenty-ninth! It would be eight and thirty years ago now, the time Tom Carey first came to Chicago a poor lad—bitter poor—in his first twenties, riding into town on a freight car and dropping off at the stockyards.

Always since those hard days his record's been the same; always he's fought hard and hit hard and loved hard, but never been hard.

He Worked Hard.

Worked hard, too, for we County Cork men are ever hell with our hands and not biding our time the day long for somebody else to be occupying himself with the shovel or the shillelah.

Now he's rich and all's handsome and fine around him, and all honestly come by. No man can say other.

But no difference in him at all for all his money. 'Tis as John Bowles said yesterday to the men in the yards at the Cary meeting, and John's known him this many a year, "There he is, friends," says John — and the water standing in the two eyes of him when he said it, "there he is," he says, "with a head as big as a bushel basket, and, believe me, I know there's something in it. He's a big, successful man, now, but you'll always find him 'Tom' Carey," he says.

He's Friend to Many.

Aye, it's a good friend Tom Carey has been to many, and many to him by the same token.

This matter of friendship's a great thing, and no easy thing—a great thing to keep warm and strong 'twixt man and man, and a bitter thing to trade with and play with and make cheap. 'Tis no more than a strumpet then. Well, I'll say in his hardest battles Tom always kept it clear in his noodle what it meant and what it didn't mean.

"It's an awful thing to betray it," he says that time in '97, or was it '98? —I'm thinking it was '98—when the grand battle was on between him and McInerney, and B—— (well, I'll name no names, for bygones is bygones, and 'tis likely, if I told all, the wife or childer might be hurted), but 'tis still well remembered in the ward how when ———, the dirty publican, sold Tom Carey out to McInerney, for all the long time Tom had been the good friend to the traitor.

"And Tom Trimmed Him."

"So," says Tom, when he got the hang of his capers, "so that's his game, is it?" And went out and beat him at the polls and finished him off for good and all, but holding all the time no blackness in his heart against McInerney, for Mac was no traitor to those as he once had give his word to.

But that other blackguard. Save us and bless us, but Tom did blister him! "He's a dog," he says, "and worse than a dog," he says, "but I'll say this for McInerney, he sticks by his friends."

That was Tom Carey all over, and it's the same Tom Carey now. The same in little things as big—like yesterday. I must tell you about it. Come time the speechmaking was over, and the handshaking and the "good luck to you, Tom," and the "Howdy, Tom," and "How are ye, Barney?" was spoken and done, then John Bowles says:

"You'll all stop and have a bite of lunch with us, Tom, at the Saddle and Sirloin?"

"I will," says Tom, "if my friends 'll stay." "Gladly," they all answer, except me, who says, "Thank you kindly, but I'll be on me way." "Then I'll not stay," says Carey, all because it happened he had picked me up at the headquarters and brought me in his car to the yards.

Tom Stands Pat.

"What talk have you, Mister Carey?" I says, quiet—"it's important to your plans that you stay and have a talk with these big men of the yards, and they your old friends."

"I never dump a man," he says, putting on his overcoat, "and I'll not have you paddlin' back to town in the wet, for you'll get no taxi out here."

And so it had to be, and I needs must stop along with him, he walking, the while lunch was on the fire, around the picture gallery of the club, talking of this one and that one—of Nelson Morris, and the old Swift, and P. D. Armour, and Sherman, all good friends to him in the old days when he was butchering at the yards—he could do his 1,500 steers a day—and thinking up new and cleaner ways to butcher that are used to this hour.

I watched him with a kind of wonder, he moving so quiet and easy through the grand rooms and looking so handsome, with his white hair and his long black coat, and all this not a stone's throw from where used to stand the butchering pens, where he once worked, and the barns he had to clean.

A Grand Country, 'Tis That.

'Tis surely a strange world, says I to myself, and a grand country, where a poor Irish lad can so rise and become a millionaire, with no man's hands against him, but all reaching out in love and kindness.

I'm thinking his mind was running on the same thoughts, for when he passes old Morris' picture he says very quietlike: "I was working in Swift's packing house when Tom Wilson"—that's the yards magnate of today—"when Tom Wilson," he says, "was a messenger boy in Nelse Morris' office." And he minded him of the time when he got his first job at the yards at $1.50 a day—as a neck washer of the beeves it was—and got it on a Saturday with the agreement he'd work on the Sunday.

That same he does, but comes back on the Monday to find a Pollack in his place, so they both go to work, but the foreman comes and says: "Here, what's all this? This is a one man job," and walks away, meaning by that young Tom and the Pollack should settle it betwixt them. Which they did in the way of those days, which was rough days, and Tom stayed.

In his speech down below to the men and boys of the yards Mister Carey had told them this story about him and the Pollack, "because," says he with that twinkle of his, "I'm wanting you to know that I go back some in the history of these yards."

He's Simple and Easylike.

Then in he jumps, giving Roger what-for and tearing the gas company wide open.

Hale and hearty, and easy as an old shoe is Tom as a speaker, with a couple of two fisted fighting gestures and he standing square on his feet and looking down into the eyes of the men.

No grand words has Mister Carey—one time at the Iroquois club he says, "O hell," and throws away a paper where they'd put down a lot of fine writing for him, and then wades in on his own and makes a hit because he talked so simple and solid.

His very platform is seven one syllable words: "Stop the gas steal; save the streets."

He'd not be good at a long speech, I'm thinking, but for a friendly talk on matters 'twixt man and man, or 'twixt him and a thousand men, he's grand, and I give you some of his sentences.

Of this mayor's job he says: "It's like every job I ever tackled in my life—when I get started on it all hell won't stop me.

"I'll stop the political ratholes. I'll put Chicago back on the map of common sense.

"I'll let you look at my back when I leave, and ye'll see there's no Roger Sullivan stamp on it. I refused to sit down with Roger and put my feet under the table and take my orders from that bunch of highbinders."

I'm not saying he has the book learning of the judge, or least of all of the professor, but I'm thinking he could hold his own against most of them that have most to say and much to put over on this afflicted town. He always has, and in some bitter fights, too. He's always grown, too. The Municipal Voters' league says so. "His record in the council has shown marked improvement from year to year," they said, that time he was up for his sixth term, "and he is a man of forceful personality, much ability, and unlimited energy," they said.

And some newspaper told of him, when he made the great speech in '98 against McInerney, that "He was one of the first of the old aldermanic crowd to catch the fact that good morals is also good politics."

Sure an' His Word's Good.

'Twas about the voters' league that Mister Carey said, "I'll not sign their pledge. I'm signed already—to the people of my ward, though no papers passed between us. Papers and signings be damned," says he, "my word's my word and they know it and I know it."

But, though he hadn't signed, the league came out for him. 'Twas the far, far better way—when you know your man—and the league knew Carey.

And once he said after a hard battle, "I was elected by neither Republicans, Democrats, nor the newspapers. My own people elected me."

There's a grand touch of chieftainship in that—royal reminiscence, I say, of ancient days when some were kings and some, later so proud, were glad to be running beside the stirrups.

ALL CANDIDATES CONFIDENT

Mayoralty Aspirants Each Certain He Will Be His Party's Choice.

BY HARRY OLSON.

I have been asked to make a forecast of the outcome of the coming primaries. The most difficult thing in the world is to predict what will happen. Lightning hits once in a while where one least expects it. This is what happened four years ago when Mayor Thompson was elected. Lightning seldom strikes twice in the same place.

The mayor's nomination was an accident, due to skillful advertising of the candidate, who was unknown to the public four years ago. He now has had a record of four years in administration and he is thoroughly known to our citizens. The opportunity to recall him has been looked forward to by thousands of our citizens since a month after his election.

BY CAPT. CHARLES E. MERRIAM.

Reports made by our canvassers indicate that I will be nominated on Tuesday by a vote of 110,000. This is based on a careful analysis of figures obtained in many sections of the city.

The participation of women and the general interest given to the mayoral primary by the return of interest to the normal concerns of peace will, I reckon, increase the total primary vote to 240,000.

Of this total vote I estimate that Judge Olson will get 60,000, Mayor Thompson 70,000, which with the 110,000 contributed to my following will compose the total.

BY FRANCIS P. BRADY.

[Thompson Manager.]

With weather at all favorable there will be a total vote of not less than 200,000 in the Republican primary. Under normal conditions the vote will be cast as follows:

Thompson	110,000
Olson	60,000
Merriam	32,000
Total	202,000

As the total vote varies from 200,000, the relative proportion of each candidate will remain the same—that is:

	Pct.
Thompson	55
Olson	29
Merriam	16

BY ROBERT M. SWEITZER.

I am satisfied that I will be nominated on Tuesday by a comfortable margin. To doubt it would be to reflect on the intelligence of the voters of Chicago.

If not I will have no regrets, no ill feeling toward any one, and will be ready to continue the fight for the redemption of Chicago from present conditions as a private if I cannot as a captain.

BY THOMAS CAREY.

We will win by over 50,000. The issue is plain. The south side wards will come in with between 25,000 and 30,000. This majority cannot be overcome. The west and north side wards will round twelve or fifteen thousand more, and if the few north side wards give me less than twelve or fifteen thousand majority I have lost my political judgment.

ALL CONFIDENT OF VICTORY AS VOTE TEST NEARS

Republican Primary Fight a Puzzle; Sweitzer in a Canter.

Merriam could not appeal to the ward organizations sufficiently to hope that he might receive a large Republican support. While the two factions were ready to bury the hatchet for the good of Chicago and the great reconstruction period, their leaders did not believe at the outset that Capt. Merriam could defeat Thompson in the primary.

They did believe, they now say, after canvassing the situation, that Judge Olson could, and they hoped that Capt. Merriam, for the good of his city, would see it as they did and gracefully retire from the field in this crisis.

They based their estimate of Judge Olson's superior vote getting power on the fact that in 1912, when nearly everybody else was defeated on the Republican ticket, he was elected to the chief justiceship of the Municipal court. Again last year, when things were smashed to pieces by the warring factions, he was elected at a time the leaders didn't know what was going to hapen—elected at the very moment a national opposition party was getting what benefit there was in the concluding hours of a successful war. Both times Justice Olson had the good will of the progressive element of the party, as well as the straight Republican strength.

Views of Thompson Camp.

Meanwhile in the mayor's camp there is the greatest confidence. While the city hall forces have been slipping a bit in the final week of the campaign, they see no danger to their "hero" owing to their belief that Judge Olson and Capt. Merriam will run a neck and neck race and thereby let Thompson through even with a minority vote.

The man in the street is betting his money on Thompson to win the nomination. He bases his judgment on the division of the anti-Thompson vote.

Both Capt. Merriam and Judge Olson meantime do not think Mayor Thompson is as strong as he is supposed to be by the curb stone orators. They point out that much of the street shouting for Thompson does not come from Republicans, but from the element that has applauded his giving asylum to the anti-war lecturers who were driven out of other states.

War Record His Nemesis.

They agree that in the Republican primary many of the street boosters for "his honor" will not be permitted to vote. And both figure it unthinkable that in a Republican primary Mayor Thompson, with the general opinion that he didn't do all he might have done to encourage the soldier boys in France, whether rightly or wrongly understood, should command the support of a majority of the Republican voters of Chicago.

Both agree, too, that together they will get more votes than "your mayor," but here again they are wondering which of the two is going to have the better of the argument when the ballots are counted.

No one knows whether the stirring times just now have dispelled the lethargy that usually characterizes off-year and mayoralty campaigns. There are some 200,000 voters in Chicago who never take the trouble to go to the polls except in presidential years. Will they be quickened into sufficient life to mark a ballot Tuesday? That, the leaders agree, is one of the uncertain aspects of the primary.

Sweitzer in a Canter.

In the Democratic household it looks like Sweitzer in a rather easy canter at the finish. He ought to come down the homestretch slowed up, if dope counts this time. While Thomas Carey is going to receive more votes than was thought likely at the start of the campaign, the organization forces, the ward leaders, and the aldermen, who usually count for a great deal in Demoertic primaries, are largely behind Sweitzer. Were there anything like a solid Dunne-Harrison-Hoyne-O'Connell-Lewis-Harrison combination behind Carey he would be a formidable antagonist, the chieftains agree. But many of the old anti-crowd are on the stump for Sweitzer.

State's Attorney Hoyne is not running in the primary, but much of his organization force is backing Carey with the understanding that if Carey is defeated in the primary the Carey Indians will support Hoyne as an independent candidate in the election.

PRIMARY FACTS

Things About Tuesday's Election You Should Know.

POLLS open Tuesday morning at 6 o'clock and close at 5 p. m.

Murray. Democratic, Francis Borrelli, James T. Devere, and John A. Ulrich. Holmes and Borrelli are the respective organization candidates.

Thirty-six candidates for aldermen will be nominated by each of the major parties. The extra man comes in the Sixth ward—to fill the vacancy caused by the "kicking upstairs" of Ald. Willis O. Nance. He was elected to the drainage board last fall.

The Waterbury Investment

Definite Property + Development by Organization

Resulting in Greater Profits and Greater Property Increase in Value

Capital is organized, so is labor; but the fundamental basis of the very life of both is agriculture — which is unorganized. Land is the basis of wealth, supplying not only our food but our clothes, our money, our national prosperity.

The WATERBURY INVESTMENT is based on land. The WATERBURY land has a characteristic that makes it valuable land—it is a part of a small area suited to the growth of a valuable crop that is very much in demand and can always be sold for cash. It is in this respect very valuable land.

The treatment (or cultivation) of this land is the WATERBURY IDEA—the idea of giving to the investors all of the profits possible from all sources of development. Therefore, we decided to place organization at work from the beginning and to give to each owner of a 5 or 10 acre parcel of property the same advantages as to the treatment of his small acreage that he would get if he owned a thousand times as much land.

Powerful machinery which the small owner could not buy works for him, saving him labor costs. A scientific laboratory, for which he does not pay, tests his soil, solves his fertilization problem for him, provides protection for his crop—all without expense to him. The products of his land will be grown and harvested by a corps of laborers in a most practical way and at a cost so low that his profits will be enormously increased from this source alone. His product will be sorted, graded, preserved and marketed by an organization working according to modern methods at a nominal cost to him. Still he will own the land, exercise over it complete domination, but he will have no operating debts and no worry.

Any man familiar with organization knows that its success comes from recognized economies in time, labor-saving devices, production costs and marketing costs. The larger caliber the organization the greater will be the economies effected. The WATERBURY IDEA is the organization idea applied to the greatest of all businesses—agrculture. The selection of the land and the crop to be grown upon the land is only one part of this organization idea. The WATERBURY INVESTMENT is in no sense an ordinary one. From the beginning it has been fully financed. There has always been in the treasury of this organization sufficient capital to carry out our plans of production on a big volume scale. The protection of each investment in this organization has at all times been, and will continue to be, fully protected under our complete organization plan. Not only will the investment be protected, but as profits accrue these also will be fully provided with adequate safeguards.

Agriculture as the subject of big volume organization, however, requires different treatment than an industrial enterprise. The WATERBURY idea, therefore, is one in complete harmony with the subject of organization; and while protective in nature, is formulated according to plans that will permit each participant to share in abnormal profits obtained through the production and marketing of WATERBURY products.

We invite a thorough investigation of the WATERBURY IDEA applied to agriculture. It is a constructive idea which is resulting in the creation of a form of investment particularly suited to the man who is familiar with the workings of big volume organization.

Shoes to Fit Your Feet OR
Feet to Fit Your Shoes

Dr. Pinkston has originated and designed several different style shoes on the triple combination last for perfect and imperfect feet. It matters not whether your bunions are large or small, or whether there are no bunions at all. He made his shoes two widths narrower in the heel, one width narrower in the arch, and two widths wider through the ball of the foot than any other shoe that has ever been made. The narrow heel prevents the shoe from slipping up and down. The narrow arch keeps the foot from sliding forward. The broad ball gives perfect comfort and freedom to the toes. The entire comfort and grace of walking depend entirely upon the proper articulation of the ball of the foot. Most people have the mistaken idea that to have the feet comfortably dressed it requires an unsightly shoe. Dr. Pinkston's shoes are truly stylish shoes, and not anatomic shoes, nor have they a stiff, heavy, clumsy, broad toe, flat heels, such as are recommended for foot comfort.

Foot troubles affect the body in many different ways: The feet swell, burn, ache and have sharp pains under the heels; the ball of the foot is sore and feels as if walking on marbles. Ankles become weak, legs cramp, and knees stiffen when ascending stairs. Pains are produced in the hips, small of the back, shoulders and neck. Poor circulation, inability to walk with comfort.

Dr. Pinkston has solved the foot problem. He can relieve you of all of your foot troubles and cure nine-tenths, regardless of the nature or condition of the ailment. He was forced to originate and design a comfortable, dressy shoe for ladies. His motto is not only to cure foot troubles, but to prevent them and to keep the feet well after they have been cured, and that is just what Dr. Pinkston's shoes do.

Dr. Pinkston has an exclusive shoe shop of ready to wear and made to measure shoes in connection with his foot specialty work.

An early visit will convince you that he has the shoe you have long been looking for.

OLSON CHARGES SEVEN MILLIONS DEFICIT TO MAYOR

Cites Figures to Show the Administration's Extravagance.

Judge Harry Olson last night issued a "final and up to date" statement dealing with the city's finances. He quotes the official figures and charges that in spending $10,000,000 more than the previous administration for corporate and school purposes the Thompson administration has left a deficit of more than $7,000,000 in the two departments.

"The written financial record of the Thompson-Lundin-Ettelson spoils extravagance does not stop with the figures on actual ,expenditures," reads the statement. "He and his satellites have expended a total of $104,000,000 during the four years, but they tried to get a total to expend of more than $120,000,000. Only the vigilance of the city council prevented an additional outlay of $15,000,000 by these political freebooters, headed by your mayor.

$7,000,000 Deficit.

"Does a $7,000,000 deficit in corporate and school funds spell economy? Does an attempt to obtain an additional sum of $15,000,000 constitute service to the taxpayers? Does a boost in millions each year seem retrenchment?

"No wonder that 'your mayor' when speaking of the city's finances has dealt only in glowing generalities. No wonder that Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson, holding down two big offices contrary to the law, talks of gigantic financial benefits without dwelling upon the actual figures in the records, or when he does quote figures twists them into brand new meanings. The figures of the city's accounts give the lie to every claim they make for economical administration.

Grows to Huge Deficit.

"In 1917 there was a deficit of $696,000, which grew to a gigantic shortage of more than $4,000,000 during the last year. That's 'your mayor's' financial record. Think it over. Register your conclusion at the polls.

"Now just take a quick look at the actual expenditure figures of your mayor's 'Solid Six.' When they took over the offices of the board of education they found a deficit in the school treasury of $245,000. Six months later this deficit had grown to $668,000. During the last year, before the Supreme court ousted the intruders from the school system, they had managed to boost the deficit to the $3,000,000 figure.

"Your mayor's personal record in connection with the financial affairs of the city also is worthy of some small attention. He never attended meetings of the finance committee of the city council when it was wrestling with the financial problems of the taxpayers. He vetoed three times resolutions of aldermen inviting the bureau of public efficiency to make a financial and administrative survey of the city's departments to try to work out a more efficient and economical handling of municipal business."

MERRIAM WILL FIGHT THOMPSON AFTER PRIMARY

Capt. Merriam, in what was his last big meeting of the primary campaign, in Prospect hall, Sixty-fourth street and Prospect avenue, last night announced he would take the stump against Mayor Thompson should the latter be renominated. He also characterized the harmony Republicans opposition to Thompson "pillow fighting." He said in part:

"The day of battle with the Thompson-Deneen alliance of sham and betrayal is near at hand. The loyal men and women of Chicago will not shirk the fight to preserve at home that democracy for which America sent two million men across the seas to fight.

"When I forced Mr. Deneen and Judge Olson recently to admit that they would support Mayor Thompson if he should be nominated, I stripped of their patriotic uniforms and exposed them as disguised Thompsonites. If they will support Thompson tomorrow, are they not by this attitude supporting him today? 'Eventually—why not now?' Mr. Deneen and Judge Olson propose to lead Republicans to defeat at the hands of the mayor's pay roll army on Feb. 25, and then they will surrender their forces to the command of Thompson and Lundin. I am making a fight to the finish against the faithless mayor of Chicago, the shirker in peace and the slacker in war, for whose acts we hang our heads in shame.

"I shall fight Mayor Thompson all the way through. I expect to be nominated Tuesday, and as captain of the Republican forces I pledge myself now to overthrow the Lundin-Ettelson leaders who have plotted and carried out the Thompson betrayal of the people. If the Thompson-Deneen alliance misleads enough voters to Olson's banner of defeat so that Thompson is temporarily victorious, I shall still fight against him. Mr. Deneen and his candidate stand ready to exhort good citizens tomorrow to support the man they denounce today as a menace to party, city, and the nation."

SWEITZER FINDS GUIDE IN LIFE OF WASHINGTON

Robert M. Sweitzer practically wound up his primary speaking campaign yesterday with an address to women voters at his headquarters on George Washington. He said:

"It must be a relief for all of us to forget the present campaign, with its mud slinging, its personalities, and its roorbacks, to pay our tribute to that great man whose indomitable will, singleness of purpose, unflinching perseverance, and sturdy honesty was responsible for the fact that we are today a nation. There is inspiration in the life of Washington for all of us today, especially for those of us who love our city as well as our nation.

"There are those of us who are inclined to despair of the future of our city, who see only the obstacles in the way of its progress, who are inclined to consider those obstacles insurmountable. Let them consider for a minute the obstacles that were overcome by Washington and ours become insignificant.

"Just a little of the same spirit and the same energy that animated Washington and the patriots who remained true to him through all vicissitudes is all that is needed today to restore Chicago to the place among the cities of the world which she once enjoyed and which should be hers today."

SCAN RECORD, SOLDIERS SAY OF THOMPSON

Men Overseas Warn of Spoils Raids and Other Scandals.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

LUXEMBURG, Feb. 22.—Here is a message to Chicago voters from the city's own combat division, the Thirty-third, which was built out of the national guard. Found in quaint cities and towns of this tiny grand duchy and asked their views upon the coming mayoralty primary and the candidacy of William Hale Thompson, one after another of Chicago's former political leaders now in the army asked that emphasis be laid particularly on an angle of the situation they fear may be overlooked in the campaign.

They tell of the heat of their own tempers when they consider Thompson's war record and hold that it alone should put him on the everlasting political blacklist, but they say that an appeal of this sort does not cover the whole ground.

Look at His Record.

"Let the voter do nothing more than look at the record of the mayor," said a man whose voice would carry weight in the Republican councils if at home, "and he can reach only one decision. Thompson, because of his utter failure for four years to perform the duties of his office, deserves the stinging rebuke of an overwhelming defeat. If only the argument concerning his loyalty during the war is presented, he will put up the same sort of clever defense he did in the senatorial primary, and charge the entire case against him is made up of lies concocted by his enemies and an unfriendly press. And some people may believe him.

"But if he is compelled to make an accounting of his four years' stewardship, the showing will be so ridiculous the people will begin to understand what the matter with Thompson is."

Some of the Scandals.

This Chicagoan recited some of the high spots in the official career of the present mayor as they came to him extemporaneously. He said proof that Thompson was a spoilsman was furnished the first day of his administration when the so called conference of business men was hoodwinked into nominating cabinet members already agreed upon by the Thompson forces, and this proof was clinched when he turned all other patronage, including the temporary civil service appointments, to Fred Lundin, who handled them with the aid of a big card index kept in a secret room of the Sherman hotel.

He mentioned the injection of the spoils system into the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium, which drove Sachs to suicide, and the spoils raid on the school board. He mentioned the destruction of the efficiency division which for four years had been a great assistance to the civil service commission and the city council, and the raid on the bureau of public welfare which led to the Eaton-Rowe scandal, and resulted in the city council's refusal to appropriate funds.

Supported by Spoilsmen.

"And if you want to get a real perspective of the situation the last three or four years," he added, "look at Thompson's influence in the city council. What support has he had? There is a group of honest, intelligent Republicans in the minority. They turned against him because they couldn't stomach what he was doing. And who supported him? The majority of his supporters were spoils Democrats, held in line with a paltry patronage, a few jobs and garbage wagons."

If this man were home and out of the army he would be making speeches. In the army he must remain silent. But still he feels it is his right to advise the voter to look at the record carefully before placing Chicago in the hands of Thompson for another four years.

LITTLE CHANCE FOR CHANGE IN CITY COUNCIL

Only 23 Real Contests for 72 Places on Ballot.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Probably at no time in the last twenty years should there have been more interest in the aldermanic primary than in the one approaching.

The council hopper is filled with big problems awaiting solution. Among them are the reclamation of the lake front, the construction of a new Illinois Central terminal, the making of new telephone rates, the disposition of the gas litigation, the reorganization of the licensing system, the construction of the Calumet harbor, an improvement in the transportation system, a substantial reduction in the large crimes, regaining of lands occupied by railroads, a reduction in the election expense, settling of the jurisdiction of the moving picture censorship, the getting of work started on permanent improvements for which $14,000,000 of bonds are lying idle in the city treasury improvement and extensions in the water plant for which cash is available, the pushing of actual construction work on the new Union station, the increasing of track elevation, the revamping of the city's financial system, the obtaining of employment for soldiers and other unemployed, and the reconstruction of South Water street.

Little Chance of Improvement.

Yet there is little of promise in the list of aldermanic candidates. The chance is slim of improving the council materially. Each mayoralty candidate has proclaimed what he will do with reference to most of these large questions.

The fact is the mayor can do little without the aid of the council. Public interest in the council contests has been comparatively small. The situation can be roughly summarized as follows:

Wards.	Republicans.	Democrats.
Real contests	13	10
Nominal opposition	11	14
Unopposed	12	12

The chief interest in the Republican battle lies in the contests of ten wards. In each of these the Thompson-Lundin organization has a candidate who is making a stiff battle. Not one of these has the indorsement of the Municipal Voters' league.

List of Contests.

The following shows these ward contests, the names of the city hall candidates, and those indorsed by the Municipal Voters' league:

THOMPSON.	M. V. L.
Ward.	William A. Wallace
2—*L. B. Anderson	John H. Passmore
3—John J. Lupe	*William R. Fetzer
7—Geo. Bolling	Samuel O. Shaffer
13—Peter H. Kane	Charles J. Lucas
14—Edward J. Lyons	*Thos. O. Wallace
23—Joseph F. Seeber	*William F. Lipps
26—William H. Wesby	*John Hrubec
29—Jno. Golombiewski	A. L. Strachan
31—Scott M. Hogan	Ross B. Guthrie
33—John P. Garner

*Sitting aldermen.

In the Second ward Ald. Anderson has as his real opponent former Ald. De Priest. The former is one of Mayor Thompson's floor leaders and the latter one of his former floor leaders. Publicly both are strenuously shouting for the mayor. The third candidate, William A. Wallace, is dismissed by De Priest and Anderson with the statement that he is a Sunday school superintendent. Merriam has charged openly that De Priest is secretly aiding Olson. As offensive as it may be to many, it is not at all improbable that the Republican candidate for mayor will be [illegible] according to the way the supporters of Anderson and De Priest go.

Passmore vs. Lupe.

In the Third ward John H. Passmore has united Republican support despite numerous factional difficulties in this Republican battle ground. His opponent, Lupe, a Thompson protégé, has several brothers on the city payroll.

The election of Willis O. Nance leaves a vacancy in the Sixth ward. This was not listed above as providing a real contest, but Charles Scribner Eaton, the harmony candidate, insisted yesterday that the city hall faction is strenuously attempting to nominate Guy M. Armstrong.

In the Seventh ward is a three cornered contest between Ald. Fetzer, Morton MacCormac, and George Bolling. Fetzer has the support of the Deneen-Brundage organization, Bolling of the Thompson-Lundin machine, and MacCormac is going alone. MacCormac was formerly a high lieutenant of Lundin's. He broke away after losing the school board job of statistician, and his supporters are now whooping it up for Merriam for mayor. The captain has not taken MacCormac under [illegible].

Contest in Thirteenth.

The contest in the Thirteenth ward is between Shaffer, the Brundage-Deneen entry, and Kane, fo[illegible] master of the city dog pound, backed by David Clark, George Nye, and other [illegible]son adherents.

Edward J. Lyons, who holds a job under Corporation Counsel Ettelson is opposing Charles J. Lucas, former alderman, who has the support of other Republican elements. The Twenty-third ward is the home of both Mayor Thompson and Attorney General Brundage. Ald. Wallace is the entry of the latter and is expected to run away from Seeber, who is championed by the Thompson-Lundin following.

Ald. Lipps is probably having his hardest contest for renomination in his fourteen years in the council. His opponent, William H. Wesby, is a hip-hooray Thompson fellow, who is using all the methods of the Lundin organization. A story is going the rounds that Wesby was given a "trial" by the "trouble committee" of the city hall, with Lundin as the supreme court. Wesby was exonerated.

In Town of Lake.

Ald. John Hrubec of the Twenty-ninth ward has displeased "your mayor." The result is that former Ald. Golombiewski is carrying the Thompson-Lundin banner. For the Thirty-first ward, the bailiwick of former Gov. Deneen, A. L. Strachan is battling Scott M. Hogan, who has the support of the Thompson-Lundin crowd.

John P. Garner, commissioner of public service and perpetual chairman of the mayor's entertainment committees, is opposing Ross B. Guthrie, the harmony candidate, in the Thirty-third, the home ward of Fred Lundin.

In several wards the Republican contests are of little interest because the nominee, whoever he may be, is not expected to win. In a number of other wards the opposition is nominal to aldermen seeking reëlection. Among these are Ald. R. H. McCormick in the Twenty-first ward, Ald. Capitain in the Twenty-fifth ward, and Ald. Fisher of the Thirty-second ward.

Many Without Contest.

A. A. McCormick of the Sixth ward is the only Republican alderman without an opponent.

On the Democratic side the following are without even nominal opposition: Ald. Kenna of the First ward, A. I. Davidson of the Second ward, Ald. Iliff of the Third ward, Ald. Woodhull of the Eighth ward, Ald. Kaindl of the Fifteenth ward, Harry W. Strouss for the short term in the Sixth ward, Ald. Kunz of the Sixteenth ward, Ald. Fick of the Twentieth ward, Logan D. Wallace Jr. of the Twenty-fifth ward, City Treasurer Smith of the Twenty-eighth ward, C. P. Wilson of the Thirty-second ward, and George F Mulligan of the Thirty-fourth ward.

The liveliest Democratic contests are in nine wards, where there is a total of sixty-three candidates. The smallest entry in these wards is four and the largest eight.

Democrats in Contests.

The following table shows the Sullivan organization candidates, together with his principal opponent, according to the guess of Democratic dopesters, in each of the nine:

Ward.	Organization.	Opponent.
4	Timothy A. Hogan	Peter J. O'Connor
13	*Thomas J. Ahern	Arthur Leonard
22	Rudolph L. Schapp	Frank Gardner
24	*Frank F. Roeder	Joseph Pionk
27	Arthur S. Beaudette	Nicholas S. Budzban
29	James F. Kovarik	M. F. Ryan, D. McFall
30	*William J. Lynch	Thomas J. O'Grady
31	*James A. Long	Hugh B. Donuelly
35	*John S. Clark	Christopher W. Keane

*Present aldermen.

The death of Ald. Hickey of the fighting in the Argonne forests and has been decorated for gallantry.

Fourth ward left an open field for the five candidates. Hogan claims his principal opponent is O'Connor.

Block Is Candidate.

In the Ninth ward former Ald. Eugene H. Block desires to come back, but is opposed by "Red Jack" Leonard. The organization is taking no sides. In the Thirteenth ward, the home of Sweitzer, Ald. Ahern has the regular organization support. Arthur Leonard is said to have the backing of all the opposing elements among the Democrats. The Carey faction is giving aid to Frank Gardner in the Twenty-second ward. Schapp is the choice of the regulars. Ald. Ellison has withdrawn from the race to aid Schapp.

In the Twenty-seventh ward Beaudette is the regular nominee. Last year the regulars joined in a fusion campaign to aid Republicans in the reelection of Ald. Watson. Beaudette's primary supporters argue that if Beaudette is nominated the Republicans will help elect him. Budzban is trying to kick over this arrangement.

In Stockyards Wards.

In the Twenty-ninth ward Ryan and McFall claim to have a chance against Kovarik, the selection of the regulars. The Thirtieth ward fight is said to be between Ald. William J. Lynch and Thomas O'Grady. O'Grady's brother, a policeman, has been transferred to discourage him.

In the Thirty-first and the Thirty-fifth wards are entered two returned soldiers against sitting aldermen. Ald. Long has as an opponet Hugh B. Donnelly. In the Thirty-fifth ward Ald. Clark is opposed by Christopher W. Keane. Keane also lost a leg in the

LUNDIN TALKS

Sphinx of Politics Breaks Silence to Attack Olson.

FRED LUNDIN, Mayor Thompson's manager, yesterday issued his first signed statement in the primary campaign. It was in reply to Judge Olson's strictures on the "prime minister" of the Thompson cabinet. His statement reads:

"Judge Harry Olson, chief justice of the Municipal court, city hall, Chicago—Sir: From the very day when your political bosses drafted you to run for mayor you have unjustly and without cause assailed and slandered me and the good name of my family.

"I am at a loss to understand your motive and your purpose in attacking me thus without provocation. If you were an honest man you would tell the people that for twenty years you have asked for and accepted my assistance and support.

"What do you expect to gain by attempting to prejudice people against me? Because you and I have Swedish blood in our veins is no disgrace. I am proud of it; you should be.

"Stop your cunning, shyster method of lying about me while you are sneaking and dodging between contending political factions, and making of your courtroom a rendezvous for ward heelers and distributors of traction contributions that help pay the expense of your Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde campaign."

MAYOR ATTACKS BOTH RIVALS IN HIS FINAL TALK

Mayor Thompson issued the following statement last night:

"The feature of this campaign which appeals to me as most helpful is the evident intention of the people to think and act for themselves and to reject advice from questionable sources.

"The question which Republican voters will decide on Tuesday is whether their party is to be a party of the people or is to become the subservient agent of arrogant wealth and the public utility corporations.

"The developments of the campaign leave little choice between the Olson-Capitain-traction combination on the one hand and the Merriam-Richberg gas combine on the other. The utility corporations would be equally well served by either."

Labor Party Asks Wilson to Remove Burleson

Resolutions calling for the removal of Postmaster General Burleson by President Wilson were adopted yesterday by the executive board of the new Labor party and are being adopted at party ward meetings which are now being held nightly in the mayoralty campaign. The resolutions denounce the postmaster general's treatment of the postoffice employés as that of "the master to his slaves" and charge him with permitting corporation officials known to be hostile to govern-

Lincoln Ave. Business Lots Britiganwood

A Business Opportunity of Exceptional Merit

We believe that nowhere in Chicago is there a subdivision property of greater potential value than BRITIGANWOOD. The building up of this property should occupy not more than a few years, thus bringing BRITIGANWOOD a population of between 25,000 and 30,000. This property will be occupied by about 7,000 families, with an average annual purchasing power per family of $3,000. Consider what this means to business property in BRITIGANWOOD, which is located principally on Bryn Mawr, Kedzie, Western and Lincoln Avenues.

In our opinion no district on the North Side offers such exceptional opportunities for substantial investment profits as BRITIGANWOOD. Lincoln Avenue cuts diagonally through this property and, throughout its length, should develop into an extraordinarily good business street. The restrictions imposed on its development are protective in character and will, without doubt, preserve property values and make for property increases as population moves in.

Development Will Bring Big Profit

Following out the WM. H. BRITIGAN ORGANIZATION idea, we have priced this business property in such a way as to give to the purchasers of Lincoln Ave. lots the benefit of all the values created by the building operations and the attraction of population to this district. This probable population of between 25,000 and 35,000 will be completely dominated by the Lincoln Avenue business section. It is reasonably certain that the development of this property will cause the extension of the Lincoln Avenue car line to at least the northern boundaries of BRITIGANWOOD. We may, therefore, expect to see a similar increase in values to that which occurred on such main travel thoroughfares as North Clark Street and Milwaukee Avenue.

Lincoln Ave. Lots as Low as $2,000

Terms as Low as $20 a Month

DURING THE DEVELOPMENT PERIOD OF BRITIGANWOOD THE PROBABLE INCREASE IN VALUE OF THIS FRONTAGE WILL BE AT LEAST 50%, AND IN MANY CASES TWO OR THREE TIMES AS MUCH. AS AN INVESTMENT WE BELIEVE THIS BUSINESS FRONTAGE THE MOST VALUABLE ON THE NORTH SIDE FOR THE MAN WHO WANTS A HIGH RATE INVESTMENT ON THE PARTIAL PAYMENT PLAN.

Let us take you to see the property. We will call for you with an automobile on any day if you will telephone our downtown office, Randolph 7400, and ask for the Sales Manager. On Sundays, Wednesdays and Saturdays telephone either to our downtown office or to Monticello 4098. If you prefer to come out yourself, take a through route Kedzie Avenue car north and ride to the end of the line (Kedzie and Foster Avenues), where you will meet our automobile. No matter what the condition of the weather is we will make it convenient and comfortable for you to see this property.

'YARDS' ADDS TO MAYOR'S LEAD ON 'TRIBUNE' BALLOT

Sweitzer More than 500 Votes Ahead of the Entire Field.

Mayor Thompson added 100 votes yesterday to his lead over Judge Olson for the Republican nomination for mayor as indicated by THE TRIBUNE straw vote. He now leads the judge by 344 in a total of nearly 16,000 votes. Robert M. Sweitzer continues to lead all candidates with a total of 500 more votes than that of the mayor. Thomas Carey, Sweitzer's principal rival, is more than 2,000 votes behind him, in spite of the fact that he led Sweitzer by seven votes yesterday.

Results of the poll to date follow:

Republicans—Total vote, 8,152. Candidates, Thompson, 3,475; Olson, 3,131; Merriam, 1,546.

Democrats—Total vote, 5,919. Candidates, Sweitzer, 3,977; Carey, 1,942.

Socialist—Collins, 427.

Labor—Fitzpatrick, 1,237.

The Democratic vote does not include the scattering vote for Heidelmeier, which would bring it above the 6,000 mark if recorded.

Labor Candidate Leads.

The most surprising thing about yesterday's poll was that John Fitzpatrick, the Labor candidate for mayor, led the entire field on the day's vote. Thomas Carey ran second, Sweitzer third, and Mayor Thompson fourth.

This upset was accounted for by the fact that the majority of the votes were obtained in the stockyards district, where the Labor candidate and Carey are both peculiarly strong. More than half of the entire vote was cast by employés of Armour & Co., the vote being taken with the assistance of the company's department managers. Fitzpatrick led all competitors in the plant with 401 votes.

Fitzpatrick also led the field in the poll taken at the Kedzie avenue and Van Buren street car barns, beating Sweitzer by one vote.

Outside of Stockyards.

Carey ran well in the stockyards district, but he was nowhere in any other part of the city, and Sweitzer was therefore able to cut down his rival's big stockyards lead to the disappearing point.

Judge Olson ran ahead of Mayor Thompson in the vicinity of the stockyards, but was way behind him in the Armour plant, where many Negroes are employed. In the car barns Olson only got two votes against forty-eight for the mayor. Olson ran ahead of the mayor on a poll taken along North avenue.

Merriam had his worst day, making no particular showing anywhere. His total vote was only thirteen above that cast for Collins, the Socialist candidate, and in the Armour plant even Heidelmeier, the "self-starter" in the Democratic race, received more votes than the captain.

Defiers of "Dry" Law Are Blamed for Radical Unrest

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—Agitation throughout the country of various plans to ignore, evade, or defeat national prohibition was denounced in the senate today by Senator Jones of Washington, Republican, in an address urging observance of law and order as a means of suppressing radical unrest.

3 CANDIDATES

How Olson Managers Size Up Their Candidate and His Opponents.

THE Olson headquarters last night issued the following statement under the captain, "Thompson, Olson, Merriam—Which?" and declared that a vote for Merriam is "half a vote for Thompson":

THOMPSON.

War record bad. Opposed sending troops, munitions, and food to Europe. Protected anti-war meetings. Not loyal to party. His official organ, The Republican, supported twenty-seven Democratic candidates in the November senatorial election. Promised to rid the city of criminals and crime. The holdup man and bank robber is still here. The thief and bandit still flourishes. Promised to enforce the laws and eliminate graft. Has defied civil service and filled the city hall with sixty day appointees for partisan purposes. Promised to be mayor and has been found wanting. Surrounds himself with inferior advisors. Main thought is for personal machine.

OLSON.

He is true to his party and loyal to the nation. Has served in public office for twenty-two years with success and honor. Is an executive of tried and proven ability. Organized and has directed the Municipal court of Chicago—the greatest court of its kind in the world. Has never been defeated after nomination. Has never signed any pledge, nor bound himself to any faction or organization in Chicago. Gives his word to uphold the civil service laws. Has given his word to wipe out graft in the city hall and to end all combinations and cliques of organized contractors and grafters which now are robbing the taxpayers. Promises to appoint men in his cabinet who are trained for the work they are to do. Will give taxpayers one dollar's worth of service for every dollar of public money spent in administering the affairs of the city. He will transact the business of the city from the mayor's office, and will be accessible then to all citizens every working day. If nominated his election in April is assured. Vote for Harry Olson and win the election in April.

MERRIAM.

Ran for mayor under more propitious conditions than now and failed of election and cannot win now. Eight years ago appealed to the "wets" for votes by signing the "wet" pledge. Never has been tried in a high executive office. A vote for Merriam is half a vote for Thompson.

SOCIAL WORKERS ISSUE APPEAL TO AID MERRIAM

A committee of 100 women, well known in civic work, in business, in the professions, in education, in social service, and in philanthropy, issued the following appeal to the women of Chicago to vote for the nomination of Capt. Charles E. Merriam in the Republican mayoral primary:

"The women voters constitute the greatest reserve army of good government in Chicago. Behind the candidacy of Capt. Charles E. Merriam in his campaign stand the largest number of public spirited women who have ever assembled in support of a governmental leader in Chicago. Capt. Merriam stands for those principles of government which honest men and women have held to be the salvation of our republic. Therefore, in this emergency the undersigned are making their appeal to the women of this community.

"On Tuesday next a battle of democracy will be fought in Chicago. The same issue which divided the armies of the free nations from the hosts of the central empires along that bloody line which during four years severed Europe and distributed its unutterable tragedy throughout, the world must be decided by ballots in this city. Capt. Merriam is by virtue of his record, of his character and proven capacity, the leader of those men and women of Chicago who believe in an honest, efficient, and justly representative government."

Among the signers are Mrs. M. L. Purvin, Mrs. B. W. Sippy, Miss Jane Addams, Mrs. Raymond Robins, Mrs. Henry Solomon, Mrs. W. S. Hefferan, Mrs. Emmons Blaine, Miss Amelia Sears, and Miss Harriet Vittum.

ROBBERS HANG THEIR VICTIM.

Charleroi, Pa., Feb. 22.—Otto Boehme was found dead in the basement of his butcher shop here today, hanging from a joist, blindfolded and gagged, with his hands and legs tied. Robbery is believed to have been the motive for the crime. Boehme had been battered over the head before being hanged.

MAYOR AND AIDS FORCE DELAY ON BUDGET DEBATE

Council Adjourns Without Action on $35,000,000 Expenditures.

Mayor Thompson and his aldermanic aids were accused yesterday of bringing about a needless delay in the city council's consideration of the $35,000,000 budget. The council must hasten this work, as the legislature is to be asked for authority to increase the tax rate to finance the expenditures to be provided by the annual appropriation bill.

The council was to have remained in session yesterday until the work was completed. Instead of doing this the mayor's forces forced an adjournment until Wednesday so the aldermen could go with the mayor to the opening of the new Monroe street bridge. It was declared that the council could have finished its work after the bridge opening, but no effort was made to have the aldermen reconvene.

"Shame," Says Richert.

"It is a shame to do this," said Ald. John A. Richert, chairman of the finance committee. "The legislature is kicking now because the city is late in getting in its tax rate increase program."

"It should not have been permitted," said Ald. H. D. Capitain.

As soon as the council convened Ald. John Powers made a motion to have the council adjourn to Wednesday. This carried, because all the aldermen were not present. The vote was 22 yeas to 15 nays on adjournment. The roll call was:

Pay Increases Put Off.

The aldermen were to have considered an item of $2,750,000 for pay increases for city employés. The Chicago bureau of public efficiency and allied civic organizations have declared against these increases, as it means more than a $2 tax rate for the city's corporate fund. The civic organizations recommend boosting the $1.10 corporate fund tax rate to $2, but most of the aldermen want to retain the salary increases and this would put the increase over the $2 mark.

Building Trades Council Gives Thanks to Carey

The following letter from Simon O'Donnell, president of the Chicago Building Trades council, to Thomas Carey, candidate for Democratic nomination for mayor, was made public yesterday:

"It is with sincere gratitude and pleasure that the executive committee of the Building Trades council of Chicago note the effective measures you are taking to revive the building industry in our city.

"Your offer to reduce the price of brick and your appeal to the managers of the other building material concerns to reduce the price of their commodities is joyful news to the thousands of building mechanics and laborers who are out of work."

SHOOTS WOMAN, KILLS SELF.

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 22.—Jealousy is said to have prompted John Benedict, 54 years old, to shoot and probably fatally wound Mrs. Ella Harmison, 49, and then shoot himself today at the home of Mrs. Harmison, where he roomed. Benedict died this afternoon.

SALVATION ARMY QUITS ALMS USE OF TAMBOURINE

New York, Feb. 22.—Tambourines and free will offering boxes which for more than thirty-five years have been used by the Salvation Army in gathering funds, are to be abandoned, according to a statement issued here today by Commander Evangeline Booth in announcing plans for a "drive" for $10,000,000 next May.

"Indorsed by millions of new friends and adherents because of its successful war relief work in France," the statement says, "the old time methods of soliciting alms would be unwarranted waste of time and an imposition on the public."

In future, it was decided by the army's executive council, there will be one general effort to collect necessary funds, thus giving nearly 250,000 Salvationists, including officers and relief workers, an opportunity "to concentrate on works of mercy upon a greatly increased scale."

FRANKNESS is an admirable quality, and frankly we wish to state that we are moving into temporary quarters because of our inability to secure, at a price that justified our retaining it, a leasehold on the store we have occupied for twenty-six years. We shall be comfortably situated in our new store; our merchandise will be of the same standard quality, and our store service one hundred per cent, as heretofore. We shall reduce stocks materially, and to this end, as well as to get our friends acquainted with the new location, we've decided to offer substantial reductions on the greater portion of our magnificent stock of diamonds, watches, jewelry and silverware. We shall make a call advantageous to the purchaser.

LOVE FEASTS OF LOWELLITES END IN SWEET ACCORD

Allies in Letters Close Celebration of Birth of Writer.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The four day celebration of the centennial of the birth of James Russell Lowell and the marriage of English and American art and letters came to a close this morning with the biggest meeting of the quadruple plated anniversary. Before a jury of a couple of thousand of their peers six men pleaded the cause of the English-American alliance and politely mentioned James Russell Lowell now and then.

"Revealed Us to Ourselves."

William Milligan Sloane, chancellor of the Academy of Arts and Letters, which has had charge of the four days' celebration, presided.

"The common adventure of English speaking men the world around has revealed us to ourselves," Mr. Sloane said. "We are now and henceforth one in action as we have always been in a common liberty expressed in common institutions and a common speech. A moment like that in which we are living marks the consummation of our hearts' desire."

Barrett Wendall gave a complete biographical sketch of the departed, which made one feel as if he had spent a lifetime in an hour at the graveside. Then the fun began.

Oneness Still Prevails.

Alfred Noyes read two poems about the oneness of America and England in literature and life and then Stephen Butler Leacock of Magill university, Canada, author of the utterly delightful nonsense novels, gave one of the most straightforward, sheer American speeches that ever was spoken. America and Canada, equals, friends, proud sharers of the land of promise of the future—and both of them sturdy sons of England—was the theme.

"We know now that when the test comes we stand or fall together because we have a common history and literature," he said.

Poem by Masters.

Samuel McChord Crothers, the university preacher at Harvard university, pronounced a modern benediction by not pronouncing any. But before he sent everybody away happy, Edgar Lee Masters read a poem which he wrote especially for the occasion. It is the official poem of the Lowell centennial.

NO MINORITY TO RULE BY FORCE, BRUNDAGE WARNS

A summary of the life of George Washington was given by Attorney General Edward J. Brundage yesterday at a luncheon of the American Unity club at the Hotel Sherman. Then Mr. Brundage took up the basic principles of the American government. He said:

"Our forefathers wisely protected the rights of minorities against the injustice of majorities and we propose no minority shall govern a majority in this free land by force and violence.

"We propose to pass on to our children the government established by George Washington. We propose it shall continue to be a government of law and order, protecting the weak and limiting the powers of the strong—a government of the people and by the people.

"Let us renew our faith in the institutions which he founded and which have brought so much peace and happiness to mankind."

Davison Retires March 1 as Red Cross Chairman

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Beginning March 1, the American Red Cross will formally change from a war to a peace basis, according to an announcement made today at the headquarters of the Atlantic division, 44 East Twenty-third street. Next Saturday Dr. Livingston Farrand will become chairman of the central committee and ex-officio chairman of the executive committee of the national organization, succeeding to the leadership which on that day will be relinquished by Henry P. Davison, chairman of the Red Cross war council.

OFFER ITALY CHEAPER ENGINES.

ROME, Feb. 21.—An American syndicate was reported today to have offered to state railways any number of locomotives with a 12 per cent reduction on war prices.

STATES TO TAKE PART OF PRE-WAR RAIL CONTROL

W. D. Hines Discusses Problems with Committees.

New York, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Conferences between Walker D. Hines, director general of railroads, and the executive and special war committees of the National Association of Railway and Utility Commissioners have resulted in an understanding that the various states shall at once resume at least a part of their pre-war control of railroads.

The conferences were held in Washington on Wednesday and Thursday. Public Service Commissioner Travis H. Whitney, one of the conferees, today said:

"The state commissions have unanimously contended that the act of congress in section 15, in preserving the police regulations of the states, intended that this should include intrastate rates. The railroad administration has uniformly insisted that such rates were controlled by section 10 of the act, which gave the president power to initiate rates subject to review only by the interstate commerce commission.

Split on Rate Committees.

"Another matter upon which it was impossible to agree related to the rate committees appointed by the director general and consisting in each case of two railroad men and a representative of the shippers.

"There has been dissatisfaction with these committees based upon the belief by the shippers that action upon rates is determined by these committees largely from the point of view of the future welfare of the railroads when they are returned by the government and therefore inimical to the shippers' interest in reduced rates.

"Mr. Hines suggested that a state commissioner be appointed to each of these committees, but the state commissions unanimously refused.

Urges Lower Material Rates.

"The matters agreed upon are very important, for it will now be possible for progress to be made by state commissions in respect to important local measures, such as grade crossing elimination, spur tracks, additional station facilities, and such matters.

"The other matter presented to Director General Hines, particularly by the representatives of the war committee of the national association, was a low rate for the transportation of road material in order to get under way immediately the maximum amount of road construction and thus relieve the employment situation.

"For example, Illinois has voted $60,000,000 for improved roads. The transportation of road material at a low rate will allow an increased amount of roads to be constructed."

SCHOOL GARDEN ARMY ON MARCH

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—Five million boys and girls between 9 and 15, as soldiers in the United States school garden army, is the goal set by the organization for this year. The department of the interior, through the bureau of education, is being assisted by 10,000,000 members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and the National Council of Women in the endeavor.

The school garden army in the first year of its existence recruited 1,500,000 little soldiers of the rake and hoe. Today it numbers nearly 3,000,000 boys and girls, and it is expected 5,000,000 children will be wearing the insignia.

"A garden for every child; every child in a garden," is the motto. The actual work of organization will be carried out this year, as last, along military lines by the teachers.

"Over There" and "Over Here"

Legions of Men Now Shave This New-Day Way

THOUSANDS of men "Over There" now shave without Soap, Brush or Mug. There's no hot water on tap in the trenches—and cold water and soap make a hard combination. Until KOLAX, the new, scientific "Speed Shave" that takes the place of Soap, Brush and Mug was introduced, many saved their tea in order to have hot water for shaving. Now, thousands—officers and men alike—use KOLAX, with cold water, or without water at all.

No Soap—No Brush No Mug

Not only in army and navy life, but in civilian life, KOLAX is rapidly taking the place of Soap, Brush and Mug for shaving.

Scientists have always realized the injurious effects of rubbing soap alkali into the open pores—inorder to soften the beard.

Every man who shaves with soap knows the irritation—the "after-shaving" soreness.

Now, at last science has perfected in KOLAX a cream that takes the place of soap—requires no lathering or rubbing in—and, instead of irritating and inflaming the skin as soap does, is a tonic to the skin, a wonderful help to tender, easily irritated skins—a cool, refreshing lotion in itself.

A One-Minute Comfort Shave

No Soap—to irritate and inflame the skin—no Brush, with danger of infection—no antiquated Mug. Simply dampen the face with either hot or cold water—apply KOLAX with the finger tips, without rubbing—shave.

KOLAX saves time, cuts out all waste motion, and leaves the skin wonderfully smooth, soft and velvety.

KOLAX softens the beard instantly, and is antiseptic and healing.

When you finish shaving this new-day way you need use no witch hazel, bay rum or any other emollient—for KOLAX is a soothing emollient in itself.

SEEKS FUNDS TO GIVE 200 FRENCH FAMILIES 'START'

Author Will Appeal to Rich Chicagoans in Blackstone Talk.

To care for 200 impoverished French families, to shelter, clothe, and feed them until time restores to them their homes, and to help each family to resume its former place in business and industry is the self-chosen task of Mrs. E. W. Dodd, who has come to Chicago to seek the assistance of public spirited citizens.

Mrs. Dodd is an American and has lived in New York and Boston. She is the author of "Heroic France" and other books. Her home for eighteen years has been at Le Nanoir de Vasouy, a parish in Normandy. At Honfleur, a port on the River Seine, near Le Manoir de Vasouy, 2,000 refugees are dependent on the charity of their countrymen. A small group of Americans has befriended them through the mediation of Mrs. Dodd.

Has Program for Each.

Her purpose in coming to Chicago is to secure the financial aid of Chicagoans toward the rehabilitation of the families she is shielding from destitution.

She knows the cost of making these families self-supporting once more and has a separate reconstruction program for each family. When conditions warrant, the families, one at a time, will be returned to their own homes. She will aid them in opening up their shops if they be shopkeepers, or in getting cows and horses and in rebuilding their houses, if they be farmers.

Mrs. Dodd will give a lecture in the English room of the Blackstone hotel Monday. She will explain her plans for insuring the future of the refugees at Honfleur, although her topic will be "Sketches of French Political Life." Her talk will include an intimate description of Premier Clemenceau, based upon the letters and acquaintance of a mutual friend.

Coöperates with Mayor.

Mrs. Dodd works in coöperation with the mayor of Honfleur. She was associated with the American Red Cross in France until the organization suspended activities outside the devastated zones.

The withdrawal of Red Cross assistance in the refugee settlement at Honfleur made 2,000 men, women, and children entirely dependent on the mayor, Mrs. Dodd, and a few nuns who are caring for a group of orphans.

Mrs. Dodd works without the aid of committees, her only assistants being her own servants. For nearly five years she has provided for hundreds, her own private purse and the contributions she has obtained from private sources in this country supplying the funds. She submits to each of her contributors a detailed statement of the purpose to which their money has been put.

Wealthy Folk Interested.

She was introduced to a Boston audience by Prof. Barrett Wendell of Harvard university. Among those interested in her work are Mrs. Thomas Ryan, wife of the financier; Mrs. Claus Spreckels, wife of the millionaire sugar manufacturer, and Mrs. Allen Curtis, Miss Mary Loring, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, and Dr. and Mrs. Frothingham, all prominent in Boston society.

Mrs. Dodd will sail for France March 2, taking with her the clothing, shoes, food, and supplies which have been contributed since she came to America. She personally distributes the articles. It is her plan to visit each family and learn exactly the needs and the future outlook for each.

"I could tell you of many, many pitiful cases of suffering," Mrs. Dodd told a reporter.

"I wish America knew," she mused. "It will be a great pity if America slips into apathy or indifference while France still suffers."

PERSHING SAYS AMERICA MUST HONOR HEROES

General Gives Praise to Life of Washington.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gen. Pershing, Herbert Hoover, Ambassador William G. Sharp, and Admiral William S. Benson were speakers today at the annual luncheon in honor of Washington's birthday given by the American club of Paris at the Palais D'Orsay.

Responding to the toast to the American army, Gen. Pershing expressed his thanks to the American people for the support they had given to the expeditionary forces.

"Whether keeping lonely vigil in the trenches, whether attacking machine gun nests, or performing the drudgery of the rear, or supplying the front line, each man has done his duty," Gen. Pershing said, "and he has felt that he had behind him the support of the whole country. By his courage, indomitable will, his splendid organization and his tenacity, the American soldier has turned impending defeat into overwhelming victory. I drink to the American soldier, than whom there is no better in the wolrd today. Long live the American soldier!"

"First League of Nations."

LONDON, Feb. 22.—George Washington employed the idea of a league of nations in the American constitutional convention, declared John W. Davis, the American ambassador, in a speech at the Washington day dinner of the English speaking union. He likened the American colonies, with their new found freedom, immediately after the revolution to the nations of the world today.

"The former colonies," the ambassador added, "which Washington had led to victory had proclaimed themselves free and independent states, as free and independent of one another as they professed to be of the country whose allegiance they had shaken off, and when the common danger was over quarrels broke out among themselves which not only threatened war but in at least one case led to an armed conflict. It was the constitutional convention over which Gen. Washington presided that brought them together in a 'league of nations' and set up a tribunal to settle their disputes."

$50,000 BLAZE IN LOOP SHIELDS BOLD BURGLAR

Matinee Crowd Watches Randolph Street Spectacle.

A loop fire which drew large crowds, halted traffic, and burned through five floors of the building at 164 West Randolph street yesterday evening, did not interfere in the least with a burglar at work next door. He got his booty while burglar alarms sounded and then got away under the eyes of Chief of Police John J. Garrity and twenty policemen.

The fire was the most dangerous loop blaze of several months. The damage is estimated at $50,000. Valuable pieces of crockery and stained glass in the establishment of Sprague, Smith & Co. were shattered. The company occupied the first floor and basement in the double-front store at 164-166 West Randolph street. This firm suffered the heaviest loss.

The blaze started on the second floor and the flames spread through the elevator shaft and downward to the basement and upward to the fourth and fifth floors. Packing materials produced thick, black bursts of smoke, which hampered the firemen and darkened the northwest corner of the loop.

Traffic Jammed.

Street cars to the west and northwest were blocked. The traffic congestion grew so threatening that Chief Garrity summoned twenty policemen and went to the scene in person.

In the midst of the excitement the burglar alarm began to ring at 168 West Randolph. No one paid attention as it was believed the fire had caused a short circuit and set off the bell.

A few hours later it was discovered that a burglar had carried away a case of expensive meerschaum and briar pipes from the stockrooms of the American Briar Pipe company.

Building Vacant for Day.

There were no injuries to firemen or occupants of the building. The offices and stores were closed on account of Washington's birthday, which the burglar apparently took into consideration.

The building is an old one and adjoins the Briggs hotel. The dense smoke filtered through the windows of the hotel and frightened a number of guests to the street.

An engine skidded on its run to the fire and crashed into a Broadway car at Clark and Randolph streets. The horses were thrown to the pavement, but regained their feet unhurt. There were no injuries.

Theater goers were coming from the matinées at the time the blaze started. Hundreds thronged to the spot.

The second floor was occupied by the Illinois Bronze Powder company. The American Wire works leased the third, fourth, and part of the fifth floors.

WINTER WASTED ON FARM LEADS TO FISTICUFFS

Tenant Lands on Landlord He Said Deluded Him.

"I'm tired of feeding my wife and children on frozen turnips and skimmed milk, borrowed from the neighbors!"

A clenched fist caught Morris Seigel square in the face just a moment after his assailant spoke the words quoted. It was the climax of a quarrel yesterday between Seigel and a tenant on his farm in the office of Seigel at 511 Lumber Exchange building.

The angry tenant is Fred Gerber, who, since November, has been living on Seigel's farm at St. Anne, Ill., near Kankakee. He took his wife and four children to St. Anne at that time. Under an agreement with Seigel, he was to work the farm on shares.

Seigel promised to advance $100 the first month and $100 three months later, says Gerber.

Charges Broken Bargain.

Gerber declares that Seigel failed to live up to his part of the bargain. The altercation in Seigel's office occurred after Gerber tried to collect the $200 and settle his grievances with Seigel. He threatened violence and Seigel's secretary sent a hurry call for the police. Two officers witnessed the delivery of the blow which ended the act. Gerber was taken to jail.

He said last night that Seigel induced him to move to St. Anne by telling him that an abundance of firewood could be obtained on the place and marketed. The wood would sell for $16 a cord, Seigel told him. After working through the winter he has a large quantity of wood corded, but cannot sell it, and has been obliged to seek the assistance of neighbors.

Figured in Scandals.

Seigel figured in police scandals in 1915 and was under indictment for "selling" promotions to police officers. He was charged with furnishing sets of questions to a police sergeant who was taking the examinations for a lieutenancy. He was acquitted. In 1908 he was indicted on a charge of conspiracy, based on the claim that he conspired with Benjamin Sherer and Sherer's wife to obtain $20,000 damages from the city for alleged injuries to their son Hyman, who was said to have been hurt by a fall on the sidewalk.

Authorizes Soldiers to Retain Their Uniforms

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—The senate today adopted the conference report on the bill authorizing men discharged from the military service to retain their uniforms and allowing them 5 cents a mile for travel to their homes from places of discharge. The house is expected to take similar action within a few days.

JAMES M. BECK'S SPEECH DEFENDS CONSTITUTION

No Attack on Wilson in His Address at Union League Celebration.

James M. Beck of New York delivered the principal address at the Union League club's Washington's birthday celebration at the Auditorium yesterday morning.

Mr. Beck's address was a defense of the constitution; an appeal to the people to uphold it; a warning that from various sources there are movements to upset some of the principles laid down in it which are essentially the very foundations of this nation.

As to President Wilson, Mr. Beck's prepared address contained no such startling attacks as those which aroused so much comment after his Lincoln day address before the Republican club of New York. On that occasion he attacked the president as "undermining the constitution," as seeking to commit the allies to a "peace without victory," and pronounced Mr. Wilson's foreign policy a "black stain of dishonor upon the American people."

League of Nations' Treaty.

In his speech yesterday Mr. Beck said with reference to the senate and the president and the league of nations treaty:

"Current events show that the senate has not abdicated its great duty under the express language of the constitution. It is very gratifying to note that President Wilson has invited the whole committee on foreign affairs, without regard to party, to consider the tentative draft of the league of nations treaty. That accords with the best precedents of our history.

"Let us hope that the senate in its consideration of this far reaching proposal of a league of nations will take such action, either in its acceptance, rejection, or amendment, as it thinks best without dividing on party lines, for the question is infinitely above party.

"If it failed to exercise its own judgment upon the broadest patriotic lines it would set a precedent which in the future would go far to put the destinies of this mighty nation in its foreign relations in the exclusive control of one man."

Washington the Noblest Man.

The speaker opened his address with a tribute to George Washington, of whom he said:

"We have met today to honor the noblest man that ever lived in the tide of time. I would add 'the greatest' if the word 'great' were not susceptible of so many shades of meaning. If greatness be measured in the last analysis by achievements of an enduring and beneficent value, then George Washington accomplished the greatest work of modern history in the foundation of the American republic."

Continuing, Mr. Beck traced the achievements of Washington, finding that his work in holding the colonies together during the revolutionary war was but preliminary to his greater work in welding the nation together and in shaping, through his mighty influence that great document, the American constitution.

Public Opinion in America.

The speaker then took up the present attitude of the American people toward the constitution. He said:

"I want to challenge your very serious attention to the question as to how far public opinion in America still accepts the fundamental principles of the constitution. This question is of vital importance, for there is no greater error than to suppose that the constitution has some inherent vitality to insure its perpetuity.

"The breath of its life is public opinion, and when that public opinion ceased to support any or all of its fundamental principles, they will perish. In a democracy the living soul of any human institution must be the belief of the people in its wisdom and justice."

The speaker said he appreciated that the constitution, in its administrative details, must be adapted to changing conditions, but that there were certain fundamental principles in it which are not changeable if the spirit of our institutions is to survive.

Representative Government.

These foundation principles, as enumerated by Mr. Beck, include, first, representative government.

"In the discussions before the constitutional convention all speakers made a distinction between that which they called 'democracy' and that which they called 'republicanism.' By the former they meant direct legislative action by the people, or, as we should say, a pure democracy; by 'republicanism' they meant representative government.

"However much the fathers disagreed upon other questions, they were substantially of one accord in the opinion that direct legislative action by the people was impracticable. They believed that no wise legislative action was possible without conference and that in a commonwealth of many scattered communities such a conference was impracticable.

"Representative government no longer has the complete acquiescence of the American people. Our constitutional system consists not only in the federal constitution, but also in the organic laws of the forty-eight states of the Union. Together they comprise the organic law of the American commonwealth. It is to be noted that in twenty-two states of the Union the principle of the initiative and the referendum, which is clearly antagonistic to the doctrine of representative government, is a part of the organic law of those states, and clearly indicates a very general distrust of the representative principle.

Legislators Blamed.

"This cannot be said to be without some justification, and is undoubtedly due to the venality and inexperience of so many state legislators. The people of these states obviously do not trust their chosen representatives; but this failure of the people to elect worthy representatives—true 'selectmen'—does not challenge the theory of representative government, but only the laxity of our civil life, due to many complex causes, which has resulted in this lack of faith.

"It cannot, however, be questioned that if the principle of the initiative and referendum continues to gain faith and is ultimately made a part of the federal constitution representative government will be greatly impaired, and as a principle, wholly destroyed."

Roasts Prohibition Amendment.

The second principle of the constitution named by Mr. Beck is the dual form of government—the divided federal and state sovereignty. He pointed out that without this compromise with the states the constitution could not have been adopted. In his discussion of this point, Mr. Beck cited federal prohibition. He said:

"Whatever our opinions may be with respect to stautory prohibition, no fair minded man can question that in the adoption of the eighteenth amendment—if indeed it has been legally adopted—the principle of home rule has suffered a serious, if not fatal, impairment. Nowhere in the constitution is the slightest trace of a purpose on the part of the fathers to determine questions of individual morality or personal habit.

"In a country of one hundred millions of people, inhabiting a vast continent, which begins with the edge of the arctic and ends with the edge of the tropics, and which is inhabited by men of many races and varying social standards, it is, in my judgment, a hazardous experiment to impose by a rigid constitutional amendment a doubtful principle of morality, which, in my judgment, justly offends the pride of individual liberty.

"I regard the adoption of the eighteenth amendment as the destruction of the principle of home rule, and, as such, the deadliest menace to the perpetuity of the republic that has arisen in the last half century."

Courts Must Be Free.

In enunciating his third, fourth, and fifth principles Mr. Beck declared the courts must be free and independent. He said the recall of judges was fatal to this freedom.

The sixth fundamental principle enumerated by the speaker was the concurrent power of the senate and the executive over the foreign relations of the government.

Under this heading Mr. Beck made the statements already quoted respecting the right of the senate to participate in the decision regarding the league of nations.

"I do not claim," Mr. Beck concluded, "that the constitution is a perfect instrument. The fathers themselves recognized their own fallibility or they would not have made provision for its amendment; but I do contend that its fundamental principles are eternal verities, and cannot be impaired or destroyed without reducing the noble fabric to a cureless ruin.

"Unless the present tendency to change the constitution by amendment, interpretation, or usage, is checked by a sound public opinion, it will one day become a noble and splendid ruin like the Parthenon, but, like the Parthenon, useless for practical purposes and an object of melancholy interest. It is sadly true that Washington's supreme achievement is being slowly undermined by forces which, if not checked, will result in its subversion. Let all patriotic Americans on this, his birthday, take up the cry, 'Save the constitution!'"

His Respects to Hearst.

At the annual meeting of the club in the evening Mr. Beck paid his respects to William Randolph Hearst.

After relating a humorous anecdote of an occasion when he and James J. Corbett, then at the height of his popularity, were rival attractions in a small town—Corbett being by far the main attraction—he said:

"Now I feel, if I may be pardoned a reference to the local battle that I have been playing against the Jim Corbett of American journalism, Mr. Hearst. I want to frankly say that in such a struggle I am hopelessly outclassed, because Mr. Hearst has a happy virtue of not telling the truth, whereas I am somewhat embarrassed by some regard for the limits of truth."

Following this with a few more anecdotes he proceeded to speak of Washington's farewell message. He quoted Washington's warning to the United States to keep out of European entanglements and cited the lines, ". . . it must be unwise to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her (Europe's) policies, or the ordinary combinations of her friendships and enmities."

Mr. Beck laid stress on the word "ordinary," pointing out that in the world war the United States was bound to Europe by no ordinary tie.

He declared that regardless of whether a league of nations was formed or not, the century old hatreds of the Europeans would breed trouble.

"Never was the prospect for the world's peace so unpromising, as it is today," he declared.

SEES DANGER TO U. S. IN SUBTLE ATTACKS UPON NOTED LEADERS

"FOR the last ten years there has been secretly sown, by pen, type, and tongue, malicious items intended evidently to destroy our respect for our national leaders," declared Bernard J. Cigrand in addressing the Chicago Political Equality league, on the occasion of its annual Washington program, in the league clubrooms in the Stevens building yesterday.

"While Jefferson and Lincoln are in this victimized group," continued the speaker, "the prime purpose is to include Washington and to picture him as an ambitious, penurious aristocrat, devoid of real, democratic impulses."

Mr. Cigrand said that no greater damage can come to our republic than to become indifferent to the public virtues of our leaders.

"To rob Washington of his deep regard for democracy is to eliminate from his heroic career the very source of patriotism," said the speaker.

MANN TO FIGHT FOR SPEAKERSHIP, RAPS OPPONENTS

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Congressman James R. Mann of Chicago, minority leader of the house, and in the opinion of his friends the logical candidate for Republican speaker of the next house, declared today that his candidacy for the place has not been killed off by the action of the Indiana and Pennsylvania delegations in declaring for Representative Gillett of Massachusetts.

Mr. Mann also paid his respects to Will H. Hays, chairman of the Republican national committee, Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, and Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, all of whom have interested themselves in Gillett's candidacy.

"If the Republican members of the house intend to permit Mr. Hays or Senators Penrose and Lodge to dictate legislation in the next house, then, of course, they do not desire me for speaker," Mr. Mann said.

"If I am elected speaker the Republicans of the house may rest assured that I will not permit any interference from outside sources with the business of the house or with whatever legislation the house may desire to enact."

Congressman Madden of Illinois, Mann's campaign manager, today said Mann would be elected unless individual house members go back on their pledges.

Where Ovaltine Is Malnutrition Cannot Remain
OVALTINE
FIGHTS FOR HEALTH

OVALTINE FOOD PLUS

I AM OVALTINE THE FOOD KNIGHT

How I Put to Flight the Witch Malnutrition Who Had Cast a Spell Over Growing Children

And at last my travels took me to a city where the Witch Malnutrition had caused many children to become underweight, under-developed, slow to learn, and easily tired.

Into the homes of both rich and poor she went, and wherever she went the children suffered sorrowfully.

"Why do the rich allow her to remain," I asked of a Prominent Citizen, "e'en though the poor may be too weak to drive her away?"

"Alas!" he grieved, "the rich are either too blind to see that the Witch Malnutrition has cast her spell over their children, or they are too proud to admit it."

"Does she ever visit your home?" I queried.

"What," he indignantly cried, "my little ones suffer from Malnutrition—preposterous!"

But when to his dining room I went, there—behind the chairs of his pallid, frail little children—was the Witch Malnutrition. She had been a daily visitant at his table, but he, quick to notice her presence in other homes, had never realized that she had bewitched his own children.

When she saw me she straightway fled, for she knew full well that wherever I stood guard she dared neither to remain nor to return.

So into every home where the Witch Malnutrition has been, I went; and wherever I went she fled, never to come back.

And in homes where sorrow once was, happiness now reigns. Children once listless have become vigorous, their faces plump, their bodies strong and healthy. To them now belongs the joy of living because to them has come OVALTINE—the Food Knight—who won their fight for health.

MORAL—Ovaltine will give your children health and strength.

RAFT BOARDS ENTERTAIN THEIR SOLDIER HEROES

Patriotic Workers Aid Plans to Care for Warriors.

Workers of the Patriotic Community council banished politics from six exemption board districts in Chicago last night to entertain hundreds of discharged soldiers, sailors, and marines and advance the city-wide coöperation in caring for the needs of fighting men. Uniforms and newly acquired "cits" mingled in the crowd that enjoyed the open house entertainment given by the woman's committee of the Third ward at Sinai center headquarters, 4254 Grand boulevard. Returned men of the Fiftieth and Fifty-first districts were entertained at Limits hall, 2656 North Clark street, where Attorney General E. J. Brundage urged coöperation in serving Chicago fighters.

Dinner and Dance.

A dinner, welcome home celebration, and dance were given for 179 discharged men at the Carl Schurz High school, and more than 100 boys enjoyed the luncheon and dance given in their honor at the Mont Clare field house, in the Seventy-ninth district.

Cicero opened the town hall to entertain sixty discharged men and celebrated their homecoming. An additional sixty men attended the homecoming entertainment at the Jackson school, in the Forty-third district.

The community service will be continued and will be made a medium for aiding all fighting men who need jobs, emergency beds, and like care. Entertainers were furnished to each community celebration by the War Camp Community service.

Gen. Wood Speaks.

Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood told the West End Woman's club that the most important work Chicago has to do at present is to look after the welfare of the returning fighter.

"The splendid coöperation of welfare societies and war service agencies has achieved excellent results in opening lodging places and securing meals for the men who are in need," he said in part, "but the work is by no means completed. All Chicago must take a direct interest in securing jobs for the men who gave up everything to go into the service.

"The returning soldier has much to contend with. There are people low enough, people on the level with the man who robs the dead after a great calamity, who would relieve every homecoming soldier of his money. Women of Chicago can help us to guard against this greater evil. Make life for the returning man such that he will know his efforts have been appreciated."

Leaves for Inspection.

Gen. Wood left last night for Columbus barracks to begin an inspection tour of his department. Col. C. B. Baker will carry on the work of coördinating all service agencies. He hopes to launch a city-wide "soldier service week" movement on Monday.

Secretary of Labor Wilson yesterday joined the army of United States employment agency boosters in urging members of the house of representatives to support the appropriation needed to continue the free employment service.

"I feel that the government employment service is absolutely necessary now to keep industrial unrest at a minimum throughout the country," he declared in a letter to Representative Edward Keating.

WOMEN VOTERS COST $2,347,825 IN 5 YEARS HERE

Goodnow Gives Figures; Makes No Comment on Suffrage.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

The woman voter is expensive, according to County Commissioner Goodnow.

He says she has cost Chicago $2,347,825.55 in the last five years out of a total election expense of $6,683,820.83. The commissioner has been a judge, and so is discreet enough to avoid saying more. He refrains from telling how often women have changed the result of a primary or election, how frequently they carry a bond issue. He says nothing concerning the benefits received by the people from equal suffrage.

Cost Is $2,347,825.

The commissioner is not afraid of the suffragists but he contents himself with saying that the "additional cost of elections occasioned by the adoption of the woman's suffrage act, based on the total woman's registration in each of the following years" is:

Year.	Registration.	Cost.
1914	166,560	$322,070
1915	282,291	297,221
1916	306,830	749,080
1917	301,238	417,598
1918	192,772	551,854
Total		$2,347,825

This is one of the tabulations in the commissioner's "cost of elections" which he has said that he intends to mail to various civic organizations:

Total Cost $6,683,820.

In another place he presents this tabulation of the total cost of elections which were under the jurisdiction of the election commissioners:

Year.	Cost.
1914	$1,110,976
1915	805,825
1916	1,992,414
1917	1,102,484
1918	1,672,119
Total	$6,683,820

Salary Boost Costly.

In contrast to the expense charged up against the women Commissioner Goodnow gives the "additional cost of elections occasioned by the enactment of the law increasing the salaries of the judges and clerks of election from $5 to $7 on primary and election days" as follows:

Year.	Cost.
1914	$63,160
1915	31,700
1916	87,520
1917	44,540
1918	89,800
Total	$316,720

The city council at its next session is scheduled to consider the annual budget. In its present shape the budget provides $1,243,178 for the election commissioners to be paid by the city. The city's appropriation last year was $891,020.

BOTH WATER AND WOMAN'S YELL ROUT BURGLAR

One lusty shriek and a curtain barrage of bath water served to put to flight a Negro burglar who cautiously opened the bathroom door while Mrs. George Brade was occupying the tub last night at her home, 3607 Lake Park avenue.

The aquatic surprise failed to recover $90 in cash, a pair of diamond earrings, a finger ring, and a watch the prowler had collected.

"I was alone and taking a bath at 6:30," Mrs. Brade related to the police, "when suddenly the bathroom door opened and a 6 foot Negro peered in. I screamed and threw water at him. He fled and was well away when I started a search. He came through the kitchen window and had taken the valuables before he came to the bathroom, which he probably mistook for a bedroom.

"The man was about 30 years old, 6 feet tall, and weighed about 200 pounds."

Seven Creams

Now You Can Have a Special Cream for Your Particular Skin Condition

WHATEVER the defects that are keeping your skin from having the beautiful, clear glow of health, they can be remedied.

There are seven different Marinello Creams; each one specially prepared to meet a special skin condition—based on the indisputable fact that no one cream could overcome all skin defects. Does your face feel drawn and dry? Or is your skin too oily? Is it marred by unsightly blemishes? Is it sallow and dead-looking? For each of these conditions Marinello offers a different cream, scientifically compounded to rectify the ill and restore to the skin the delicate texture and bloom of perfect health.

Before being offered to you through drug and department stores, these creams have been tested under the most exacting conditions by more than 3,500 beauty shops and endorsed by their customers—women who spare no pains to keep their complexions in perfect condition.

Why you should not wash your face

Never use soap and water during the day. They irritate the delicate skin tissues without completely cleansing them. Lettuce Cream coaxes out of the pores all of the hidden dirt which soap and water cannot remove and it leaves your face feeling smooth and fresh. You can be sure that your skin needs this Marinello Cream.

Send for your one of the "seven"

Study your complexion critically in the mirror. Then by means of the opposite chart pick out the Marinello Cream which your skin needs. For the attached coupon and five 3 cent stamps we will send you a sample of the cream you select and also, included in a very complete little Traveler's Trial Package, miniature packages of Lettuce Cream, Nardys Face Powder, Nardys Toilet Water, Rouge Vanitab, Rose Leaf Jelly (for rough hands), and booklet on care of your skin.

Chart of Marinello Seven Creams

Lettuce Cream
for cleansing the skin. It cleans more thoroughly than soap and water and without irritation.

Tissue Cream
for a rough, dry skin. It builds up the skin and gives it the extra nourishment which it needs.

Astringent Cream
for an oily skin. It restrains the too abundant secretion of oil.

Whitening Cream
for a sallow skin. Gives your skin that "pink and white" roseleaf quality.

Acne Cream
for blemishes and blackheads. This disagreeable condition may be overcome in a short while if you are faithful to the use of this cream.

Motor Cream
for skin protection. Neither wind nor weather can harm your skin if you fortify it with Motor Cream first.

Foundation Cream
before using powder. It makes the powder go on so much more smoothly and stay longer.

To supplement the action of the Creams, always apply Marinello Powder before venturing out.

Used and Recommended by More than 3500 Beauty Shops

A better powder for you

You will like Marinello Face Powder. It spreads so easily, "stays on" so long—yet it is difficult to detect because it is fine-grained and very natural in tint. It has an elusive, delicate perfume that is charming.

Get Marinello preparations at department and drug stores and at the Marinello shops. If your dealer has not yet received his supply, we will appreciate your giving us his name.

MAROON BASKET TEAM BEATS MICHIGAN BY THREE POINTS

JESS, JACK, TEX, ACCIDENT RISKS OF $50,000 EACH

Promoter Rickard Guards Against Mishaps for Title Bouts July 4.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Jess Willard, heavyweight champion of the world, is to be insured for $50,000. So is Jack Dempsey, challenger for the title, who is to battle Willard on the afternoon of July 4. That isn't all. Tex Rickard, the South American cattleman, who, with Frank Flournoy, Memphis cotton operator, is promoting the bout, also is going to take out insurance for the same amount as Willard and Dempsey.

This $150,000 will be risk or accident insurance. Rickard will pay the premiums for all three, as he wants to be certain that Willard and Dempsey will enter the ring according to contract on July 4. If anything should happen, he wants to be protected financially. With that end in view there are now in the office of Lloyds in London applications for the insurance.

Policies Date from March 1.

Rickard expects to learn soon whether the policies are acceptable. According to a local agent of Lloyds, he has every reason to believe such insurance will be placed. Tex and an agent for Lloyds in New York signed the applications, which were forwarded to London. The policies will be dated from March 1 until after July 4 for Willard and Dempsey. In the case of Rickard the policy will be for one year. It will be necessary for the promoter to take out the regular accident insurance.

"The policies applied for will protect me financially," Rickard said. "If Willard or Dempsey should stub his toe or be bumped by a taxicab, it will mean that I can collect at least $50.000 in my own case. I am taking out the insurance to protect myself as well as the fighters. I don't think anything is going to happen to any of us, but you can never tell, so I'm willing to pay the heavy premiums and take no chances.

No Protection Against Rain.

"This insurance it not like that which has been taken out in some big fights of the past. The London company on some of these bouts has issued certificates that would protect against rain or inclement weather. The insurance I want is simply to protect me against any accident that might happen to prevent Willard or Dempsey from fighting.

"As for rain or inclement weather, let me tell you something. This fight is going to take place if the skies open wide and rain cats and dogs. The fighters are getting the money, and they'll have to take that chance. So will the fans, and I guess they'll be willing to take the chance if I am."

Willard a "Mud Runner."

Willard, hearing of Rickard's plan to stage the contest rain or shine, had this to say:

"That goes for me. If it rains so much the better for me. I'm a good mud runner. I'll tell you something, I like to fight in the rain. It won't be any handicap to me."

Reading so much stuff about how Willard expects to lick the tar out of Dempsey, the writer took the liberty of asking:

"Is that stuff you have been spilling about trimming this fellow on the square?"

"Well, I'll tell you this," said Willard. "Of course I expect to win. But don't make any mistake about it, I'm not going to underestimate Dempsey."

Flournoy 50-50 Partner.

There is another little matter in connection with this match. The man Frank Flournoy, who appears as a newcomer in the promotion of big bouts, is a regular fight fan. This, in addition to the fact that he has plenty of coin and is friendly with Rickard, caused him to be associated with Tex in the approaching battle. Rickard states that Flournoy is a fifty-fifty partner with him. Rickard is the executive head of the "organization" promoting this scrap.

Richie Mitchell to Box Dundee at Milwaukee

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Richie Mitchell, local lightweight challenger, and Johnny Dundee, New York challenger, were matched today to battle ten rounds before the Cream City A. C. at the Auditorium March 10. The winner is to get a match later with Benny Leonard, it is understood.

Jess Plans 'Lil Boxing Show for Fort Worth

Fort Worth, Tex., Feb. 22.—Jess Willard will demonstrate here March 8 something of his fitness to defend the heavyweight championship. Willard announced he had Promoter Tex Rickard's approval in agreeing to participate in an athletic show here on that date, boxing with his sparring partner.

IN THE WAKE OF THE NEWS
by RING W. LARDNER.

THE MARRIED LIFE OF EDNA AND JESSE.

Chicago, Feb. 20.

Dear Girlie:—

Well, girlie, you can never in the world guess what happened today. I was home alone as of course Jesse was down at business and mother was over on the west side and the phone rung and I went to answer it and it was a man's voice and he said: "Guess who this is." So I pretended as if I knew and finally after we had talked awhile there was something about his voice that I recognized and it was Sergeant Davis from Camp Grant that had that terrible "case" last summer.

Well, about the first thing he asked me was: "Are you doing anything to-night?" So I said: "Yes, I'm getting dinner for my husband and that's about all." Well, of course he had no idea I was married and I suppose I ought to of told him at first instead of springing it on him that way because the poor man didn't know what to do and couldn't say anything at all and of course if I had of ever thought that he was still "interested," I wouldn't of ever sprung it on him that way but I thought by this time he would be all over it as I thought it was only a passing fancy. But "you never can tell" and I guess he's just as bad as ever or of course he would never of called up. But when I told him about getting dinner for my "husband" the poor thing didn't have a word to say and after a few minutes he hung up the phone.

Well, girlie, he gave me his address and phone and when you come up for that visit we will have him out some night to dinner and I hope you and he can get interested in one another as he is honestly one of the nicest men I ever met and has a good position though of course nothing like Jesse's. But of course Jesse is "one in a thousand" and I sometimes think I must be the luckiest girl in the world.

Well, anyway, a few minutes after poor Davis had hung up Jesse called me up just to see if I was "on earth" and I said: "I will never get my work done today with so many phone calls from gentlemen." So then he insisted on knowing what I meant and I simply had to tell him and he said he guessed he would have to stay home and watch me or the first thing he knew somebody would be running off with me. Honestly he is the most jealous thing you ever knew and I know it's mean of me to tease him, but I just do it without stopping to think. As Jesse says, I'm "just a kid" and will never "grow up." I guess it's true in one way, but as I say to Jesse:

"Well, you knew what I was when you married me." So then he smiles and says he wouldn't have me any other way for the world.

Well, dearie, mother is back and says I ought to be doing the housework instead of writing a letter, so I said to her: "Mother, I'm a woman now and you mustn't order me around." So she said: "You're just a foolish little girl and will never be anything else." Well, girlie, sometimes I think she's right.

Yours,
EDNA.

Vosburgh and J. G. Searle, other Great Lakes entries. Perry McGillivray, Great Lakes, took the 150 yard back stroke in 1:49 2-5, and Brenner and D. L. Jones tied for first place in the 220 yard free style in 2:32 1-5.

'TRIBUNE' RACES OF BOY SKATERS AT ARENA RINK

Playgrounds and Parks Title Events Set for Thursday Night.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

After postponements caused by lack of ice at the public parks officials in charge of THE TRIBUNE'S annual playgrounds and public parks skating tournament have made arrangements with the Chicago Arena to hold the finals at the north side rink Thursday night.

Because of objection by the officials to causing expense to friends of the contestants, Manager Wilson Chase of the Arena readily agreed to cut in two the admission fee for this one night. Instead of the fee of 55 cents, 28 cents will be charged. This includes the war tax. Public skating will be permitted after the races are over.

Qualifiers Admitted Free.

Contestants who have qualified for the finals will be admitted free. Special tickets will be mailed tomorrow to directors whose skaters are eligible to race. Qualifiers should get in touch with their respective playground directors Tuesday to secure their complimentary tickets.

Badges for officials will be distributed at the ticket window at the entrance. Contestants' numbers also will be given out at the window, and no qualifier will be permitted to enter unless he has his number. Suitable dressing quarters have been arranged for the contestants.

Races Start at 8 o'Clock.

The races will start promptly at 8 o'clock, so that the last event can be decided two hours later. This will give skaters a chance to use the ice for one hour.

The track will be ten laps to the mile, which allows plenty of room on the sides and turns for contestants to pass one another. Flags will be placed to mark the turns and the inner edges of the course on the straightaways. The meet will be handled by directors of the playgrounds and public parks, although several well known skating officials have volunteered their services.

Sharpen Up Your Blades.

As contestants will race on the hardest ice they have encountered this year, a warning is given to have their skates sharpened. Spills will happen on the sharp corners unless the edges hold the ice. Directors should see that the kids' skates are well ground.

Services of Capt. Oliver D. Steele, veteran of the Spanish-American war, who has just returned from Camp Gordon, have been secured for announcer.

During the intermissions between races, Art Staff, winner of the first TRIBUNE Silver Skates Derby, considered the fastest skater in the country, will stroke a quarter mile against time. Julian Steinmetz, a product of the playgrounds, who broke into fame as a member of the Commercial club ground, also will skate a quarter mile against time. Julian won THE TRIBUNE Junior Silver Skates Derby this year. Charley Fisher of Milwaukee, Silver Skates Derby winner, also will give an exhibition.

Jack Davis and June Rodger, a professional fancy skating team, will display their skill between races.

LAD OF 18 YEARS SHOWS THE BOYS SPEED SKATING

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—A new champion looms up in speed skating circles. Charles Jewtraw of Lake Placid not only finished first in all finals, but also in all his qualifying heats. After having won the 220 yard and half mile finals yesterday, he added the 440 yard, one mile, and three mile championships to his record. The fast time in all events indicates the excellent company in which he skated.

They included Russel Wheeler, Montreal, and Harry Cody, Toronto, both former international champions; Ed Horton, Saranac Lake, who so frequently won the 220 and 440 yard at international meets; Charles Fisher, Milwaukee, the western champion; William Steinmetz and David Shultz, two speediest Chicago skaters, and Joe Moore, the whirlwind from the Ice Palace, New York City.

This proves conclusively that this 18 year old lad is a contender for the positions once held by Leamy, McLane, Baptie, and Wood.

Ed Horton of Saranac Lake again clipped another two-fifths seconds from his previous record of 220 yards over four hurdles. Results:

Final, 220 yard senior—Won by Charles Jewtraw, Lake Placid; Ed Horton, Saranac Lake, second; Charles Fisher, Milwaukee, third. Time, :20.

Final, 440 yard senior—Won by Charles Jewtraw, Lake Placid, N. Y.; Ed Horton, Saranac Lake, N. Y., second; Russell Wheeler, Montreal, third. Time, :38 3-5.

Final, one-half mile, senior—Won by Chas. Jewtraw, Lake Placid; Chas. Fisher, Milwaukee, second; Joe Moore, New York, third. Time, 1:20.

Final, one mile, senior—Won by Charles Jewtraw, Lake Placid; David Schultz, Chicago, second; James Hennessy, Lake Placid, third. Time, 2:52 3-5.

Three mile senior—Won by Chas. Jewtraw; Ray Bryant, Lake Placid, second; Charles Fisher, Milwaukee, third. Time, 9:15 2-5.

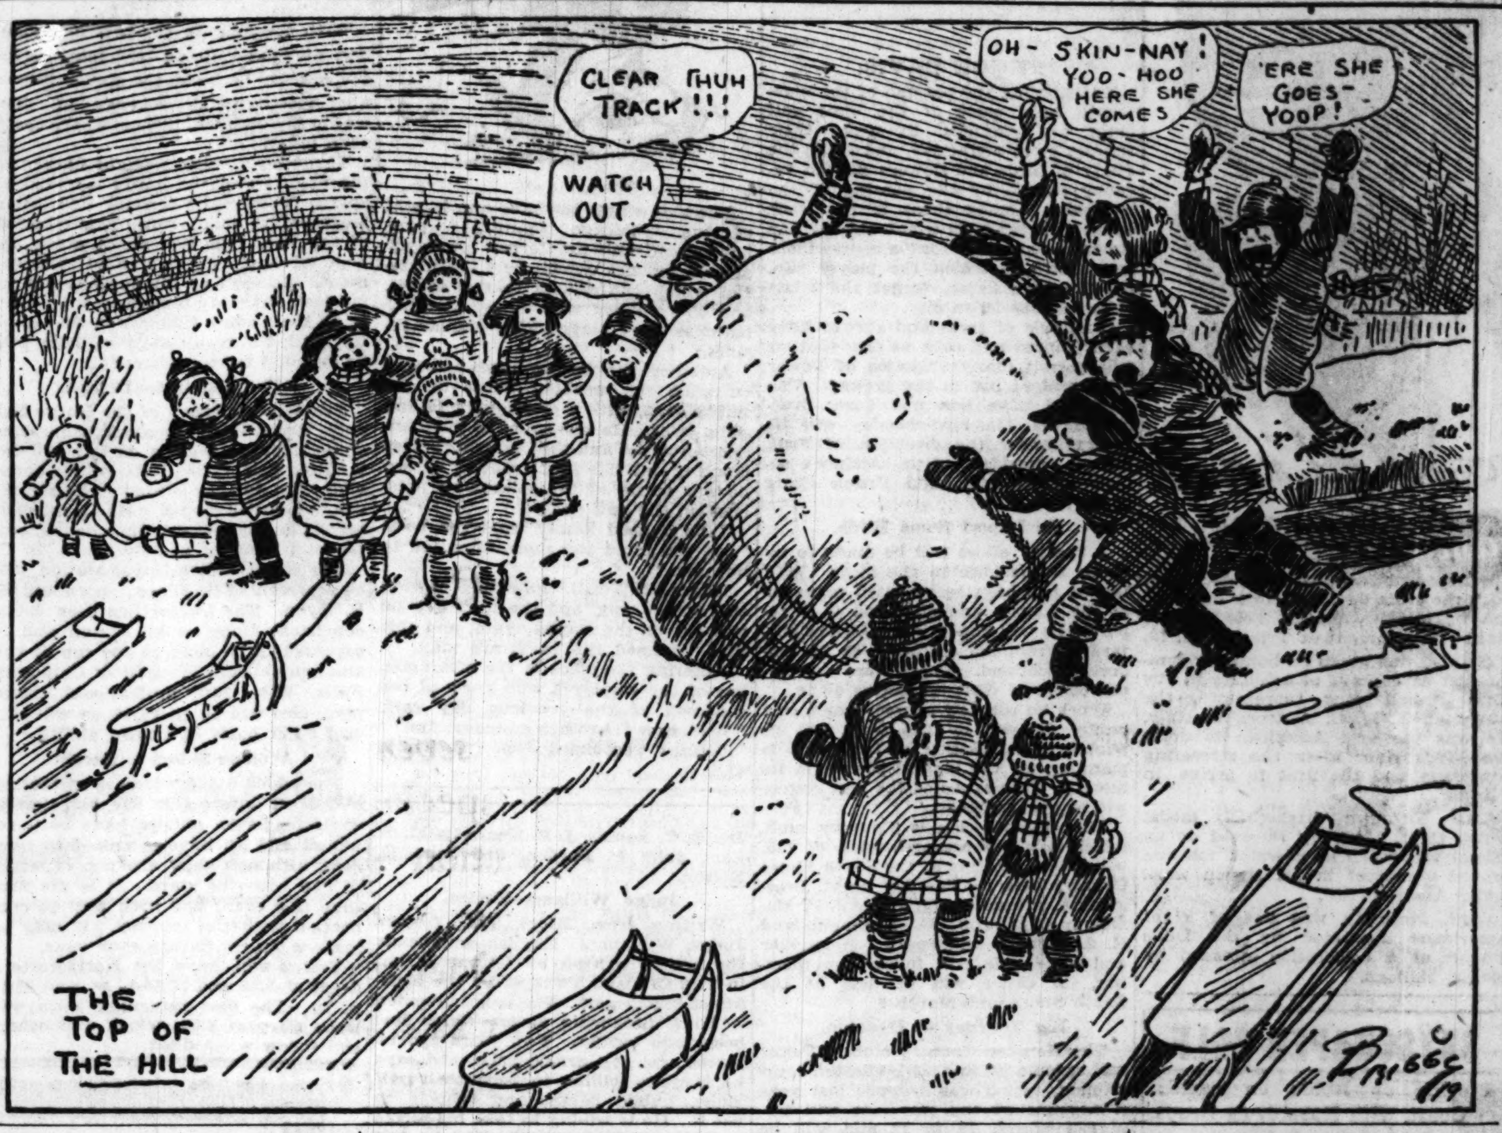
Reno, Nev., Feb. 22.—Gov. Emmett D. Boyle, according to reports, will veto Assemblyman Stewart's boxing bill which legalizes bouts between whites up to twenty-five rounds and which has passed both houses of the legislature. Friends of the bill say it will be passed over the governor's veto.

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT



MISS BESSIE FENN LANDS FLORIDA GOLFING HONORS

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Miss Bessie Fenn of Roland Springs, medalist in the qualifying round, won the Florida championship today, defeating Mrs. Ernest L. Byfield of Chicago, 4 and 3.

The Chicago girl's game was not up to the standard set in the second round when she defeated her sister, Miss Elaine Rosenthal. However, while the match was not close, it was a pretty exhibition of golf, as both women made some fine shots and the largest gallery of the season was prompt with applause when it was called for.

Drives 250 Yards.

The new champion's long game was remarkable, tee shots of 250 yards and even more being the rule, and throughout the contest she showed no traces of nerves, but she did not have the facility with putter and mashie on shot approaches shown by Mrs. Byfield.

Mrs. Byfield lost the match going out in an average of even 5s that put her 4 down at the turn. She was never up after the first hole, which she won, 4—5, Miss Fenn starting with a sliced tee shot. The western player, under discouraging circumstances, showed good grit on the inward round and held the score down to this lead. She got the twelfth, but lost the next hole, and the others were halved.

Honor for Travis.

It may be interesting to followers of the game that the first dinner of the Old Guard society of Palm Beach golfers in the Poinciana last night turned out to be a remarkable testimonial to Walter J. Travis, without having in any way been planned as such.

Here was the spectacle of a man officially rated by the United States Golf association as a professional, presiding at the head of a table at which sat over one hundred influential golfers. All of the speakers paid the former champion affectionate tribute. Occupying the place of honor at his right hand was Frederick Wheeler, president of the U. S. G. A., which at its recent annual meeting in New York failed to reinstate Travis as an amateur after the proposition had been formally brought up by members who feel that such rating is in every reasonable sense due him in spite of his having turned golf architect.

Paul Gardner Captures Coronado Club Golf Title

San Diego, Cal., Feb. 22.—Paul Gardner of Chicago won the annual amateur golf championship of the Coronado Country club today. He defeated Percival Thompson of Coronado, 3 and 2, in the championship flight of thirty-six holes. Just thirteen years ago today Gardner's father won the event on the same course.

Adee, president, has appointed a woman's schedule committee to arrange a series of women's tournaments to be played preceding the national lawn tennis championship matches at Philadelphia June 16. Mrs. W. G. Wightman of Philadelphia and Mrs. C. C. Beard of Boston are members of the committee.

AL SHUBERT BEATS JOHNNY FAY.

New Bedford, Mass., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Al Shubert, aspirant for Johnny Kilbane's title, made a chopping block of Frankie Fay of Jersey this afternoon in twelve rounds. After the first six rounds Shubert won as he pleased.

Clark Griffith a Foxy Pitcher Until He Met Small Town Nine

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

THEY referred to Clark Griffith as "Old Fox" because he was a winning pitcher when he had reached the age at which ordinary ball players had been in retirement for several years. As a matter of fact Grif was an "Old Fox" while still a young man in the game.

Back in the late '90s when he was at his best as pitcher for the Chicago team Griffith had a unique experience that he never will forget. At that time the Philadelphia Nationals had Nap Lajoie, Ed Delehanty, Elmer Flick, and about three or four others who could clout the ball for averages away over .300.

On the west side one day Griffith, with his careful, steady and tantalizing delivery of slow balls and loppy curves set those sluggers down in the most humiliating defeat of the season, allowing only three or four hits and shutting them out.

A representative from a small town in Illinois was looking for a star pitcher to help his team beat the team of a rival town. He picked Grif, who consented to go under an assumed name. Naturally the small town promoter figured that a pitcher who could shut out such fellows as played with the Phillies was a cinch.

Possibly had the rival town players known it was the great Clark Griffith they were facing they would have been scared hitless, but they didn't know and when they saw Grif hand up a few easy ones they began taking toe holds and lamming the ball all over the lot. In two or three innings they had eight runs and Griffith had to be yanked.

Griffith was a great pitcher against great hitters, but a soft one against dubs.

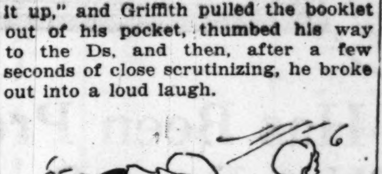
Until only a few months ago Grif. was under the impression he never had had any great trouble in pitching to Lajoie. He had a sudden awakening to the truth down at the ~~winter~~ meeting of magnates in New York when a statistician there published a little booklet showing the batting record of Lajoie against all the well known pitchers of the last twenty years.

Griffith found himself in the booklet and discovered that Lajoie had hammered his delivery for an average of something like .450. Grif. was telling of the discovery to Jack Dunn, another old time pitcher, now manager of the Baltimore club.

"Well, you never pitched right to Lajoie," declared Dunn. "I never had much trouble with him. He could hit 'em if you got 'em up above his waist. But he was easy if you just laid them down low and on the outside. I never could understand how you fellows allowed him to knock you all over the field. Why——"

"Say, wait a minute," broke in Griffith. "Maybe you're in this book, too. Just better keep mum while I look it up," and Griffith pulled the booklet out of his pocket, thumbed his way to the Ds, and then, after a few seconds of close scrutinizing, he broke out into a loud laugh.



"Just take a glance at that. Yes, I guess you had his number. You never had any trouble pitching to him, eh? Here's the batting mark against you—.515."

Dunn ordered for the crowd.

GANDIL SIGNS SOX CONTRACT; GLEASON LEAVES

Before Manager Kid Gleason of the White Sox departed last night for his home in Philadelphia, he announced the signing of First Baseman Chick Gandil. The contract was received in the day's mail.

With Gandil on first, Eddie Collins and Buck Weaver in the infield, Jackson and Felsch in the outfield, and Schalk behind the bat, Gleason hasn't a great deal to worry about. However, the peppery manager stated before leaving that he hopes to put through one big trade before the season opens. If he is successful in the trade he will be disappointed if the Sox don't appear in the world's championship next fall.

Gleason, while he hopes to turn a trade, stated that he was willing to go along with what he had on hand and felt assured of being up in the pennant fight. He will return to Chicago to take command of the Sox a few days before time to start on the spring training trip.

COMMITTEE O. K. FOR IOWA'S BILL

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 22.—Iowa's boxing bill may have to go through a few preliminary bouts before it meets the Thirty-eighth general assembly in the main fight, but it became definitely known tonight that Representative Lake's proposed measure will not suffer a committee knockout as was the case in the Thirty-seventh assembly.

The bill legalizing ten round, nodecision matches is in the hands of the police regulations committee, to which it was referred, and unless there are some unforeseen accidents it will be reported back to the floor of the house with recommendations for passage. Representative Lake is chairman of the committee.

BIGGEST INDOOR MEET PLANNED FOR COLISEUM

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Chicago's athletic fans will have ~~the opportunity of seeing the~~ largest indoor track and field meet ever staged in the city during the first week in April, when the Central A. A. U. indoor senior and junior championships and high school contests will be staged at the Coliseum under the auspices of the Franklin Skating and A. C.

The meeting will run three days and the championship contests will be distributed over the three nights. In addition to the three big championship events, efforts will be made to have the annual University of Illinois relays transferred to Chicago for this year only. The armory at Illinois has been cut up for barracks and will not be ready for athletic use this year. If the Illinois relays are not held, the committee in charge of the event will hold races for college teams only and will be known as the Central A. A. U. university and college relays.

Need Change in Track.

An eight lap track will be used and the distance of the sprints and hurdles will be seventy yards. The old First Regiment A. A. track will be used. At the present time it is stored in the basement of the Michigan avenue armory and has not been used for three years. The turns are the best in the central west, but the stretches will have to be spliced to make it eight laps, as it is originally a ten circuit course.

In the senior and junior championship, the regular list of standard events will be held, while the list of preparatory school contests has not yet been decided upon, but in all probability will be the same as that in college interscholastics with the exception of the hammer and discus throws.

Eck to Coach Men.

The meet will be under the personal direction of Tom Eck, coach of the long distance runners at the University of Chicago. Eck has had a world of experience in promoting athletic contests and is known as the first man to promote a six day bicycle race in Chicago.

If enough interest is displayed in the meet, star runners in the east will be sent for to meet such western stars as Joie Ray of the Illinois A. C. and Tom Campbell of the University of Chicago. A definite line on the eastern runners can be drawn after the invasion of the east by Ray, Campbell, and Stout, who left yesterday to run in the Millrose A. C. games on Tuesday night.

To Send Entry Blanks.

Entry blanks will be sent to every university, college, prep school, and athletic club in the central west. The meet already has been sanctioned by the Central A. A. U. and Charles A. Dean, president of the central association, has commanded officials of the association to put forth their best energies to help make the meet a huge success. Entry blanks will be sent out early next month.

Joie Ray Leaves for East to Race in Special Events

Joie Ray, crack middle distance runner of the Illinois A. C., accompanied by Coach Frank Cayou, left yesterday for New York, where he will run in the invitation Rodman Wanamaker mile and a half race to be held in connection with the Millrose games Tuesday night. Ray will remain in the east to run in Boston, Brooklyn, and Philadelphia.

CHICAGO WINS IN CLOSE GAME AT ANN ARBOR

Purdue	3	6	.333	Wisconsin	1	6	.143

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Chicago won from Michigan tonight by the narrow margin of three points, due mainly to the poor shooting from fouls by Karpus, the final score being 25 to 22. The game started fast and finished fast, and was hard fought every second of the time. Both fives showed excellent team work.

Early in the game, Hewlett was hit in the eye by Williams of Chicago, and, although not taken out at the time, his play was not up to his usual standard. Gorgas played Chicago's best game. He was at the right place at every critical point in the game, but Jack Williams of Michigan played a game identical in almost every particular, these two starring for their respective teams.

Wolverines Expected to Win.

Michigan's confidence in winning the game and underestimation of Chicago spelled its defeat. When it played against Chicago at Chicago the Midway team did not put up as hard a fought game as it did tonight, and Michigan, pinning its faith on the fact that the floor would be strange to Chicago, believed it would have a comparatively easy victory.

None of the Michigan team was up to the standard of playing against O. S. U. last night. Fouls were not called strict enough tonight against either side, a fact which made a difference in the final score. Lineup:

Purple, 32; Badgers, 23

In a bitter battle Northwestern last night clung to its place among the Western Conference basketball leaders, defeating Wisconsin, 32 to 23, at Patten gymnasium. The second half of the clash became a wild scramble for points, with arguments on and off the playing floor which several times verged on the point of blows. Wisconsin, which failed to show much in the first half, seemed to weld together into a finished team during the intermission, and outscored the Purple in the second session.

The first half ended with Northwestern ahead, 20 to 7. In the second half the tension became marked and Coach Lowman of Wisconsin and Trainer Anschuetz of Northwestern nearly broke the Illinois statute against boxing. Lineup:

Illini, 22; Purdue, 17

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Purdue's revamped basketball team was unable to cope with the sturdy tossers from Illinois tonight and lost a hard fought game, 22 to 17. The visitors started the scoring and had three points before the Boilermakers registered a field goal. At half time the score was: Illinois, 7; Purdue, 6.

Illinois scored by the field route and Al Smith dropped two free throws through the net for Purdue. Shortly after Marvin Smith tied up the score and Whippkus after a spectacular dribble the length of the floor sent the Boilermakers in the lead for a short time. Taylor, however, got away with two long shots and Illinois continued to lead until the end. Lineup:

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 22.—Minnesota defeated Indiana, 20 to 14, in a western conference game tonight. The local five played the visitors to a standstill in the first half, but was unable to hold them in the last half.

Tigers Sign Love, Ex-Yank, to Get a Southpaw Hurler

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 22.—"Slim" Love, pitcher for the New York Americans, for several seasons, sent his signed contract today to President Navin of the Tigers, who said Love would prove of great value to his team, as it has lacked a consistent southpaw for two seasons.

BY JOE DAVIS.

With a tentative entry of ten, five from Chicago and five from outside points, play in the nineteenth annual amateur balkline championship is slated to start Thursday night at the Chicago Athletic association. It is the sixteenth tourney under the auspices of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players.

It will be the fourth championship staged at the Michigan avenue club. Previous tournaments held there were in 1905, 1906, and 1908. The winners respectively were C. Fred Conklin of Chicago, E. W. Gardner of Montclair, N. J., and Calvin Demarest of Chicago.

Personnel of the Field.

Entries from Chicago this year are Percy Collins of the Illinois Athletic association, Dave McAndless and Witt K. Cochrane of the C. A. A., Robert Lord and Edward Rein. Visiting players entered are Champion Corwin Huston of Detroit, Percy P. Trump of the Pittsburgh Athletic association, Eugene Milburn of Memphis, J. E. Cope Morton of Philadelphia, and another Detroit player.

No tournament in recent years has had more than eight players. As ten would make it a long drawn out affair, it is probable two entrants will be dropped by the executive committee at its meeting tomorrow.

C. A. A. Awarded Tourney.

Following the 1908 tournament, no Chicago club made a bid and for the next nine years the event was held in the east. Last year it was held at Detroit. With the election of George B. Dryden of the C. A. A. to the presidency of the national body, the tournament was voted to the Cherry Circle organization, which has dismantled the tables in its annex room and provided an excellent arena with a seating capacity of several hundred.

Corwin Huston and Percy Collins are picked as the strongest contenders. The champion made his first essay for the title at Philadelphia in 1915, finishing last and having a grand average of a little over 6. Last year he won five games and lost one, getting a grand average of 9.15. He has been under the tutelage of Ora Morningstar.

Third Attempt by Collins.

Collins will make his third attempt for the blue ribbon. In 1912 at New York he tied for second place with the late J. Ferdinand Poggenburg, losing in the play-off. Each grand averaged over 9. Morris D. Brown, the winner, averaged approximately 8.50.

Collins appeared the following year at Philadelphia and tied with J. E. Cope Morton for fourth place, averaging over 8. He then went into the billiard business and became ineligible for the amateur ranks. This year he was reinstated after entering the steel business.

Dave McAndless took second prize last year. He was tied with Charles Heddon of Dowagiac and Eugene Milburn, and won the place because he has scored more points. His run of 101 was high for the tournament.

Eugene Milburn a Veteran.

Eugene Milburn is a veteran who finished last in 1914, tied for fifth in 1915, and tied for third in 1917, and for second last year.

Bob Lord played in Philadelphia in 1915, tying for fifth place and getting a grand average of over 7. Lord defeated the veteran Gardner, then a four time champion, 400 to 290.

J. E. Cope Morton has been playing for a number of years. He tied with Collins in 1913 for fourth place, having a grand average of over 7. Two years later he entered at Philadelphia, but withdrew to lessen the size of the field.

Rein Also Local Player.

Edward Rein, the local veteran, played at Boston in 1917, but did not win a game, being in poor form due to a heavy cold.

Percy Trump, Pittsburgh player who will make his premier in the classic, has played for thirty years. He won the last western Pennsylvania championship in 1910.

Witt K. Cochrane, who is prominent in the advertising world, has played for many years. It will be his first try for the title.

SKYSCRAPER GOLF

Playing on Roofs on Pacific Coast, with Hazards as Drops to Ground Far Below.

GOLF on the roof of hotels is a California novelty this winter, especially at Pasadena. Nine short holes are afforded there by taking in stretches on three adjoining buildings. The idea is not entirely new, although it never before was carried out beyond miniature dimensions. What started it was the ingenuity of a Japanese, who began taking exercise in a primitive way by putting and approaching on the top of a lofty Broadway office building.

HERE'S WHAT MAY BE A SUBSTITUTE FOR 19TH HOLE

Interest in Birds and Flowers Expected to Make One Forget.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Anticipating the passing of the nineteenth hole, some of the local golf clubs are planning to make their courses more attractive, and make the study of birds and flowers fill the vacancy caused by the passing of the highball. Among these is the Park Ridge Country club, which already has started a campaign for "a course more beautiful" on which the player can, for the time being, forget the trials of our smoke laden city.

Hundreds of trees and shrubs have been planted and soon as the weather will permit many varieties of flower seeds will be put in the ground. The feathered tribe has not been overlooked, as 150 bird houses will be erected under the direction of Prof. Dodson, president of the Audubon society of America, and Frank Craig of the club.

To Import Some Birds.

A special effort will be made to interest the caddies in the birds. Will Brown has been reappointed manager of the course, and club and it is reported he will import some Scotch butterflies from his old home at St. Andrews, Scotland. These were the tartan colors of their respective clans.

Work on the new course, which was partly delayed by the war, will be pushed to completion, and the club is planning for the biggest season in its history. It is expected the new course will be opened May 1.

The Olympia Fields Country club, which now has a membership of 725, will hold a meeting at the South Shore Country club on Tuesday night. President A. Alonzo Stagg, Judge J. P. McGoorty, Judge J. G. Brennan, and E. J. Kilborn will speak. A smoker and vaudeville will follow the meeting. A dance will be held at the South Shore club March 6.

Big Tourney at Houston.

The Houston Country club of Texas will resume its annual invitation tournament, which was dropped last year on account of the war. It will be staged March 19 to 22 and will be known as the First Victory Golf tournament. A special event for professionals will be staged. Among those who previously played in the tournament are Jerome D. Travers and Charles Evans Jr.

Douglas Grant, the California state champion, who lived several years in England, will return there in May for a stay of several years. He is a Californian by birth, but learned most of his golf on the British courses.

The Calumet Country club is campaigning for new members and among its recent acquisitions are Albee Smith Jr., E. C. Squire, J. S. Kennedy, M. S. Earl, John P. Barden, and John E. Nelson.

Judge Williams Writes.

Writing from Miani, Fla., former Judge William J. English commends the article written by George O'Neil in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE on the benefits of indoor golf. The judge invented a drive measuring device which has been used locally. Two years ago he placed one at Garfield park, and says he is quite willing to permit all golf clubs, public parks, and schools to use it. He is willing to take his solace and profits from the thought he has contributed to the physical benefit of his fellow beings.

ICE RACES AT ARENA MONDAY.

The second of a series of skating contests conducted by the management of the Chicago Arena, will be held tomorrow evening at 8:15. These races, sanctioned by the Western Skating association, are open to all amateurs. Gold, silver, and bronze medals will be awarded to the winners of the individual races each Monday.

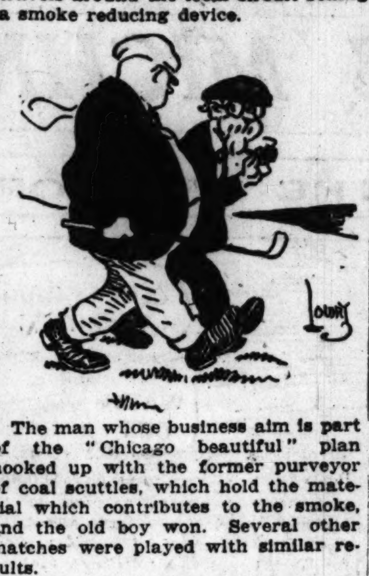
CHESS TITLE TO MARSHALL.

Marshall High won the chess championship of the Chicago High School league, defeating Crane's players, 6 points to 2, in the deciding team match at Marshall.

TALES of A TEE-BOX TOURIST

BY JOE DAVIS

ONE of the regulars at the Lincoln Park Town and Country club is a retired hardware dealer. He is of middle age and a fairly good player. Another player, not quite as regular in attendance, travels around the local circuit selling a smoke reducing device.



The man whose business aim is part of the "Chicago beautiful" plan hooked up with the former purveyor of coal scuttles, which hold the material which contributes to the smoke, and the old boy won. Several other matches were played with similar results.

Ambition to trim the hardware man curtailed the working hours of the smoke man, with a consequent falling off in sales. He was called to the managerial carpet and the inquisitor, after pointing out this fact, made it known he was aware of the salesman's presence on the golf course.

"It's a good game," said the boss, "but you must pay more attention to business."

Despite this call, the ruling passion still was strong, and the next day he was out on the course again, and this time trimmed the hardware man.

Entering the office in the afternoon, one of the employés who knew of the calldown of the previous day said, "Well, how did things go today, Jim?"

"Fine," responded Jim. "I had a 41."

BEST SKIERS OF NATION TO JUMP AT CARY TODAY

Snowfall Assures Holding of Oft Postponed 1919 Title Event.

With the slide in the best of condition and some of the best jumpers in the country on hand, the sixteenth annual international tourney of the Norge Ski club will be held at the Cary slide today.

Yesterday's snow brought cheer to the followers of the hardy Norwegian sport. This year's tourney had been postponed so many times that officials of the local club had about given up hope of holding the annual tournament. As soon as the snow began to fall last Thursday telegrams were sent to all the leading jumpers in the country, with the result most of them will be on hand for today's event.

1918 Champs to Defend.

Svere Hendricksen of the Norge Ski club, who won the amateur championship last year, will be on hand to defend his title. Nels Ruud of the same club, who finished second to Hendricksen, also will jump. Ruud finished second in the recent Canadian championship tourney at Revelstoke, B. C.

The Great Lakes Naval station will be represented by Einer Jensen and B. R. Ryan. The former has been doing consistent jumping all season and is expected to be close to the top of the amateurs. Lars Haugen of Chippewa Falls, Wis., 1918 professional champion, also will be on hand, as will several other stars of known ability.

Women Skiers to Race.

The added event which is attracting a deal of interest is the old timers' contest. Seven entries have been received and all have promised to compete, although they are not expected to run with the stars. It is the first time this event has been held in connection with the tourney. It may be made a yearly fixture each year.

Trains will leave the Northwestern depot at 9:30 and 10:44 a. m. and 12:55 p. m. The first returning train will leave Cary at 4:50 o'clock and others will follow when filled.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. METCALFE

ONE of the many fool rules with which players handicap themselves is to this geenral effect: Always lead trumps when there are eight or more in the combined hands, with three or more honors.

Real playess know that whether to lead trumps is never the leading question in a deal. The disposal of the losing cards in the declarer's hand always should overshadow all other considerations.

A good example is given in the deal below:

THE HANDS.

                S—10.
                H—Q, 10, 7, 2.
                C—K, J, 9, 6.
                D—K, Q, J, 4.
S—K, Q, 8, 7,   ┌────N────┐   S—A, J.
  6, 5, 3, 2.   │         │   H—A, K, 9, 6,
H—None.         W         E     4, 3.
C—Q.            │         │   C—10, 8, 3.
D—10, 8, 6, 3.  └────S────┘   D—A, 7.
                S—9, 4.
                H—J, 8, 5.
                C—A, 7, 5, 4, 2.
                D—9, 5, 2.

Score, 0-0. East dealt and bid 2 hearts, south passed, west bid three spades, and the bidding closed. North had the initial lead.

THE PLAY:

Tricks.	N.	E.	S.	W.
1	D K	D A	D 2	D 3
2	H 2	H A	H 5	Q C
3	H 7	H K	H 8	D 6
4	H 10	H 3	H J	Q S
5	10 S	J S	4 S	2 S
6	H Q	H 4	D 5	3 S
7	6 C	A S	9 S	5 S
8	D 4	H 9	4 C	D 8
9	9 C	H 6	2 C	D 10
10	D J	D 7	D 9	6 S
11	D Q	3 C	5 C	K S
12	J C	8 C	7 C	8 S
13	K C	10 C	A C	7 S

West secured a grand slam.

The above play was simple, safe and effective. If the first two rounds of hearts indicated that that suit was bunched in one of the adversaries' hands, the declarer would have led a diamond and made a small slam by ruffing one diamond in dummy. Making the remaining hearts was a better proposition, and was easily accomplished.

In the real play the declarer led two rounds of trumps after winning the first trick with the ace of diamonds. He secured five odd and remarked with great complacency that he was not going to take any chances with such a hand as that.

Such piffle is often mistaken for real wisdom and prevents the deportation of undesirable rules.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Oak Park, Ill.—[To the Editor.]—Noting your figures on the number of whist hands please note the following:

Number of selections of 13 cards each from 52 cards, 635,013,559,600.

But N can be interchanged with E W or S, etc., so that the number of ways in which 52 cards can be distributed into 4 piles of 13 each is 2,235,197,406,895,366,368,301,560,000.

But there is still another question which is really the whist problem as follows: "In how many ways can the 52 cards be divided among 4 players each to have 13? The answer is 53,644,737,765,488,792,839,237,440,000. Authority "choice and chance," by William Allen Whitworth, 1901, p. 297, also p. 27.

On p. 297 referred to I find the following statement: The whole number of possible ways in which four whist players can have 13 cards each is 53,644,737,765,488,792,839,237,440,000. Hence show that if a party play a hundred million of games the odds are more than ten billion to one against their ever having the same distribution of cards twice.

If you wish to use figures in your whist column you may as well use some big ones. C. W.

Ans.—Respectfully submitted: That last thing is worse than a modern grocery bill. Players may multiply it by three to find the total number of tricks their partners have lost or divide by any number which suggests itself to ascertain the number of their own lost tricks. Gilson insists that one group of the Chicago Whist club is playing through the entire series the second time.

The figures given by our correspondent are authentic.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—Is it permissible to ask your opponent what was led when I am the fourth player and there is a spade, heart, and diamond on the table? I asked the player on my left what was led. She said it was not necessary to tell. Then later claimed a revoke. M. P. C.

Ans.—A player is obliged to indicate the card played by him when requested to do so. The refusal to grant such a request would make it impossible for him to claim a revoke on that trick.

WANT TEARNEY AS LEADER FOR WESTERN LEAGU

Magnates Offer Job Three Eyes League Ma at Annual Meeting.

St. Joseph, Mo., Feb. 22.—Al Tearney of Chicago has been tendered the presidency of the Western league and club owners meeting here today said there was no doubt that he would accept. The second man selected was John Savage, secretary of the Kansas City American association club, but he, too, declined. Mr. Tearney was then chosen.

The magnates this afternoon ratified the sale of the Joplin club by John Savage to a Joplin stock company, paved the way for the ratification of the transfer of the former Denver franchise to Spencer A. The Cadillac Has Been Proved for You as No Car Was Ever Proved Before

Imagine thousands of cars—of all the well known makes—all being driven in desperate service—night and day for months—on the used-up roads of France.

Such was the test made by our American Expeditionary Force—and with no thought of testing. Just getting the big job done.

Very shortly the Cadillac proved itself so everlastingly dependable—so far superior to all other cars—that it was made the standard 7-passenger car for the U. S. Army.

Surely the Army, with its ever present mechanics, has no more need of a dependable car than you. If anything, your need of dependability is greater.

So put your faith in a Cadillac—proved as no car was ever proved before—and experience the joy of motoring with all the bother left out.

The Cadillac you buy of us is exactly the same as the Cadillacs that served in France. There is only one kind of Cadillac—the best that can be built.

The Essex Speaks for Itself
New in Name and Type—Proved in Popularity
Its Position is Assured
Marks Progressive Step in Construction and Engineering Development

The Essex was introduced without an elaborate advertising campaign. Its makers were confident it would win popularity by its performance and appearance. They wanted the car to speak for itself. They wanted the public to be its advertisers.

So eloquently has the car spoken that the number of Essex owners promises to be limited only by the production capacity of the factory. The year's only new car has won such enthusiastic admirers that we resist the temptation to describe or make claims for it. Whatever we said would of necessity be overshadowed by the praise of those who have seen the car tested.

We want you to have an actual demonstration. We know that you will recognize in the Essex a distinctively new type of car. We are sure you will appreciate the beauty, comfort, riding qualities, endurance and refinement that usually mark the costly car, combined with the lightness and economy of the inexpensive one.

Reports from the factory indicate that production can not keep pace with demand. Those who fail to buy now may be disappointed later in the season. Probably half a million people have recognized the unusual worth of the Essex. They have made it the chief topic of automobile conversation. Salesrooms have been crowded. Waiting lists have had to be established for those who wish delivery at the earliest possible date.

Meets Every Demand

Let us prove to your satisfaction that the Essex, at a moderate price, has none of the shortcomings and limitations common with inexpensive cars. Learn why others love to ride in it and marvel at its grace and mechanical merit. See for yourself why its beauty is so much admired—why it has won unprecedented popularity with both men and women. You will see that it meets every exacting demand of youth for smartness and flexibility; that it gratifies the desire of maturity for comfort, refinement and reliability.

OWLS OUTFLANK GRANT TOSSERS IN RETURN GAME

Feeney and Johnson Cage Shower of Baskets for 48 to 26 Victory.

Whiting, Ind., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—It was fight from the opening whistle in the basketball game between Whiting Owls and Camp Grant soldiers tonight. When the fray ended the Owls had secured revenge on the soldiers by a victory of 48 to 26. Camp Grant was the only team to beat the Owls this season, terminating the locals' string of sixteen wins at Rockford a week ago.

Each side had a casualty list of one player banished for fouls. Hemsath, husky soldier, and 190 pound Cochrane of the Owls also came close to measuring their respective fistic abilities in the middle of the floor.

Feeney evaded all guards and showered baskets from all angles, caging nine. Bill Johnson added seven ringers for the locals. This sort of sharp shooting gave the locals a lead in the first half, 26 to 14. Lineup:

SEMI-PRO OWNERS DISCUSS CIRCUIT

Chicago league club owners expect to take important steps tomorrow night at their weekly meeting in the Hotel La Salle toward lining up the traveling teams they expect to book this year. It is thought that a one round spring schedule will be adopted, with another later, in the fall, if the first round proves successful.

The first meeting developed the fact that traveling magnates wanted high figures for putting out a team, but a more moderate working basis is being reached.

Several more clubs made application to the league during the week, and will be passed upon tomorrow night. The park clubs will meet at 7 o'clock and the travelers an hour later.

Talk of an intercity circuit, with clubs from Michigan City, Aurora, Waukegan, and other nearby cities, with an equal number of Chicago traveling clubs, is also going the rounds.

PREPARE ARENA FOR MAT BOUTS

A large force of carpenters will start work today to transform the Coliseum into a huge arena for the championship elimination match a week from tomorrow night between Ed "Strangler" Lewis, challenger for the title, and Joe Stecher of Dodge, Neb., the former champion.

Seating arrangements have been provided for 10,000 persons. A capacity crowd is expected. The pasteboards are on sale in the loop at Bloom & Mayer's cigar store and at the Coliseum.

Stecher arrived in Chicago yesterday to finish his training, coming from St. Louis, where he defeated Jack Buckman in quick order on Friday night. The former champion declared himself to be in the best possible condition.

Detroit Soccer Eleven Vs. Brickies Next Sunday

The Soccer match between the Detroit team and the Bricklayers in the fourth round of the national soccer championship has been moved forward to next Sunday, March 2. It will be played at Thirty-fifth street and Wentworth avenue unless the snow storm of yesterday renders the grounds unplayable. The winner of this match probably will meet an eastern team.

SPORTING NEWS NOTES.

La Grange heavyweights did something no other Suburban league team has been able to do by beating Oak Park, 24 to 19, last night at La Grange. The home team is composed of small, fast fellows, who played their home court with dexterity.

Hey and Cossitt were important factors in the winning teamwork. They put La Grange ahead toward the close of the third quarter, after the teams played even through the first half, 10 to 10. Oak Park won the lightweight encounter, 17 to 8. The games end the first round. Lineups:

MUSKRAT FACTS.

ANY observing man (and we rise to remark that most men are observing in such matters) walking the streets of town or city these days cannot help but get the impression that being a muskrat is a dangerous business. It is, for the number of muskrats killed every year for the American fur trade runs well up into the millions.

That muskrat fur is popular is due to several reasons other than the decree of Dame Fashion, and, like skunk fur, it is beginning to get the appreciation it deserves—when a fur is sold under its own name instead of as this or that kind of "mink," "sable," or "seal," its reputation is established.

Practically all the middle west was first penetrated by trappers in search of furs to adorn fair ladies of those days, and nearly all our cities, including Chicago, were originally fur trading posts. In those days—just a little more than a hundred years ago—muskrats sold for a few pennies; today they bring prices that would make old John Kinzie and his dusky predecessor (the Indians use to say that "the first white man in Chicago was a Negro") think that the world has gone crazy. The dollar muskrat, like wheat, has ceased to be a thing of the dim and distant future.

The muskrat simply refuses to be driven out by civilization, and we venture the guess that there are almost as many of them now as there were a hundred years ago. Anyway, we doubt if Kinzie or any of the old fur traders here ever had as many muskrat skins as we saw the other day in a Chicago raw fur house. There were several hundred thousand of them, and all came from Illinois and nearby states.

Just to show how the muskrat hangs on and multiplies: A few pairs were introduced into Bavaria in 1894. They spread, and one district reported ten specimens in 1911, 300 in 1913 and 1,000 in 1916, and this increase was in spite of an active, year around warfare of extermination against them—apparently the Germans are no more efficient in exterminating rats than they are in annihilating the French race!

Muskrat fur is at its best in the early spring, and local fur houses expect to pay from $1.60 to $2 each for "spring rats," making trapping a profitable occupation. The seasons in nearby states close as follows: Illinois and Indiana, March 31; Wisconsin, April 10; Michigan and Iowa, March 15.

There are two ways to trap muskrats: the right way and the wrong way. The wrong way is to do it without regard to the suffering of the victim, such as making land sets and then neglecting to visit the traps. This is not only needlessly cruel but it often results in lost fur—sometimes the rat will twist off his foot and leave it in the trap or varmints or trap robbers will "lift" the fur. A cruel man never has good luck and he doesn't deserve it. If you must make land sets use a trap that kills the victim instantly, but water sets pay best in the long run.

When setting your traps use your head and plan to catch your rat by the hind foot by setting in two or three inches of water. When setting along a stream place your traps at the foot of a slide or at the entrances of burrows leading up under the overhanging banks or alongside of logs or rocks.

Blind or baitless sets are best for the burrows, but for "roosting" places like a fallen tree bait is sometimes advisable. Parsnips are preferred by many trappers because of their pronounced odor, apples, carrots, beets or other vegetable matter will do. Drug store scents are seldom necessary, although musk often helps in spring trapping. Place your bait about ten inches above the trap so the rat will have to stand up to get it, thus adding to your chances of getting him by a hind leg. Never put your bait on the pan of the trap.

When trapping in marshes, set your traps at the ends of the "trails" leading from one pond to another or in the runways radiating from the houses if the laws of your state will permit this. In any event, have your trap staked out in fairly deep water with a sliding pole or wire, down which the chain ring can slip. This will carry the rat into deep water and will drown him quickly, preventing his escape and concealing him from "Johnny Sneakum." The No. 1 trap is most often used, but the No. 1½ is better—gets a higher grip and weighs more.

Finally, don't throw the carcasses of freshly killed muskrats away. Take the saddles and parboil them with an onion; then stew, roast, or fry in hot fat, and the result will be an agreeable surprise. We do not offer this on somebody's say-so, as we have eaten muskrats hundreds of times. They are clean feeding animals, as much so as rabbits or squirrels, and if you object to the "rat" part of their name call them "musquash," as the Indians did.

EVANSTON HIGH DEFEATS SENN IN TRACK MEET

Suburban Athletes Beat Chicagoans in Close Athletic Contests.

BY PREP.

Starting the relay, the last event, with Senn High senior holding a four point lead, Evanston High school ran off with the event, and won the dual interleague track meet, 43 to 42, at Patten gymnasium yesterday. Wootan, star individual point winner of the meet, with eleven points, paved the way for the victory in the relay, when he touched off Fall with a start of twenty feet on his man. Evanston kept the twenty feet lead until the finish. Senn High was indoor champion of the Chicago H. S. league last winter.

The junior dual meet, held in connection with the senior events, was won by Senn, 42 2-3 points to 24 1-3, Schweger making twenty-one points for the City leaguers. Just before the start of the combined senior-junior meet, Coach Bradley of Evanston received a message declaring eleven of his athletes ineligible for studies.

Not Enough Men for These $5,000 Positions

An Important Call for Traffic Men by the President of the American Commerce Association

Chicago, Illinois.

I am writing this letter as a last resort to see if we cannot secure more men willing to qualify for positions paying up to $10,000 a year. These positions are open in the traffic field. And the shortage of traffic men is greater today than ever before. About 60,000 big business corporations need expert traffic managers. Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce, State Railway and Public Utility Commissions need Traffic Secretaries and Experts. Half a million smaller shippers must employ consulting Traffic Managers who will direct the work of five to a dozen concerns. There are tens of thousands of Assistant Traffic Managers needed in large Railroad, Industrial and Association Traffic Departments.

There are probably not enough qualified men in the whole United States to meet the needs of a single large industrial center, and save the millions of dollars wasted through lack of technical knowledge. It is estimated that over a hundred thousand more competent traffic men are needed at once.

A traffic man recently saved his concern $24,000 on shipments from C. F. A territory to their new plant in Chattanooga. Another saved $9,751 in shipping 66 carloads in two weeks. Another saved $36,000 by applying a differential rate on 1,500 cars from Pittsburgh to Canada.

Competent traffic men can name their own salary. Mr. Wanamaker, without experience, after training for traffic work through a practical plan established by approximately 200 traffic experts, was assisted to a position paying $3,000 annually. Mr. Waterfall, with experience, gets $19,500 per year. Mr. McEwen, directing Tank Car shipments, receives $24,000 a year. Traffic Efficiency Experts saved a Detroit automobile concern $640,000 in ten months.

Traffic men are paid large salaries because they make large profits for their employers.

Heretofore, there has been no simple way to master the details of traffic management. Realizing the crying demand for trained traffic experts, and seeking relief, the American Commerce Association offers to give men the training required to make them competent to handle the problems of most economical distribution. The training is given by mail and can be studied in spare time, at home. Though the most complete and thorough training is given, the Course is remarkably easy to master, and through the Association costs but a few cents a day.

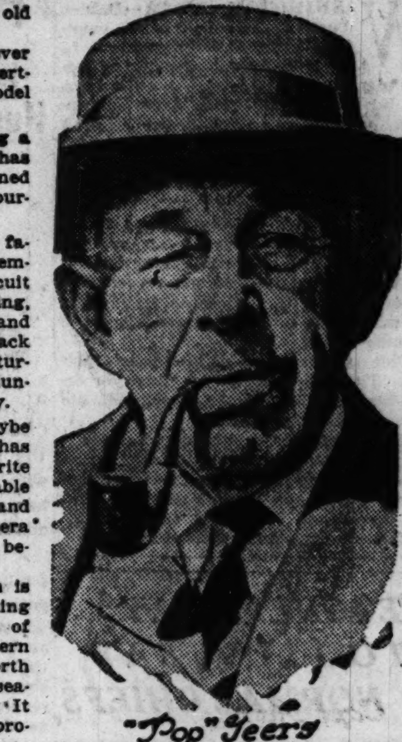
It is impossible to go into details in this letter, but the Association has published a remarkable book for free distribution which explains everything in detail and tells how anyone may quickly learn the new profession of traffic management. The possibilities in this field today—great as they are—are nothing compared to what they will be a year from now. If you are at all interested in getting into this highly profitable field, paying salaries of $2,500, $5,000 and more, be fair to yourself and write for the remarkable book now offered free by the Association.

In writing, please state whether you are a beginner or whether you have had previous traffic experience, and give your present age and occupation. Address:

AMERICAN COMMERCE ASSOCIATION, Dept. 302, 206 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. (American Commerce Building).

"POP" GEERS' CIGAR GONE

Behold the Veteran Reinsman as a Devotee of a Pipe for the First Time in 68 Years.



"Pop" Geers

THEY say you can't teach an old dog new tricks.

But that has nothing whatever to do with "Pop" Geers deserting his historic cigar for a 1919 model meerschaum pipe.

The veteran reinsman is smoking a pipe these days—the first pipe he has ever smoked, and on Jan. 25 he turned his sixty-eighth milestone in life's journey.

None of Geers' intimates at the famous old Billings race course in Memphis, Tenn., where the Grand circuit patriarch does his off season training, can account for "Pop's" sudden and ruthless desertion of the big black cigar, which has furnished a picturesque touch to his appearance on hundreds of race tracks in this country.

Perhaps it was the war. Or maybe some mean old tobacco magnate has monopolized all of "Pop's" favorite weed. At any rate, the venerable driver has succumbed to the pipe, and herewith you see him facing a camera for the first time without a cigar between his teeth.

Incidentally, Ed. F. Geers, which is "Pop's" complete name, is training another promising looking string of trotters and pacers at the southern track, which he plans to bring north early next summer for another season's campaigning on the big line. It will be his forty-eighth year as a professional driver.

Art Staff Skates Nilsson at St. Paul Tonight

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 22.—Art Staff, former international amateur champion on the ice blades, now a professional skater, will meet Johnny Nilsson of St. Paul here tomorrow. The races will be pursuit style for a quarter, half, and one mile.

Semi-Pro Man Active in American Transport Work

John C. Mackey, one of the best known semi-pro magnates in Chicago, recently was assigned to the transport George Washington as secretary for the Knights of Columbus. The transport will make a round trip each month until all the American soldiers have been returned from France. Mackey may be assigned to organization work in France at a later date.

LOCAL SEMI-PRO PLAYS OVERSEAS.

Letters have been received from Sergt. H. A Hendricksen, formerly backstop for the [illegible] and various fraternal ball teams here, stating that he is catching for the [illegible] Hundred and Fifteenth baking company nine in France. His team recently opposed a company of Negro bakers, on which several former members of the American Giants played.

PAIGE
The Most Beautiful Car in America

You Need Six Cylinders

There are no longer any serious discussions about the relative merits of Four and Six cylinder principles. The Four is the accepted type for the cheaper grade of cars and vast quantity production. The Six is the standard motor of quality manufacturing.

From the standpoint of performance, Six and Four cylinder motors cannot be compared at all.

It is unnecessary to prove the statement technically. Eliminating every other multi-cylinder advantage, the Six is 50% more flexible. The difference between a Four and a Six is the difference between vibration and non-vibration.

And, make no mistake, flexibility is absolutely essential to real motoring comfort.

Without it you must resort to constant changing of gears in traffic. Without it, it is impossible to throttle down to a snail's pace and instantly speed up again at will. Without it, there can be no such thing as smooth, even riding.

But why not demonstrate the fact for yourself?

Ask our dealer to take you out in any of the Paige models. Let him show you just what a fine Six-cylinder car can do on crowded streets, or on the open road. Then ride in the best Four that has ever been built—and make your own comparisons.

EDUCATORS OPEN WEEK'S MEETING HERE TOMORROW

Leaders from All Over the Nation Coming for Conference.

Ten thousand persons, all prominent in educational work of various sorts throughout the nation, are expected here for the convention of the department of superintendence of the National Education association, which will be held at the Auditorium hotel for one week, starting tomorrow. Forty-four auxiliary societies will convene here at the same time to take up educational problems.

The convention will open with an address of welcome by Peter A. Mortenson, superintendent of public schools of Chicago. Ernest E. Cole, assistant superintendent of schools, has charge of local arrangements with the exception of registration, which is in the hands of Frederick W. Armstrong of the Association of Commerce.

Community Center Day.

One of the features of the convention will be Community Center day, which will, it is expected, be the most largely attended of all the sessions. Supt. Mortenson has announced that Thursday will be declared a school holiday, so the teachers can attend.

A committee composed of Dr. Albert Shields, superintendent of schools in Los Angeles; Harold O. Berg, supervisor of the extension department of the schools of Milwaukee, and Edward L. Burchard, editor of the Community Center, of Chicago, has arranged an all day program devoted entirely to community center discussion.

Topics of especial interest will be Americanization through the medium of the centers, neighborhood festivals, and visual education, including motion picture shows and stereopticon lectures.

Leaders at Convention.

Among the noted educators who will be present in Chicago to attend the conferences of the National Education association are:

Thomas E. Finegan, deputy commissioner of education, Albany, N. Y.

Marion Le Roy Burton, president of the University of Minnesota.

W. C. Bagely, Teachers' college, Columbia university.

Herbert S. West, superintendent of the city schools of Rochester, N. Y.

William M. Davidson, superintendent of schools, Pittsburgh.

John H. Beveridge, superintendent of schools, Omaha.

C. N. Kendall, commissioner of education, Trenton, N. J.

Edmund J. James, president of the University of Illinois.

J. H. Carothers, educational division, Washington.

Lotus D. Coffman, University of Minnesota.

Wednesday Program.

DIVIDE YEAR ON BABY EXEMPTIONS FOR INCOME TAX

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Babies born in 1918 will bring varying income tax exemptions to their parents, depending on the month of their birth. A child born in January, 1918, gives $200 exemption, in addition to the $2,000 allowed married persons, but if a child was born in July the parent is entitled to exemption of only $100 on the infant's account. If the child was born in October the tax paying parent is allowed only $50 exemption, or one-fourth the $200 normal exemption.

This applies also to marriages and divorce or death figures as inexorably as marriages or birth in counting the income tax.

This is a reversal of last year's policy. Then the status of a taxpayer on the last day of the year determined his personal exemptions.

Under another regulation of the revenue bureau a person living in one community acting as the principal support of a person living elsewhere may be considered the head of a family and entitled to exemption of $2,000.

TEACHERS' PAY TOO LOW, SAY NORMAL CHIEFS

Methods of training teachers and the insufficient salaries paid them were assailed by the National Council of State Normal School Presidents and Principals, which ended its two day session at the Congress hotel yesterday.

Low pay and bad methods were the principal reasons for inefficiency in the personnel of normal teachers, it was declared. Speakers said there is grave danger of a further drop in the efficiency scale if better pay is not given.

"Not one woman normal school teacher is getting what she is worth," declared Dwight B. Waldo of Kalamazoo, Mich. "Salary conditions among men teachers are almost as bad."

Mr. Waldo made a plea for the establishment of scholarships in state normal schools and urged more extensive libraries.

That there is great need for revision of the present program of commercial education was declared by F. G. Nichols, director of commercial education of the federal board of education of Washington.

At the afternoon session the following officers were elected:

Thomas W. Butcher, Emporia, Kas., president; W. C. Riggs, Oswego, N. Y., vice president for the eastern states; Cecil E. Evans, San Marcos, Tex., vice president for the southern states; W. W. Parsons, Terre Haute, Ind., vice president for the central states; George W. Nash, Bellingham, Wash., vice president for the western states; W. C. Cooper, Mankato, Minn., secretary-treasurer.

The following were elected members of the National Council of Education: H. H. Seerley, Cedar Falls, Ia.; Chas. H. Chapin, Montclair, N. J.; J. G. Wright, Greenville, N. C.; J. G. Crabbe, Greeley, Colo., and H. C. Minnich, Oxford, O.

Ravenswood Presbyterian Church Has 'Old Shoe Day'

Today is "old shoe day" at the Ravenswood Presbyterian church, Hermitage and Cullom avenues. Each member of the Sunday school is asked to dig around in the home corners and gather up castoff footwear. Some of it is pretty good, sometimes, you know. The old shoe shower will be at 12 o'clock sharp. The resultant pile of shoes will be distributed by a charity organization. The Rev. Frederick L. Selden is pastor of the church.

TAX LAW CARRIES RULING TO KEEP PEACE IN FAMILY

Husband and Wife Can Divide Returns if They Wish.

BY INCOME TAX EDITOR.

The income tax provisions of the internal revenue bill leave little room for disputes to mar the serenity of Chicago households as to who will file the returns in case a husband and wife both have incomes. Uncle Sam has tried to decide such fine points of domestic law with equal rights.

A broad interpretation by Collector Julius F. Smietanka holds that it is entirely up to the individuals as to whether they will act independently or as partners. Husband or wife, says the ruling, whose net income for 1918 equaled or exceeded $2,000 must file a return, but it may be separate or joint as desired. If separate, either party may claim the personal exemption of $2,000, or if they can't reach an agreement on this point it may be divided.

Widows and Maids.

Another ruling is that a widow, a woman living apart from her husband, or a maid must file a return if her net income for 1918 was $1,000 or more.

And here's something for Mr. Bachelor: If a bachelor's income for 1918 was exactly $1,000 it will not be wise for him to neglect to file a return. It is compulsory that he do so. The same applies to married men in case the net income was exactly $2,000, the amount the bill exempts for him.

A checking system will inform the bureau of delinquents. Under the "information at the source" provision of the act every individual, firm, or corporation which in 1918 paid to another $1,000 or more must make a return of such payment to the commissioner of internal reveuue. These returns are required of employers, lessees, mortgagers, fiduciaries, etc. Employers are required to make a separate return of each payment of $1,000 or more to employés, and wherever possible must must state whether the recipient is single or married.

Urges Early Returns.

The man or woman who this year is required to pay an income tax is urged by Collector Smietanka to file his return at once as a means not only of avoiding possible embarrassment, but as an aid to the government in the collection of its war revenue. The final date for filing is March 15.

"It must be remembered," said Collector Smietanka, "that the revenue to be derived under the current act is to be used to defray the cost of a war that has brought victory to the United States and its allies. If each taxpayer will compare his little bit with what would be demanded if the other side won he will understand."

Fraternal Societies Form Congress of 3,800,000

The American Fraternal congress, composed of fraternal societies with 3,800,000 members, was organized yesterday at a meeting in the Hotel Sherman. After bylaws had been adopted and an election held a committee was organized to look after legislation affecting fraternal organizations in the United States. The officers are headed by A. R. Talbot, president.

CARS COLLIDE IN TUNNEL.

Traffic was delayed in the Van Buren street tunnel for five or ten minutes yesterday afternoon when an east bound Blue Island avenue car collided with a Van Buren street car at the east end of the tunnel. Fifty or more passengers were jolted.

INCOME TAX ANSWERS

Chicago, Feb. 20.—[Income Tax Editor.]—Is money received from homestead, building and loan association, on maturity of stock, exempt from income tax or must it be included as income in income tax return? Should the fences on a farm be included in estimating the wear, tear, repairs, and property losses on farm, and be deducted from income tax returns? Should loss by injury to live stock, injured on farm, be deducted from income tax return?. Should donations to the Red Cross be deducted from income tax return? Should moneys donated to the war relief fund be deducted from income tax return?

1. Yes. 2. You will be allowed a small depreciation for fences. Loss on live stock by injury is deductable if not covered by insurance. Both items in last two questions are deductable.

A. S. P., Waukesha, Wis.—You will be allowed 2 per cent a year depreciation on the building. You may fix a fair valuation of the same as of March 1, 1918.

D. W. H.—While there is no specific provision in the bill whereby a teacher is exempted it has been held that it is unconstitutional to tax an official or employé of a state, city, or county, as this is considered indirect taxation assessed by the federal government against a state. 2. Teachers are liable for their income beyond what they receive as salaries if it exceeds the usual exemptions.

A. B.—As you are not living with your wife you are allowed only $1,000, the exemption of a single man. The bill provides that you must live with your wife to be allowed $2,000.

John B. A.—There is no tax on inheritance; only the income from such inheritance is taxable. 2. Yes.

S. L. S.—1. Not deductable because as yet there has been no completed transaction such as a sale to base your contention that the mining stock is worthless. 2. Interest on money borrowed on life insurance deductable. 3. Interest on club bonds not taxable, and the dividends are exempt from normal tax, but subject to the surtax if your income exceeds $5,000.

C. A. W., Quincy, Ill.—You may add the amount to your income and deduct the same amount as taxes.

A. L. K.—You may deduct the amount which you would receive for work done as the hotel's stenographer and include it in your rental. But you must include it, if you do this, in your income return.

S. S.—If your daughter turns over to you her salary that would be considered your income. If not, she will have to make a return, if her sasary is more than $1,000 a year. If she pays you board that also would be income. In view of the fact that she would in this case be self-supporting you could not claim $200 exemption for her.

M. C. A.—No, an amount invested in Liberty bonds is not deductible from your income. Because you purchased Liberty bonds did not make your income any less; on the other hand, you merely invested your money in the safest security.

H. H.—You are entitled to $2,000 exemption as head of a family.

M. H. T., Camp Custer—The provision is thta a man on active duty in the military or naval service is allowed an exemption of $3,500.

Automatic Lubrication—Fewer Parts

STEWARTS have fewer grease cups and places to oil—important because much unnecessary truck wear results from lubrication neglect.

The Stewart method of applying power delivers more than 90 per cent to the rear wheels and allows the springs, instead of the tires, to absorb starting and stopping shocks.

This, with the elimination of 600 to 700 parts, saves gasoline and tires, the largest items in cost of operation, and increases the life of Stewart trucks.

The average truck price is $200 to $300 more than the Stewart.

More than 200 lines of business now use Stewarts because of their simplicity and long life. Many firms operate fleets of from five to fifty.

When you buy Stewart transportation you get constant and efficient service.

Tell us your haulage problems and we will show you a Stewart that will answer your requirements.

LUE SKY LAW SAFEGUARD TO PUBLIC—LANDIS

s Statutes of South Dakota, Arizona, and Delaware.

"The incorporation laws of South akota, Arizona, and Delaware appear be merely the lying-in hospitals for ked concerns," Federal Judge dis, declared yesterday during the ing of a motion to dismiss the pe- n in bankruptcy filed by several ckholders against the Consumers' king company. Then he denounced Illinois "blue sky" law as of little e in its present form.

"It seems," he said, "that if several tlemen in Illinois want to start a poration without money they send tter to a politician in South Dakota. is the stool pigeon and immediately mes the resident director. Then y go to the secretary of state and, parently telling the truth—that they e not paid in a cent—he issue m a license. If he refuses they ndamus him. This gives the cor ation a sort of official sanction, al ugh they have not paid a cent ards the venture except $50 fo charter in South Dakota. These s do not help a legitimate scheme d they only strengthen an illegiti- te scheme."

Homes of the "Wild Cats."

He vehemently declared that Ari- a, South Dakota, and Delaware are wide open for corporate wild-catting" and that "they do this thing to get revenue, with the knowledge that it re- sults in financial debauchery."

It was a day of revelations regard- g the financing of the packing com- any which still is in its infancy. A. J. Messing, lawyer, rabbi, and a director of the company, who drew its incorporation papers, as well as its appli- cation to sell stock in Illinois, admitted on the witness stand that neither him- self, Edward J. Ader, the secretary- treasurer, or Eli Pfaelzer, president, had ever paid a nickel for stock. He also testified the "notes" they gave for their holdings were nonnegotiable and noninterest bearing and had ma- tured last July, but had not been re- deemed.

Cost of Selling High.

Henry Theobald, vice president and auditor, testified that of approximately $400,000 received from stock sales, the cost of selling it, including commis- sions and bonuses, had been $221,540. He said approximately $194,860 is yet due the company on stock and figured that the expense of selling the shares was "around 32 per cent." The Illinois "blue sky" law, supposedly, per- mits a selling expense of not exceeding 15 per cent.

A "jackpot" of 5,000 shares, par value $10, which was "split" among stock salesmen, John M. Kantor, former lieutenant of Mayor Thompson, receiving nearly $15,000, so excited the judge's curiosity that he ordered full particulars brought in tomorrow morning.

The "jackpot" does not show on the company's books, it was said, and supposedly has to do with stock of $50,000 par value voted by the directors to President Pfaelzer "for services" and later turned back by him.

State Official Named.

The name of W. R. Flint, deputy in charge of corporation licenses in the office of Secretary of State Emmerson figured in the testimony. Theobald testified Flint knew of the note transactions and had suggested auditing concerns to go over the company's books. Messing testified he had done business with a man in South Dakota in obtaining the company's charter who had "been recommended to him by Flint."

"The permit you obtained to sell stock in this state gives the sale an official sanction. Do you see any protection in the blue sky law?" the judge asked Messing.

"No, I do not," replied the witness.

"Understand," said Judge Landis, "I am not singling out this company as a target. I am calling attention to some manifest defects that need remedying."

MONROE STREET BRIDGE OPENED IN DRIVING STORM

City's Newest Improvement Ready to Relieve Congestion.

Chicago's newest public improvement, the Monroe street bridge, was opened for traffic yesterday. The dedicatory ceremonies were carried on in a driving snowstorm.

Mayor Thompson, Charles H. Wacker, chairman of the Chicago plan commission, and the aldermen presided at the opening of the new span. Frank I. Bennett, former commissioner of public works, was a guest of honor.

Special Cars Make Trip.

Street cars took the party from the La Salle street entrance of the city hall to the new bridge. The cars were run south in La Salle street and turned west in Monroe street. They were the first cars to cross the new span.

The mayor turned a lever and operated the bridge. Before this he was made an honorary member of the bridge operators' local union, No. 102.

"Shows 'I Will' Spirit."

"This shows the Chicago 'I Will' spirit," said the mayor. "The completion of this bridge was delayed by court litigation. But the bridge was needed, and now we have it."

"It is these things which take Chicago out of the provincial class and place it in the great city class," said Mr. Wacker.

The bridge will relieve the congestion on the Madison street span, which is to be closed for general traffic in a short time. The city will build a new bridge to replace it.

Col. J. V. Clinnin, Listed as Casualty, Is Again on Duty

READY TO OPEN LOWDEN'S BOOM AT WASHINGTON

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Actual organization of the campaign to nominate Gov. Lowden for president in 1920 will begin in Washington next week.

Secretary of State Lewis L. Emmerson and State Treasurer Fred E. Sterling will depart tomorrow for Washington prepared to launch the Lowden boom. They expect to confer with Senator Sherman and Senator Elect McCormick and with members of the Republican delegation from Illinois in the lower house. Chairman Frank L. Smith of the state Republican committee already is in Washington. The conference will outline the preliminary campaign and method of procedure.

An informal conference held in Chicago in January authorized State Chairman Smith and the Republican state committee to proceed as they saw fit.

Friends of Gov. Lowden in Springfield have received scores of letters from influential Republicans in all sections of the nation urging that Illinois do something definite in Gov. Lowden's behalf so that they may start operations in their own localities.

The Growing Movement To Prolong Human Life

FOR many years there has been an ever-growing movement for some central Institute or organization to help prolong human life and make it more livable—a fine, dignified, humanitarian type of organization approved by physicians of the highest ethical standing and irrevocably opposed to fads and quacks.

So it was that a little more than five years ago a number of forward-looking physicians, scientists, publicists and men of affairs founded the Life Extension Institute.

Primarily, its purpose is to reduce the Nation's death rate and to raise the level of physical well-being by providing unbiased, standardized, periodic health examinations and teaching the simple, every-day principles of personal hygiene that every man and woman ought to know to avoid disease.

These are the broad general principles that have led men like ex-President Taft, Alexander Graham Bell, Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale, Charles H. Sabin, Robert W. de Forest, and one hundred other eminent authorities in this country and abroad, to give their services to the work without compensation—other than the satisfaction of seeing its results.

More than 100,000 men and women in all parts of the United States have taken the health services of the Institute and have received its physical examinations, its guidance and instructions. In this vast number of members, many lives have been saved; much illness, suffering, waste and poverty prevented, proving the value of the Institute.

A Public-Welfare Organization

The Life Extension Institute is not a profit-making institution in the usual sense of the word. Two-thirds of the profits are set aside in a trust fund to be used solely for public health work of a national scope. Thus, the independent, nonpartisan, specialized character of the Institute and of the professional men behind it inspires confidence and guarantees the genuineness of the service rendered.

Every day more than 1,500 people die in the United States because they didn't know they were sick until disease had gotten such a start that it was impossible for the physician to check it after he had been called in. Figures show that there are hardly three people in a hundred who do not need some advice or suggestion regarding their physical condition or manner of living.

How many men and women there are who have never in all their lives had a real, thorough health examination! How many people really know whether they are healthy or not! How many need their attention called to some hidden disease! How many are taking patent nostrums for some wholly imaginary disease, while all the time some other serious difficulty is making insidious headway because it has not been pointed out!

To prolong life, to be protected against disease, and in most cases to restore health you must practice hygiene all along the line. Do a workmanlike job in clearing the body of infection, guarding it from further infection, from strain, from poison, from food deficiency and food excess, and you will be adding years to your life and immensely to your efficiency. But, first of all, you must have your body thoroughly examined to see if there is anything wrong that you do not as yet know anything about.

You cannot escape pneumonia, or heart trouble, or kidney trouble, etc., by saying simply that you have never had it or that you feel all right today.

You don't know. Often special laboratory or other diagnostic tests are necessary to reveal the difficulty. The only way to retain good health is by the detection and correction of physical impairments and by the improvement of your resisting power to wholly escape the malady that threatens.

Preceding most serious illness, there is usually a long period of impairment or of progressive changes that gradually reduce your value to yourself and to society. These changes are frequently so slow and insidious that you do not realize them until they are well advanced, but from the very beginning they leave signs that science can detect.

The Life Extension Institute offers you periodic health examinations and laboratory tests for the purpose of detecting disease in its incipiency, when proper treatment can check or cure it.

The Institute's system of examinations and reports was formulated in consultation with the members of the Hygiene Reference Board—men who have been engaged for years in analyzing human lives and influences that impair them. This system has been standardized from the Institute's wide experience in examining many thousands of individuals. The physical examination is only one part of the Institute's service!

Membership further includes quarterly chemic and microscopic examinations of the urine, review of the member's personal and family history, daily living habits and health problems, detailed reports, hygienic guidance and instruction, monthly health journals and Keep-Well leaflets.

Members also have the privilege of communicating with the Educational Department of the Institute at any time during the year for general information relating to disease prevention and the prolongation of life.

A Staff of 5000 Physicians

It makes no difference where you live. The Life Extension Institute comes to you, wherever you are. It has a branch office right here in Chicago, and a staff of more than 5,000 physicians throughout the United States.

* * * * * * * * *

Consider this Health Examination in the form of an investment. If there is anything wrong with you, you ought to know about it. If there isn't anything the matter, you want to know that, too.

With good health every day—with less worry—you could do practically twice the work you are doing now. Surely you could do it better. Surely life would hold more of the things that we all hold dear.

The cost of membership in the Life Extension Institute is low, because of its humanitarian character and national ideals.

Examinations of subscribers who live in Chicago and vicinity are made at the office of the Institute, 5 North Wabash Avenue—on appointment by telephone or letter—between the hours of 9 A. M. and 6 P. M.

Convenient appointments can also be arranged with the Institute's examiners in the member's home district or city. Visitors are always welcome at the office of the Institute.

* * * * * * * * *

It is difficult to put this into words without the tinge of commercialism, but don't you see how important it is and how fatal may be each day of delay?

Everything you do—your success in business—your happiness and the happiness of your family depend on your knowing just where you stand in regard to health and disease.

You incur no obligation whatsoever in filling out the coupon printed below. The booklets named were prepared by the Life Extension Institute for universal distribution in this great national movement to prolong human life. We shall mail them to you on request.

Stratton service—for all industries

ADDING the name Stratton to Gramm-Bernstein completes motor truck selling.

G-B trucks are good trucks all the way thru—which includes the things you can't see but which must be just as right as those which can be seen.

Signing a truck sale contract isn't the finish—it's just the start. You buy more than a truck—you buy continuous, economical motor transportation.

This means service—a word so much abused that I determined to individualize our kind with the identity mark Stratton—thus going on record with my personal responsibility to you.

Stratton Service backs every truck we sell no matter what hauling job the truck is to handle. Our last week's advertisement gave the result of a test made by a disinterested party to whom we gave the names of 25 G-B owners—who also bought Stratton service.

This party, in one day, succeeded in getting in personal touch with 21 executives. Twenty of them gave Stratton Service and G-B trucks the strongest motor truck and service indorsement we have ever heard.

Stratton Service serves all industries. You may regret buying any truck until you know our story—a story which to date in Chicago territory has more than met, not only every demand, but exceeded expectations of big concerns in such lines of industry as—

Coal	Groceries and Food Products
Asphalt	Truck Farming
Cement	Bus Line
General Teaming	Furniture

RESIDENCE DEALS FEATURE ACTIVE WEEK REALTY MARKET

POINTS CAUSES FOR WEAK REALTY SOUTH OF LOOP

Realty Board Luncheon Hears Troubles of Wabash Avenue.

While real estate men operating in the downtown district have a pretty clear understanding as to the causes behind the depression in Wabash avenue, between Van Buren and Twenty-second streets, the public generally, including many outside real estate men, are not so well informed, and there has been considerable speculation as to the factors responsible for this backward condition of the street.

For this reason the expert diagnosis of the trouble at Thursday's weekly luncheon of the Chicago real estate board by Albert H. Wetten and Frederick S. Oliver is particularly interesting. Both are former presidents of the board and both have had many years of experience in the downtown district, including the section in question.

Summarizing their arguments, tough saloons, disreputable hotels, an inferior class of buildings, the elevated road, the lack of public spirit and cooperation on the part of the property owners are the causes largely responsible for the unfavorable conditions which prevail.

Brief History of Street.

Mr. Wetten prefaced his remarks with the statement that retail streets, as a rule, develop progressively; that is, block by block, as the demand for space in the particular street increases, the development continuing until the reason therefor ceases to exist, or until the growth reaches a barrier, which diverts it to other locations.

He referred to the early history of the street, with its bright promise, which suffered a sad reaction with the failure of two large concerns, and later on when a revival, following the depressing effect of the elevated road, created fairly active conditions to the north of Van Buren street. To the south the development came in contact with the disreputable hotels, tough saloons, and other levee features, which have existed to a greater or less extent for the last quarter of a century.

These bad conditions have been emphasized, he said, owing to the unfortunate attitude of many property owners who have refused either to sell, lease under long term ground lease, improve, or, in fact, do anything for the best interests of the street. They have been waiting, he said, for their neighbors to improve and secure the benefit of the reflected value.

The dilapidated physical appearance of the street he referred to as another potent cause of trouble.

Urges Organization.

There was only one remedy, he said, the organization of progressive property owners, such as in South State street, and the elimination of levee features.

He said that during his twenty-one years of experience he had seen few optimistic predictions regarding the street fulfilled, while most of the pessimistic predictions had been. Under proper conditions, he said, the street should become a good retail street as far as Hubbard court.

Mr. Oliver called attention to the fact that the center of population had shifted from Fort Dearborn to about Twentieth and Fisk streets, and the drift of population should have been on a much more rapid scale south and west, but for artificial barriers—notably the big railroad yards west of State street from Van Buren to Twenty-second street. He called attention to the fact that between Taylor and Eighteenth streets, seven-ninths of a mile, there was only one connection with the west side, at Twelfth street.

He referred to the injurious effect of the Van Buren street end of the loop, which, he insisted, should be done away with, the routing of trains around the loop stopped, and the through routing of the elevated trains put into effect.

Mr. Oliver spoke of the great obstacle which the railroad yards have been to the growth of business southward, and said: "If the railroads were to pay the taxes on their terminal, such as people generally have to on their holdings, you would not see over $200,000,000 worth of land north of Sixteenth street lying in the condition it does today."

Santa Fe Market.

He referred to the plans of the Santa Fe road for the establishment of a great market between Eighteenth and Twenty-second streets, which, he said, would mean wonders to the property on the south side north of Twenty-second street.

Speaking of the condition of paving on Wabash avenue, he said that if the property owners on the street had resolved firmly to keep business off that street, they have done all they could in the paving on the street.

He also spoke of the poorly lighted condition of the street, and added that a thorough inspection had developed the fact that there is not one good new building on the street that is not well rented.

In closing he expressed the opinion that it is time for the property owners of Chicago, especially those in the south central business district, to quit despairing, to quit knocking, and begin boosting, to have a rebirth of the old Chicago spirit of "I will."

Sheridan Road Property Bought for Apartments

There was filed for record the acquisition by Henry J. Schlacks, architect, from Oscar F. Kesche of the property in Sheridan road, 322 feet north of Buena avenue, east front, 75x193 feet, with residence improvements, for an indicated consideration of $25,000, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000. The house is to be torn down to make room for the south wing of the Buena Terrace apartments, which will contain sixty-five apartments of two, three, and four room suites, the cost of which is placed at about $250,000.

FIELD INTERESTS LEASE SITE FOR BURLAP FACTORY

Owners of Kenwood District to Build Modern Plant.

There were several noteworthy transactions in manufacturing and outside business property, the week's business in this field being featured by the closing of a transaction involving the erection of a modern factory building in the Kenwood manufacturing district in the southwest part of the city, for Marshall Field & Co., who will use it for the manufacture of burlap bags.

The factory is to be erected by John S., Henry C., and Howard Phipps of New York, the owners of the Kenwood district. The proposed building, which will be located at the southeast corner of West Forty-seventh and Whipple streets, on 158x583 feet, will be one story high, will be provided with twenty saw tooth roof skylights, each fifty feet long, and with eight feet of north exposure of glass surface.

Leased to Field & Co.

It will be 520 feet long and 133 feet wide and is expected to cost between $170,000 and $180,000.

It has been leased to Field & Co. for a long term of years on an 8 per cent net basis, while the land is leased on the basis of 5 per cent on a reported valuation of about $35,000.

J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co. represented the owners of the district, while Murray & Terry represented Marshall Field & Co.

The boiler plant is to be in a separate building and the power will be electrical, generated by means of individual motors. Along the east length of the building there is to be a switch track with a capacity of twelve cars and a concrete loading platform nine feet wide extending the full track length.

One of Six Deals.

Including the present transaction, there have been six large transactions closed in the Kenwood district during the last thirty days, covering 757,076 square feet of ground, the largest being the sale to R. J. Kittredge & Co., which includes 400,000 square feet.

FATHER OF GATES HEIRESS BUYS BARRELL ESTATE

Two notable transactions in high class Lake Forest residence property are reported, in one of which Delors Angell, father of 16 year old Dellora Angell, heiress to the greater part of the $38,000,000 estate of Mrs. Dellora R. Gates, has purchased the home of Finley Barrell. The grounds, which are laid out handsomely, comprise about fifteen acres, traversed by a ravine and the house, which was erected about eight years, is on a tract of about nine acres on the east side of Sheridan road at Rosemary avenue.

It is of fireproof construction and was designed by Architect Howard Shaw.

The consideration is not disclosed, but the property is said to represent an original investment of about $250,000. Mr. Barrell recently built and moved into a new house on Deerpath road. It is said that the furnishings, fixtures, library and objects of art belonging to Mrs. Gates, will be moved from her former home, at the Plaza hotel, New York.

The other transaction was the purchase by Mason Phelps, president of the Pheoll Manufacturing company, from W. C. Niblack, vice president of the Chicago Title and Trust company, the property on Deerpath road, half a mile west of Lake Forest, overlooking the Onwentsia club, for a reported consideration of $40,000. There are about five acres of ground, the house being a ten room structure. Mr. Niblack has rented the home of Prof. Bridgman of the Lake Forest university.

Chicago Realty Board Getting Many Members

The campaign of the Chicago real estate board for new members is meeting with marked success. In a little over a month nearly 125 active new members have been secured, as well as about 75 associate members, 12 special associate members and 15 life members, the latter including presidents and other heads of leading financial institutions. Byron V. Kanaley is general chairman of the committee, the sectional chairmen being Callistus S. Ennis, central; Frederick J. Phillips, west, and Charles Kussman, south. A complimentary dinner to former members of the Chicago Renting Agents' association, and others, who joined during the present campaign, will be given by the board on Tuesday at 6:30 o'clock.

Plans $140,000 Apartment on Hyde Park Boulevard

Another high grade apartment building is to be erected on Hyde Park boulevard, east of Woodlawn avenue. It will cover 100 feet of south frontage running through to Madison park, which was purchased by Lars J. H. Larson from William Friedman for an indicated consideration of $25,000. While Mr. Larson will not improve at once, it is his purpose, when conditions are more favorable, to improve with a high grade twelve apartment building of six and seven rooms with two and three baths, to cost in the neighborhood of $140,000. Draper & Kramer were the agents in the purchase of the land.

J. Ogden Armour Gives Daughter Valuable Site

J. Ogden Armour has given another valuable piece of property to his daughter, Lolita Armour. It comprises the parcel at the southwest corner of Sixty-third street and Prairie avenue, 372x197 feet, valued at between $50,000 and $75,000. The consideration is stated to be "love and affection." In July, 1917, he gave to his daughter the land occupied by White City, which is under long term lease at a present annual rental of $12,000, which will go to $15,000 after 1935.

BIG ACTIVITY DEVELOPS IN LOOP LEASES

Business Houses Take Over Much Space for New Enterprises.

There was a great deal of an unusually important character doing during the last week in the way of leases of business space, both in the downtown district as well as outside. The showing as a whole was the best for a long time.

Of special interest was that covering the first four floors and basement of the building at the southeast corner of North Michigan and Lake street for ten years at a term rental of $160,000. The lease, which is from Clara F. Bass to the Spoehr Candy company, has a special interest as marking the beginning of the opening of high grade retail business in the new boulevard link district.

Mr. Spoehr will use the three upper floors for his general offices, and after extensive remodeling will open the store for the sale of candies, fountain products, and luncheons. Mrs. Bass was represented by Harry E. Edmonds, while Robert White & Co. represented Mr. Spoehr.

Close Three Leases.

E. F. Keebler & Co. have closed three store leases in the downtown district with aggregate term rentals of $215,000, the most important being for the estate of L. Z. Leiter to Edward E. Gittleson covering the double store at 13-15 East Jackson boulevard with a frontage of thirty-two feet, in the building at the northeast corner of the boulevard and State street, for ten years from March 1 at a term rental of $122,000. Mr. Gittleson is president of a new tailoring concern which is opening a chain of stores in the loop.

The same brokers have leased to the same firm for Harry C. Moir, president of the Morrison Hotel company, the store at 21 North Clark street for ten years from May 1 at a term rental of $60,000; they also have leased for Efting & Darling, owners of the Delco lunchrooms, to Frank H. Wager, the store at 1047 Wilson avenue, north front, between Broadway and Kenmore avenue, for ten years from May 1 at term rental of $33,000, the store to be occupied as a salesrooms for men's tailoring.

Plans Clothing Store.

Another of the notable leases of the week covered the store at 19 East Jackson boulevard and all of the space on the second and third floors over 19, 21, and 23, same street, which has been leased by Mrs. Clara F. Bass, represented by Harry C. Edmonds, to the Joe Beeson company, men's clothing, for a term of eight years at a term rental of $150,000, or $19,500 a year.

Mr. Beeson is associated with Ed V. Price & Co., wholesale custom tailors, in the capacity of treasurer and assistant manager, but he will not sever his connection with Price & Co. with the opening of his retail establishment. Frank L. Morse will be the general manager for the new store. He and Mr. Beeson have been associated together in the men's wear business in a chain of stores in Iowa, also in Chicago, Boston, Kansas City, and Los Angeles.

Robert White & Co. have leased for the L. Z. Leiter estate to the Spoehr Candy company the double store and basement at 168-172 West Adams street, between La Salle and Wells, at a term rental of $85,000. After extensive alterations Mr. Spoehr will occupy the store May 1 as a retail shop.

Get Gunther Building Lease.

Willis & Frankenstein report several leases, the most important being for Charles F. Gunther to the United Agencies of the entire fifth and sixth floors of the Gunther building, at the northwest corner of Wabash avenue and Eleventh street, at a term rental from May 1 of $65,000; also for the International Life Insurance company of St. Louis to the Bass Camera company the store at 109 North Dearborn street at a term rental of $12,000 from May 1.

Nelson Thomasson Jr. has given a trust deed to the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings bank to secure a loan of $45,000, five years at 6 per cent, on the Gardner block at 4811-21 North Kedzie avenue.

A. M. Krensky & Bro. have negotiated loans aggregating $200,000, including one for $30,000 at 5½ per cent, on the eighteen flat building northwest corner Broadway and Crescent place.

MANY RESIDENCE DEALS LISTED IN WEEK'S BUSINESS

Several noteworthy transactions in residence property, both in Chicago and on the north shore, figured in the week's market.

In an interesting transaction in Wilmette residence property Frederick A. Rye has sold to Constantin M. Mazoor the property in Laurel avenue, between Fifth and Sixth streets, north front, 75x224 feet, with ten room brick dwelling, for an indicated consideration of $20,000, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000.

An important transaction in high grade Winnetka vacant property made a matter of record was the purchase by Mrs. Frances D. Kemp from William Bross Lloyd of the 75x475 feet on Sheridan road back to the lake, adjoining the Kemp residence, for a stated consideration of $22,500. J. L. Floyd represented both parties to the transaction.

Warren W. Shoemaker, department manager for Armour & Co., has bought from Alden R. Ludlow, assistant to the president of the Liquid Carbonic company, the attractive Dutch colonial residence, Green Bay road and Scott avenue, Hubbard Woods, lot 170x200 feet, for a reported consideration of about $15,500. Frederick B. Thomas was the broker.

Vogelsang to Await Building Cost Drop

It was announced during the week that John Vogelsang, the restaurant owner, has under consideration the erection of a seventeen story hotel on the site of his restaurant on the south side of Madison street, just east of Wells street. The proposed building, the plans for which are being prepared by Holabird & Roche, will front 85 feet with a depth of from 100 to 189 feet, and is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $1,000,000. The plans are said to prvide for about 500 rooms, but it is understood the work of construction will wait for more favorable building conditions.

DEALS OF WEEK IN APARTMENTS INDICATE BOOM

$150,000 Investor's Purchase Leads Transfers.

The market for apartment property showed a sharp improvement over that for several preceding weeks, particularly in the number of good sized transactions, one being a $150,000 cash sale made for investment purposes.

This was the sale by Aaron E. Nusbaum of New York to James A. and Kate Gidderman of the property at the northwest corner of Michigan avenue and Thirty-sixth place, through to Wabash avenue. The lot is 130x367 feet and is improved with a three story building containing fifty-one apartments of four to ten rooms, having a gross annual rental of about $27,000. David S. Simon and B. W. Eisendrath represented all parties. The building, which is of fireproof construction, was erected a number of years ago by the late George Hankins and is said to have been valued at one time at about $400,000. The consideration in the present sale is said to have been $150,000.

A large north side transaction was the sale by Moses E. Greenebaum to Albert W. Swayne of Mountain, Wis., of the twenty-four apartment building of four and five rooms at 1458-64 Argyle street, lot 100x172 feet, having a gross annual rental of about $11,000, for a reported consideration of $80,000, subject to an incumbrance of $55,000. In part payment the purchaser conveyed a stock farm of 200 acres, with modern improvements, at Mountain, Wis., at a consideration of $30,000, subject to $5,000. The farm was resold to Guy Gibbon at the same price. The office of John B. De Voney represented all parties to the transaction.

WAR FINANCIAL BODY TO HELP EXPORT TRADE

House Committee Favors Continuing Loans for Commerce.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—Provision for continuing the war finance corporation, with authority to aid export trade where its financing cannot be arranged through private sources, was approved today by the house ways and means committee.

The legislation would extend the authority of the corporation to permit it to make loans in the aid of American commerce, supplementing the aid now given by the treasury through direct loans to allied governments and as a measure relieving the treasury of demand for such loans.

Limit Is $1,000,000,000.

Loans for export trade under terms of the bill may be for a period of five years, but no loans to American exporters are permitted if private capital is available, and the interest rate on such advances is fixed at not less than 1 per cent. These loans, limited to $1,000,000,000, may be made within one year after the proclamation of peace by the president, but at the end of that time the corporation is directed to begin its liquidation.

The bill limits the total of future loans to foreign governments to the unloaned portion of $10,000,000,000 previously authorized and permits such loans to be made only for eighteen months after the president's peace proclamation. Members of the committee explained that this provision was inserted to enable the United States to sell equipment sent overseas before the cessation of hostilities, such as railroad rolling stock, to the allied governments.

May Save Wheat Losses.

The provision, it was said, also is expected to aid in the marketing of American wheat abroad in such a manner as to lessen as much as possible the loss to the government under the guaranteed price.

The committee adopted the recommendation of Secretary Glass to reopen the privilege of converting 4 per cent bonds into bonds bearing 4¼ per cent interest. The secretary is authorized to extend the privilege for such a period as he may consider advisable.

France Needs Big Lot.

Officials pointed out that estimates of the French high commission indicated that France would need $414,000,000 of materials from the United States early this year for reconstruction. This estimate includes food, $140,000,000; cotton, $100,000,000; gasoline and petrol, $37,000,000; window glass, $12,000,000; locomotives, $18,500,000; railway cars, $46,000,000, and agricultural implements $25,000,000.

LIGHT RECEIPTS OF COARSE GRAIN FAVOR HOLDERS

All the grain markets were closed yesterday, Washington's birthday. The operators who were down at their offices were in the main friendly to the buying side of coarse grains on breaks, particularly the corn. Receipts are running the lightest at this time in eleven years. Total grain receipts at Chicago last week were only 2,843,000 bu, or 29 per cent less than the previous week, 54 per cent short of last year, and 56 per cent below the five year average. Primary receipts decreased 51 per cent from last year and were 44 per cent short of the five year average, the aggregate being 9,589,000 bu of all grains, of which 2,435,000 bu were corn.

Provision shipments from Chicago last week were the largest on record, being 127,881,000 lbs of cured and fresh meats, compared with 53,417,000 lbs last year. Practically all the stock here is sold to go out.

Make "Blue Sky" Law Effective.

Plans for a national "blue sky" law, as announced at Washington a few days ago, involve the same defect that makes the state laws on this subject do more harm than good. The bill as proposed will require all promoters who want to sell stock through the mails to "file comprehensive statements concerning their stocks." This is good as far as it goes, but it fails to provide the one safeguard that would be effective. It specifies that the statements shall be "filed" when they should also be put before every person who is asked to buy stock.

The state laws require promoters to "file" a statement and obtain a license to sell stock. Armed with a license, the stock salesman tells the small investor that his company has the approval of the state and shows documentary evidence to prove it. The uninformed investor thinks anything licensed by the state must be sound. If, instead of a license, the salesman were compelled to display a financial statement showing assets and liabilities, also profits and losses, if any, the people he aproached would use their own judgment instead of relying on that of the officials who issued the license.

The person who has savings to invest usually has some judgment of his own, and the law ought to give him a chance to use it rather than attempt to decide for him. The small investor's knowledge of investments in general probably is inferior to that of the official, but he has the advantage of knowing what is suited to his particular needs.

Brief Answers.

L. S. L.—The New York, New Haven and Hartford did not fully earn its interest charges last year. Interest probably will be paid by the government during the period of government control. What will happen after that nobody can predict. The debentures of 1922 are unsecured and speculative.

H. F. S., Milwaukee, Wis.—The latest loan of Swift & Co. is unsecured. In view of the large earnings and financial strength of the company it is entitled to a good rank as a business man's investment. It is practically long time commercial paper.

The Berry Ventilator is the only successful, indestructible ventilator ever devised. Tens of thousands in use, and now that it is possible to get steel we are preparing for a big increase in business.

Last year over a million ventilating devices of one kind or another were sold, in spite of practically no building operations, for use in private residences, office buildings, factories, schools and hospitals. At least 90% were without merit—mere makeshifts—ready for the junk heap within a month. They were made of wood, cloth and other destructible materials. They rotted and warped, but above all they never served the purpose intended.

And Yet People Wasted Good Money on These Flimsy Contraptions

We are ready to supply the tremendous demand for a practical ventilator. Every Berry Ventilator sold sells others. It is the only perfect ventilator—admits a continuous flow of fresh air without any dust or dirt—keeps out rain and snow—locks windows and lasts indefinitely.

Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles

2E-1422-1426 Lytton Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Half of the Purchase Price Is Paid by the Profits Earned from the 700 Trees in Your 10-Acre

California Almond Orchard

Planted and Cultivated by Expert Horticulturist

Your Almond Orchard will be planted, cultivated and cared for by G. A. Nehrhood, Expert Horticulturist and our Active Field Manager—a man who owns, has planted and has under his direct supervision more Acres of Almond Orchards than any other man in the world today. Mr. Nehrhood, who selected the Association's land, after years of searching and testing, personally guarantees to you to plant in your Almond Orchard healthy, well rooted, sturdy trees—and should any of these trees not thrive or should they die, he will immediately replace them. with selected stock trees without cost to you.

No other man in California knows better how to force California's richest soil, California's unequalled growing climate and California's most profitable crop to produce wealth for you.

Why Not Add a Liberal Annual Almond Orchard Income to Your Present Income---Starting Now with an Investment of $100 or More

Seeing is Believing

We have no fault to find with any man or woman who hesitates to put money into any proposition at a distance, without first getting all the facts and knowing beyond the possibility of contradiction that everything is exactly as represented.

To encourage the most rigid investigation right on our property—to check up every claim and statement made in our booklet, "Inside Information"—we voluntarily inaugurated our Pleasure-Investigation Tours to Paso Robles under our Money-Back Agreement reproduced on this page. The first trip left Chicago January 25th, the second tour left Saturday, February 15th, and the third investigation party will leave March 8th. The men and women who are making these trips to the Association's Almond Orchards are not only personally investigating for themselves, but will investigate for you and REPORT DIRECT to you the result of their investigations.

We realize that not every one is in a position to visit California now, so we have arranged our Money-Back Agreement to protect those who cannot go.

The telegrams and Special Reports we have received from those who have made the trip would more than fill this entire page—the ORIGINALS are on file at our office for your inspection—and we will gladly mail copies to those living at a distance.

What Hard-Headed Business Men Say

Here's a man who lives in Chicago—Allan A. Murray, member of the firm of Murray & Terry. He is a prominent North Shore Real Estate man, operating in Glencoe, Highland Park, Winnetka, Wilmette and with main offices at 40 North Dearborn Street, Chicago. He is also a member of the Chicago and the Cook County Real Estate Boards. This man knows real estate and he KNOWS VALUES. He has just returned from visiting our Almond Orchards at Paso Robles, investigating for himself and for some of his clients.

This is PROOF POSITIVE. Let him tell you the result of his investigation on the ground—here is his report in part:

"I spent three days looking over the lands, investigating through various sources, and seeing other lands improved with Almond Trees of varying ages—from 1 to 35 years.

"The one year old trees before pruning are from 4 to 6 feet tall, the four year old trees run as high as 9 to 10 feet. The four year old trees were planted and owned by Mr. Nehrhood, the property manager for the Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles, and this tract struck me as most remarkable, not only as to soil, but as to condition of the trees. The remarkable feature of the soil is the strata of marl, not unlike soft limestone, at various depths beneath the surface. This marl consists largely of lime, with some potash, and, of course, is the very best natural fertilizer, and I have every reason to believe absolutely avoids the necessity of any other kind of fertilizer at any time in the life of the tree. This marl acts like a sponge in holding the moisture.

"I never saw better looking and more thrifty trees of any kind in my life. The property now being planted by the Association, I understand, has for years past grown fine crops of wheat without the slightest irrigation.

"At our request, Mr. C. C. Staunton, Horticultural Commissioner for San Luis Obispo County, accompanied us and examined the soil in several places and from his remarks I judge that he considered it extraordinary. He was most enthusiastic. He also gave us a practical demonstration of his and Mr. Nehrhood's method of pruning by which they have succeeded in reducing the time in which a tree will bear commercially two years.

"I have been told very emphatically by Mr. Staunton, as well as Dr. Clements, Agricultural Commissioner of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, who also examined the tract, as well as the nursery stock set out by Mr. Nehrhood, that this stock was in reality the finest they had ever seen in California. Among other properties we looked at was the extensive planting belonging to Paderewski, the Pianist.

"Master of the Art of Almond Culture"

"I am firmly convinced that Mr. Nehrhood is master of the Art of Almond Culture. It is now his life's work.

"On my way home I had time to do some figuring and thinking. When I considered that one secures what has been very valuable wheat land, in the midst of a beautiful park-like section of California, a short distance from the ocean, where no irrigating or fertilizing is necessary, all easily accessible from the main highways, the land to be thoroughly cultivated, as often as 8 to 10 times each year for the first few years, planted with the very best possible nursery stock, and all taken the best care of for four years, and no taxes or interest to pay during this time, the price seems very reasonable, and particularly in view of the results produced in the commercial bearing crops.

"From an investment standpoint, I believe that the improved land will be enhanced in value about $100.00 per acre each year for ten years after planting, over and above the initial cost and outside of the yearly expenses and the value of each year's crop.

"From careful investigations I have every reason to believe that the lands offered by the Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles will prove to be a splendid investment, and I feel that I can, without the slightest hesitation, recommend them to any one desiring to invest in California, whether they expect to make their future home there or not.

"I believe all the people officially connected with the Association to be thoroughly honest, honorable and men of unquestionable integrity. I have known some of them many years and they certainly stand high in business and in the community in which they live.

"I also believe Mr. Nehrhood to be one of the best authorities on Horticulture, soil and climatic conditions in the state, and from the many talks I had with him I believe he is thoroughly honest and means exactly what he says and that any statement he makes can be relied upon. I have such confidence in Mr. Nehrhood that I preferred to have him select a tract for myself to be planted this year, rather than to endeavor to make such a selection alone, even after seeing the land, and looking over it carefully.

"As for California as a place of residence, it is wonderful in every sense of the word. I really believe that any person can work less and play more and still make a good living there than in any other state in the union, and at the same time enjoy to the full the wonderful climate and scenery of California."

More Proof Positive

You have read what this big real estate operator of Chicago reports after visiting our Almond Orchards at Paso Robles.

The President of a large Electrical Lighting and Fixture concern in Davenport, Iowa, visited our Almond Orchards near Paso Robles and in a written report he says in part:

"I spent a delightful three days in going over these properties in company with Mr. G. A. Nehrhood, Field Manager of the Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles, and Mr. C. C. Staunton, the County Horticulturist of San Luis Obispo County, in which Paso Robles is located.

"I found everything that has been stated about the quality of the land owned by this Association very modestly stated. There is no question that this is the very choicest Almond Land in this selected Almond region. One thing that impressed me very much upon inspecting the Almond tracts already planted was a full stand of seventy healthy trees to the acre. The condition of these orchards shows the skill and care that has been devoted to their cultivation. Mr. Nehrhood, who has charge of the planting and cultivation of these orchards, is spoken of most highly by every one I came in contact with and I feel that under his supervision these Almond Orchards will be very successful.

"We were given the privilege of examining hundreds of acres planted with Almond Trees in this region, ranging all the way from one to thirty-five years in age, and I saw very few orchards of the same ages as those developed by Mr. Nehrhood which approached his in size and uniformity.

"Mr. Nehrhood has a very capable organization in carrying out his work, and from my observation, as well as from the reputation he bears, I feel confident that he is absolutely competent.

"I made this trip after having made a purchase under the agreement that my payment was to be returned to me, as well as my transportation expenses, if the investigation was not as represented, and I am pleased to say that I am fully satisfied."

The name of this Davenport business man and his address will be given to you upon request, also a full copy of his original report.

Your Almond Crops Pay Half the Purchase Price

This is a business proposition for business men and women—who are used to doing things in a business-like way.

If you can join our next Pleasure-Investigation Trip leaving Chicago March 8th and you do not find our proposition to be as stated in our Booklet, "Inside Information," we agree to refund any initial payment you have made and to also pay back to you the amount you have paid for railroad and Pullman fares. While you are at Paso Robles investigating, you will without any cost on your part be the guest of this Association.

If you cannot make the trip, then we will assist you to appoint some one who is going and who will act as your personal representative, reporting direct to you. Read again our Money-Back Agreement on this page.

You can pay as little as $100 down and the balance in easy payments. You will never be called upon to pay more than one-half of the purchase price for your 10, 20, 50 or 100 acre Almond Orchard—this Association agrees to accept one-half the price from the profits earned from the sale of the Almond crops.

Paso Robles is about midway between San Francisco and Los Angeles—on the famous El Camino Real or King's Highway—about an hour's ride from the mountains or the Pacific Ocean—and situated on the main line of the Southern Pacific Railway.

Paso Robles is wonderful for its scenic beauty—its $500,000 hotel, natural hot sulphur, lithia and mud baths—its $25,000 Municipal Bath House—salt water bathing, limitless outdoor recreations, fishing and hunting.

California's Biggest Money Earner

Why Almonds?

Because Paper Shell Almonds are scarce. For several years the entire California Almond Crop has been sold for spot cash on the ground IN LESS THAN ONE HOUR'S TIME.

Almonds are inexpensive to raise and yield the biggest net profits. Last season, 1918, Almonds sold at 25½c per lb. on the ground. The entire cost of producing and marketing Almonds in a well cared for Almond Orchard will not exceed 3c per lb. In an official Booklet the Chamber of Commerce of Paso Robles states that a safe estimate would be ½ ton of Almonds per acre. This would be 10,000 lbs. from a 10-Acre Orchard, and at a profit of only 20c per lb. would give you a net profit of $2,000 from 10 Acres. It also states that $3,000 and up to $5,000 net incomes are obtainable from 10-acre almond orchards.

You pay no "Extras" of any kind. The Association will plant, cultivate and care for your Almond Orchard for four years without charge to you—it pays the taxes for four years.

Absolutely NO IRRIGATION is required—and this means a saving of $1,000 on a 10-acre Orchard at the start, and about $200 saving each year thereafter.

NO FERTILIZER is necessary. The Chamber of Commerce of Paso Robles in its booklet states that experts claim that if the natural deposit of lime and potash were not present, it would cost $2,000 for every acre to put in as much commercial fertilizer.

PIANIST PREMIER OF POLAND—Ignace Jan Paderewski, the world-famous pianist, is now premier and foreign minister of the Republic of Poland under the coalition government which is now in full control. As fiery a patriot as he is a musician, Paderewski has stirred his country into a passionate feeling of nationalism with a determination to wrest Posen from the Germans. He is held chiefly responsible for the recent disorder in Posen. Before going to Europe, Paderewski for over three years devoted his entire time to raising relief funds for the stricken people of Poland. He has given up his artistic career to become the chief executive of the long dismembered land of his birth. Paderewski was born in Podolia, Russian Polapd, on Nov. 6, 1860. He was married in 1899 to the Baroness de Rosen. They have no children.

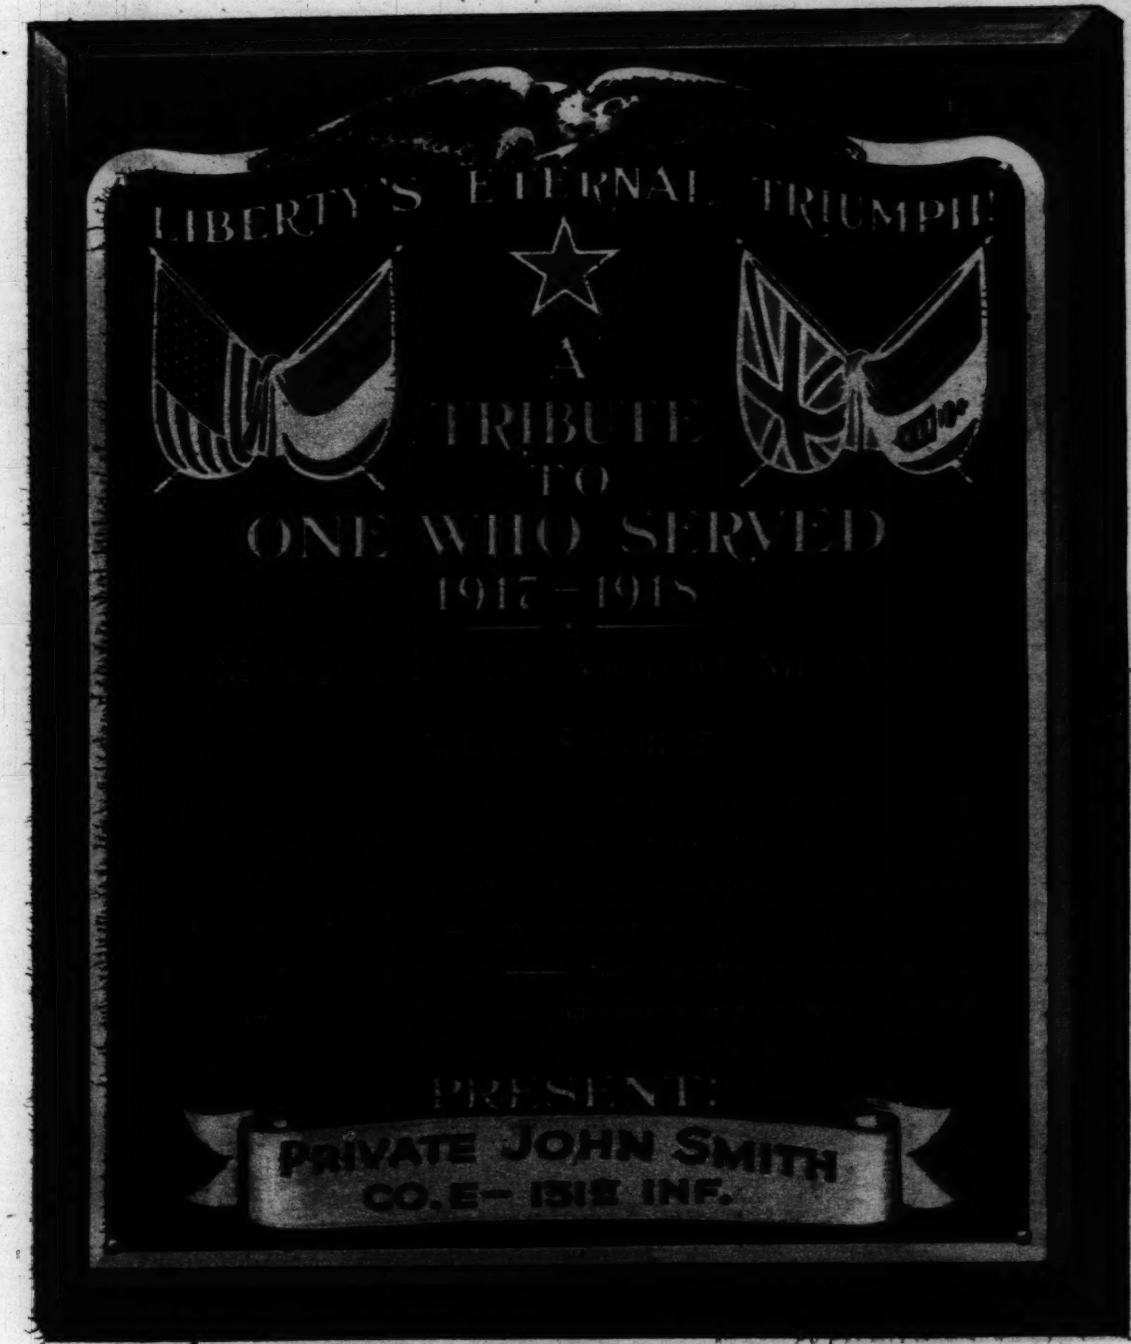
The Victory Tablet

Your highest patriotism to-day is grateful remembrance. Keep a record of his service and place it in a shrine.



The Victory Tablet, a permanent and refined memento to his loyalty, replaces the service flag and is an enduring tribute to him who took part in the Great World War.

The illustration at left is reduced, the actual size of the Victory Tablet being 8½ x 10½ inches.

For Him Who Served

The Service Flag has now served its purpose and the day is here when this silent tribute shall be taken from the window and put away—in many homes with a memory and a tear.

BUT THE SERVICE FLAG HAS A SUCCESSOR! THE VICTORY TABLET. Now more than ever, honor should be paid to him who has served, and tribute should take a lasting and appropriate form.

The Victory Tablet will be a permanent and refined memento to any man who has served in any branch of the United States service here or over there and for families, friends, clubs, churches, employers or business associates, no more fitting memorial could be desired.

The Victory Tablet is a handsome, Bronze, Silver or Brass plate mounted on a rich, dull finished, mahogany base. It is beautifully etched and enameled, the flags being in color, is 8½ x 10½ inches and may be hung on the wall or set on the desk. There is a scroll at lower end of tablet to be engraved with name of man in service.

The Victory Tablet is exquisitely designed and inscribed in perfect harmony with the high ideal it commemorates, and will appeal to persons of refinement and culture. Literature, art and patriotism in their finest expressions combine to make this the ideal memorial. There is nothing about it to suggest the cheap and spectacular and it is incomparably finer than anything of its kind yet offered. The entire atmosphere is one of refinement; it reverently and quietly relates his service in a manner and setting that will adorn the home, office, factory, church or club.

For Sale At All Leading Stores

If your dealer cannot supply you, enclose currency, check or money-order together with name of man in service and data to be engraved and desired style will be sent directly to you, postage prepaid.

How to Build NOW at Before the War Costs

Eliminate the Usual 18% Lumber Waste and the Usual 40% Labor Waste!

$1,548 for this Aladdin Home

$1,345 for this Aladdin Home

$1,213 for this Aladdin Home

$970 for this Aladdin Home

The Aladdin System of Home Building has been practicing for 13 years the principle the World has only learned during the war—the elimination of waste. By saving the usual 18% lumber waste and the 40% labor waste in home building as effected by the Aladdin System, it is possible to build now at Before the War Costs.

How to Beat the Present High Cost of Building

Saving waste is more important when prices of material and labor are high. The Aladdin System of Construction has reduced lumber waste to less than 2%. This means in saving to the home builder an amount that approximately brings the cost of a home built this year to what it would have cost before the war. Because the Aladdin System of Construction prepares all the lumber in our mills ready to be nailed in place, you can pay the present high wages and still keep the labor cost where it was before the war. One man will do in six days with Aladdin materials what it requires ten days to accomplish without Aladdin's System. The Beautiful Aladdin Catalog explains this very completely and thoroughly.

"One of the best uses for money earned during the war is to set it to work on building a home of your own."—Secretary Wilson, U. S. Dept. of Labor.

Secretary Wilson further says: "During the war it was patriotic not to build. Now, we can best show our patriotism by building a home." The great Aladdin organization is planned, arranged and operated to serve home builders. Every phase of the home building project from the excavation to the completed home is in charge of experienced brains. This service becomes a part of every transaction and smooths out the usual difficulties and troubles ordinarily encountered by the home builder.

The Lumber That's Wasted Costs Just as Much as the Lumber That's Used.

A better home for less money! That's the verdict of thousands upon thousands of Aladdin customers. Certified records of 25%, 35%, 40% saved by the Aladdin System of Construction are on file in our offices. Ask for copies of these records in your own community. Talk with your neighbors who have built Aladdin homes. Get the facts at first hand. Waste saving is the chief reason. Valuable high-priced lumber is saved from the waste pile by the Aladdin Readi-Cut System, and this money stays in your pocket. "The lumber that's wasted costs just as much as the lumber that's used." Read all about this remarkable system in the Aladdin Catalog.

Aladdin's Dollar-a-Knot Guaranty Proof of High Quality.

Knotless lumber, the purest and clearest that ever came out of the forest, is the kind that Aladdin houses are made of. This is evidenced by our famous Dollar-a-Knot guaranty which has now been in effect over four years. Better quality lumber does not grow. The highest grade paints, hardware, doors, windows, mill work, etc., are all included with every Aladdin house. The same grade, the best, is furnished for the small as for the large houses.

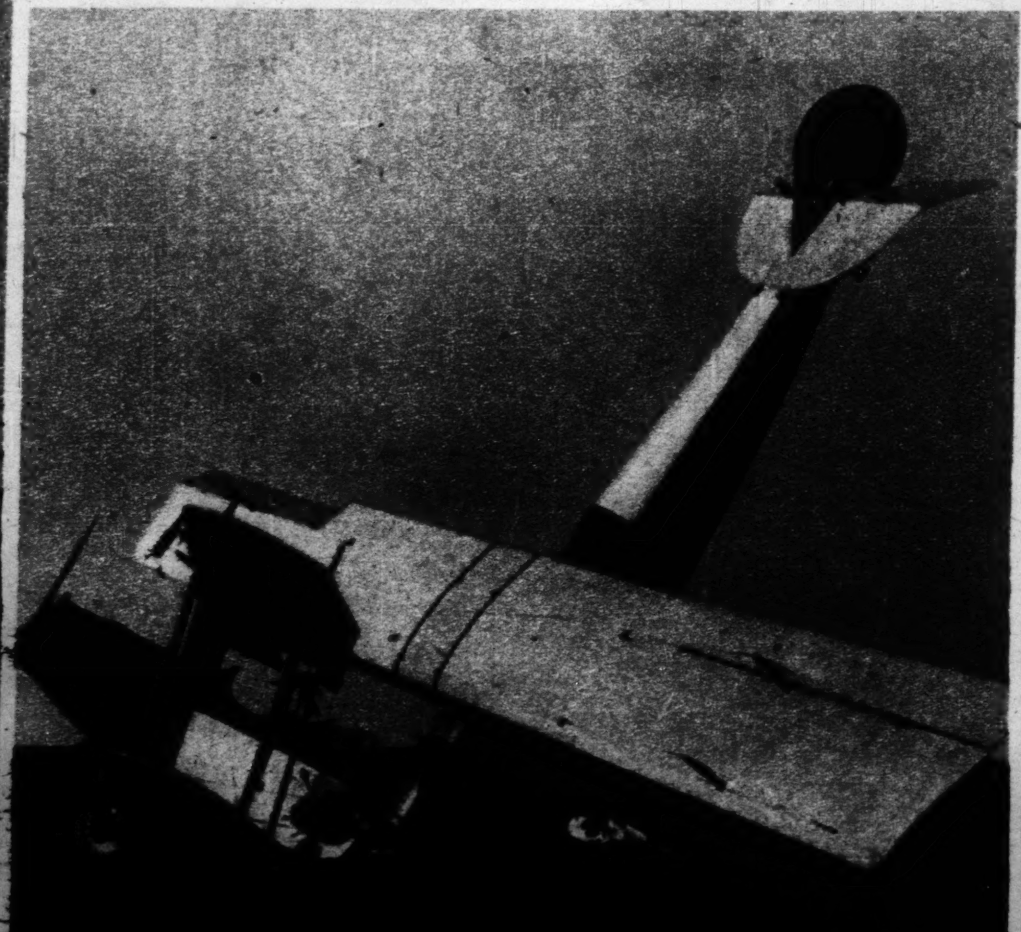
GOING BACK ON A GOOD FRIEND—An ambulance, alone on the field, was the unwitting target of a loco aeroplane which, through some defect, swooped down and flew into the ambulance, knocking it over. Luck was with the pilot and driver, who escaped injury.

FREAK FALLS OF AEROPLANES

DROPPING IN FOR REPAIRS—During the war photographs of accidents were not permitted to be published. The photograph shows how an aeroplane fell through the roof of a garage. The pilot escaped injury.



A HALTED FLIGHT—The machine to the left had just warmed up for an ascent when another plane plunged into it nose-down and cut the first machine in half. Both pilots escaped injury.

Conspicuous Nose Pores –

How to reduce them

COMPLEXIONS otherwise flawless are often ruined by conspicuous nose pores.

The pores of the face are not as fine as on other parts of the body. On the nose especially, there are more fat glands than elsewhere and there is more activity of the pores.

These pores, if not properly stimulated and kept free from dirt, clog up and become enlarged.

To reduce enlarged nose pores: wring a soft cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

Try this special treatment and supplement it with the steady general use of Woodbury's Facial Soap. Before long you will notice a marked improvement in your skin. But do not expect to change completely in a week a condition resulting from long continued exposure and neglect.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. Get your cake at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25 cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

Begin tonight the famous Woodbury treatment for enlarged pores. You will find it, as well as other treatments for the commoner troubles of the skin, in the booklet wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap

Write today for a week's size cake

For 6c we will send you a trial size cake (enough for a week or ten days of any Woodbury facial treatment) together with the booklet of treatments, "A Skin You Love to Touch." For 12c we will send, in addition, a sample of Woodbury's Facial Powder. Address The Andrew Jergens Co., 26 Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

PRISCILLA DEAN—When you've seen Priscilla Dean, you'll say, no doubt, that she's a queen—at any rate, you'll say, she's "different." This petite Universal star reminds you in turn of a kitten and a Jap. She's a pretty witch with loads of dark hair that she delights in dressing after outre styles of her own. She has sparkling, up-slanting dark eyes and a saucy mouth with white teeth that look a little cruel, is 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 130 pounds and is a brunette. She was born in New York in 1896 and went on the stage at the age of four with Joseph Jefferson in Rip Van Winkle. She was also with the Ben Greet players in Shakespearean repertoire. Her film career has been with Biograph, Pathe, World Film and now Universal. It is only recently, however, that she has attracted any special attention. "Through Solid Walls," "The White Turkey," "Why, Uncle!", "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle," and "The Wild Cat of Paris" are some of the releases in which she has been featured.—By Mae Tinee.

GERALDINE FARRAR—There are prima donnas who can sing and act on the stage but who became wooden women as soon as they tried to pose for the screen. Geraldine Farrar was the happy exception. From the time of her first appearance in films in "Carmen" for Lasky, through "Joan the Woman" and "The Woman God Forgot" to her present day roles, the last of which was "Shadows" for Goldwyn, she has "gotten across" exceptionally well. Miss Farrar was born in Melrose, Mass., February 28, 1882, and was educated in Europe and America. She made her stage debut in 1901 as Marguerite in "Faust" at the Royal Opera House, Berlin; was a member of the Royal Opera House, Berlin, and of the Metropolitan Opera Co., New York. She has appeared in numerous operatic roles and is considered by many as the greatest of the singers. In private life she is Mrs. Lou Tellegen. She weighs 135 pounds, is 5 feet and 3 inches tall and has black hair and gray eyes.—By Mae Tinee.

LURER AND LUREE! You never considered Mr. Douglas Fairbanks in the role of siren, did you? Well, proceed to do so now! He's the busy little persuader who netted former Secretary of the Treasury Wm. G. McAdoo, when resting in California, and persuaded him to enter the movies. Mr. McAdoo and Douglas have been personal friends for some time, so it was not hard for the latter to get the former's ear. And here is what he whispered: "Come on in! Be general counsel and director for 'The Big Five' and take $100,000 per annum for services." Mr. McAdoo never hesitated and his will be the hand to steer Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, Bill Hart, and David Wark Griffith aright.—By Mae Tinee.

Facts about Skin-pores and Youthful Skin

A SOAP for the youthful care of the skin must not only be pure. It must do more than cleanse the mere surface or "outer skin". It must also take care of the pores. That is, it must gently reach into the pores and gently cleanse them.

For the pores are the "workshop" of skin-beauty. And unless they are kept free and active the skin cannot be kept fresh and young.

Fairy Soap creams up into a velvety soothing lather. This lather does not remain in pores to clog them and diminish the activity and beauty of the skin. It leaves them cleansed and freshened. It rinses away completely.

Both the pores and the tender outer skin are thus left free and stimulated. And the skin is kept soft, fresh and young.

For a Skin where Youth Lingers

You know that a pure soap which will keep your own skin clear and soft in youthful loveliness, is a soap you would not hesitate to use every day in the year—to preserve all the delicate beauty of your skin, and the soft, velvety "feel" of it.

Fairy Soap is wonderfully "mellowed together" of the purest materials which can go into a soap at any price. It is made to take particular care of skins—the pores as well as the smooth "outer skin."

That is why Fairy Soap does so much more than cleanse the mere surface.

Fairy creams cleansingly into the tiny pores. But it does not remain in them. And after it has soothingly creamed out of the delicate pores, it does not cling to the tender outer skin. Fairy Soap is a remarkable soap for rinsing off—easily—completely.

That is why Fairy Soap deals so very gently with tender complexions.

With these soap-qualities in mind, you will do well to buy several cakes of Fairy Soap. Then use it consistently. In no other way can you prove its pure benefits to "a skin where youth lingers."

La-may Face Powder Stays On Better Than Any Other

Now you can use a pure face powder that beautifies your complexion wonderfully and is guaranteed not to injure the most delicate baby skin. And it really stays on better than any other face powder. It does not contain white lead or starchy rice powder (Poudre de Riz) to make it stick. White lead poisons the skin and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that encourages enlarged pores, blackheads and unsightly complexions. Five thousand dollars is offered any chemist who analyzes it and finds it contains any white lead or rice powder. The specialist who makes this improved powder uses a medicinal ingredient that doctors use to heal the skin. In fact, this new powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores and irritations. It is also astringent, discouraging flabbiness, crows' feet and wrinkles. Because it is pure and because it stays on so well this La-may powder (French, Poudre L'Ame) is now used by over a million American women. And it is sold by prominent dealers everywhere. The large size is only fifty cents and the trial size twenty-five cents. Remember, La-may is guaranteed. If you do not find La-may much better than any you have ever used, your dealer is authorized to return your money without question. Refuse substitutes. Your common sense will tell you that when you are offered a substitute it is sure to be a demonstrator trying to sell an inferior powder that pays a big commission. When you use this absolutely pure La-may and see how splendidly it beautifies your complexion, you will understand why it so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in New York.

DEDICATED TO THE MEMORY OF THEODORE ROOSEVELT—Here is a glimpse of the natural wonderland, Roosevelt National park, so named in honor of the late great national figure. The scene is from Kearsarge pass, which crosses the Sierras from the deserts of the east into the park. Just to the south of the pass is Mount Whitney, the highest mountain in the United States, with an altitude of 14,501 feet.

FROM FIGHTING MEN TO ROAD-MENDERS—Since the signing of the armistice allied soldiers, who left their jobs and homes to fight, have been set to work filling up trenches and mending roads in northern France. Huge forces are now doing this sort of thing in the devastated regions. These men don't seem to have their heart in the work, and you can scarcely blame them.

Why Brushed Teeth Discolor and Decay

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

You know they do.

Tartar forms on them, and every few weeks you must have a dental cleaning.

Cavities start, despite all your brushing. So you know there is something wrong.

The trouble lies in a film.

It is a slimy film which is ever-present. You can feel it with your tongue.

That is what holds the stains. That is what thickens and hardens into tartar. That is where the acids form which cause all tooth decay. And that is where the germs breed—the germs which keep the mouth impure and often cause pyorrhea.

So the source of most tooth troubles lies in that film.

Teeth kept free from it don't discolor. Tartar doesn't form. Gums stay healthy and the teeth stay sound. That has been amply proved.

But that film resists the toothbrush. Much of it escapes. The ordinary dentifrice little effects it. Some forms harden it.

That's why your teeth are not clean, not safe—why they discolor and decay—despite your frequent brushing.

That film is albuminous. And pepsin dissolves albumin by digesting it—promptly and completely.

But pepsin alone is inert. It must be activated by an acid, and most acids destroy the teeth. That is why pepsin, until lately, could not be used for cleaning the teeth.

Now a way has been found to employ it. A method has been discovered which activates the pepsin without possible harm to the teeth.

This is now combined with pepsin in a dentifrice called PEPSODENT. Five governments already have granted patents on it. A thousand dentists have clinically proved its efficiency.

Now the highest dental authorities agree that in PEPSODENT we have a way to end that film.

To prove to you its results, we offer a One-Week Tube. Ask, and we mail it free. We urge you, for your teeth's sake, to learn how it cleans. See how it differs in results from methods you use now. See how it whitens teeth.

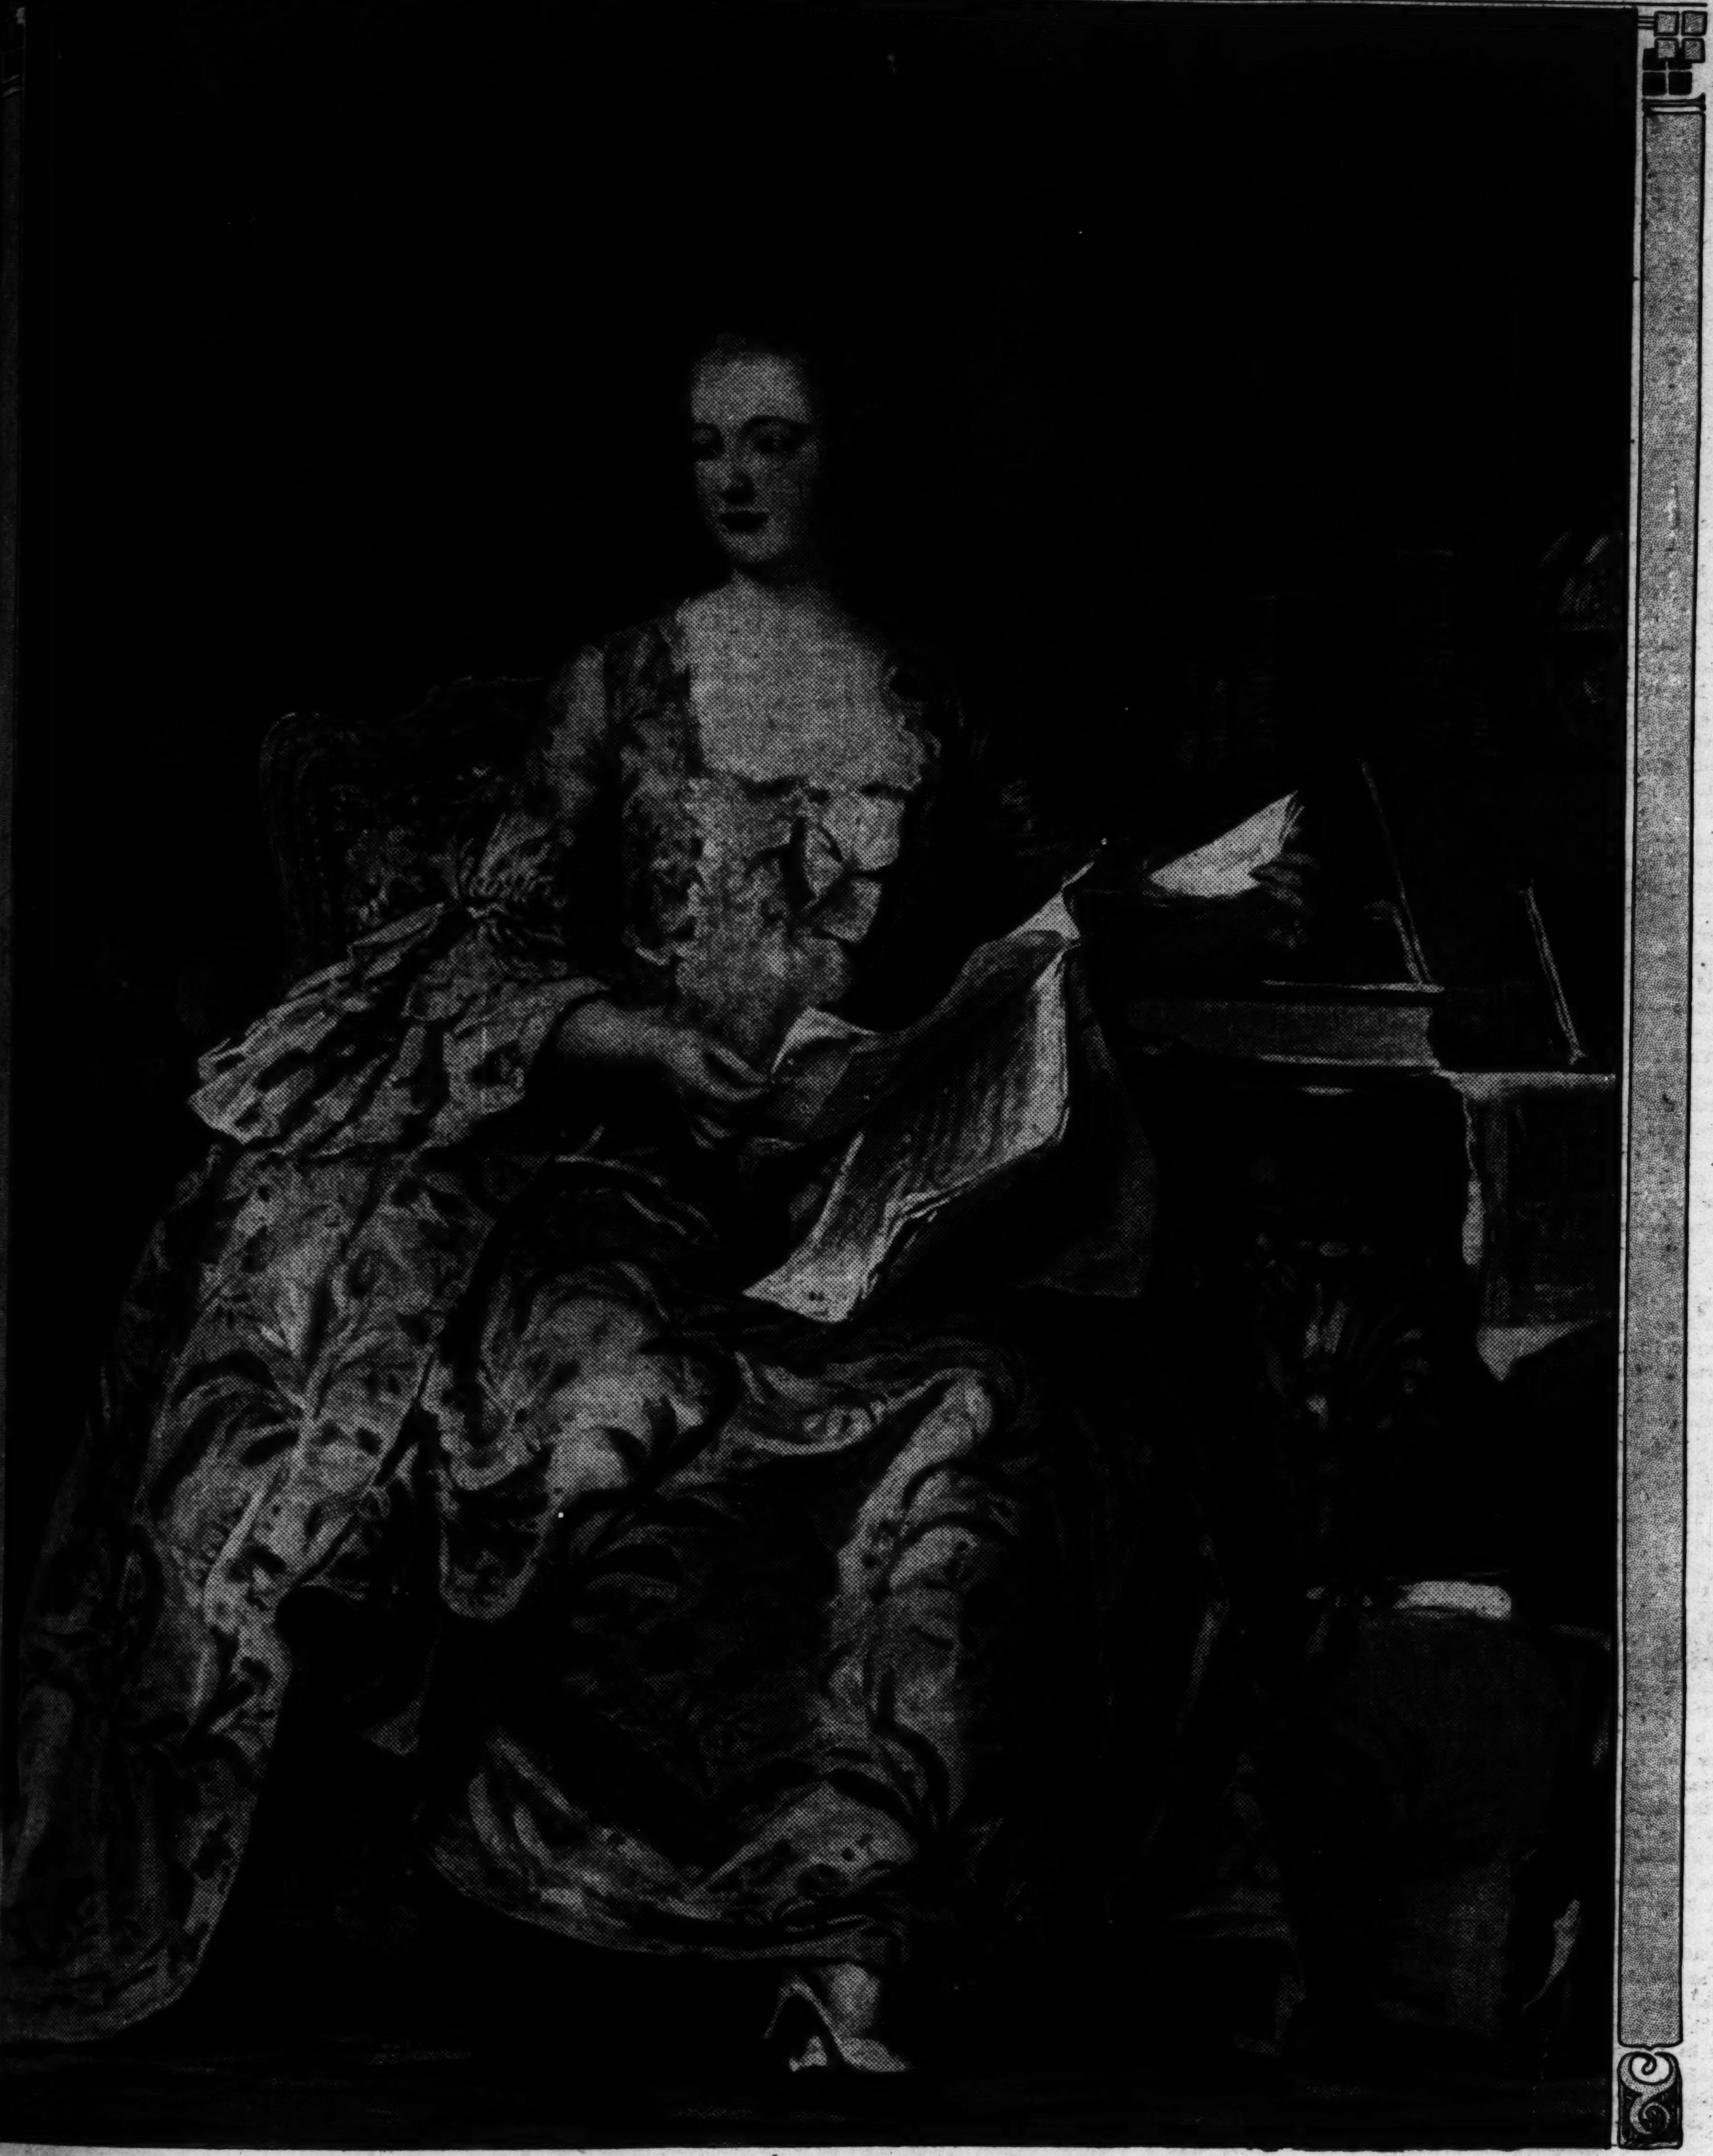
FICTION

Portrait of La Marquise de Pompadour by La Tour



By ELEANOR JEWETT.

ONE of the most celebrated characters in French history was the Marquise de Pompadour, the mistress of Louis XV. She was born in 1722 in Paris, of parents in rather modest circumstances, and was married while young to a man of no particular rank or position. At a ball given by the city of Paris in honor of the dauphin, the king, Louis XV., met and fell violently in love with her. A year later she was established at Versailles.

"Ma vie est un combat," Madame Pompadour said concerning the strenuous existence she led from that time till her death on April 15, 1764, at the age of 42. It was a struggle. She wished to dominate the political policies of France as well as the trend of literature and the arts. She succeeded. The king was as wax in her clever fingers. Voltaire was her poet in chief and she brought Greuze and other painters fame.

Because she was angered by verses written by Frederick the Great concerning her ambitions she entered into an alliance with Austria which later led to the Seven Years war.

At the time that La Tour painted this portrait of her, Madame la Marquise was no longer in her first youth. Her face was shadowed, too, by the deep sorrow which the death of her only son, Alexander, at that time caused her. Nevertheless the artist has given us a superb picture in this canvas.

La Tour was first appreciated as a painter by the public when he showed in 1730 a portrait of Voltaire. From then to 1750 his claim to greatness was firmly established and fortune smiled on him. As a painter of pastels he ranks among the first.

The portrait of La Pompadour was exhibited in the place of honor in the Paris salon of 1755. After the death of the favorite it was lost sight of for a time. It was purchased in 1797 from Count Lespinasse d'Arlet by the Museum of Arts, and is now in the Louvre.

SYNOPSIS.

The Brownings, Richard and Hope, are entertaining in their own charming manner on Christmas eve. Hope leaves the room for a moment and reenters with terrible bruises on her throat, announcing a masked man discovered at her jewel case struck her cruelly. Richard and Philip Kline search the grounds. The servants are questioned, and Richard decides they must all be discharged, and plans to take Hope south. Sarah Parr, who lives in the village, and has known Hope always, appears to know more than she cares to tell about the happening. Philip and Dr. Arthur spend the night at the Parrs, returning to Quatuck the next morning. Sarah tells them about Esther Browning, Richard's mother, of her love for children and all young, tender things. Richard takes Hope south after Christmas, and there Hope has another terrifying experience. A Negro is hanged as suspect. She and Richard go to New York, and Dr. Arthur sees a horrified look in her eyes one evening while they are dining. Jasper Lord, Richard's uncle, returns from a voyage, bringing with him Hope's brother, Gerald. Dr. Arthur thinks Gerald's coming worries Hope.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

DR. ARTHUR ON GUARD.

ARTHUR said afterwards that as he started from the Parrs for the Brownings' he was almost in a panic and did, in fact, run part of the way, impelled by terror.

Sarah, after he had gone, had said: "If anything threatened to hurt Hope Browning you couldn't keep Arthur Arthur away from her if you nailed him to the barn door."

This was one of the several occasions when Sarah compelled me to look at her with the admiration you give to an all wise and superbly reticent dowager cat, all wise but a Manchu dowager, melancholy in indifference to the importance of things. I never had thought of Arthur's affection for Hope as something which might at once so have colored and have steeled his life, but suddenly, at Sarah's inspiration I was forced so to think of it.

Arthur said that he ran in a real panic because all the half fears and alarms, doubts and suspicions, questionings and perplexities took sudden tangible form in an answer, and that answer was the truculent, sullen brother, Gerald.

What dismayed him most, he said, as he hurried along, was the revelation—it was a revelation—of Hope's terrible moral dilemma. No wonder she nearly fainted in the pleasant New York restaurant! No wonder she could not get rid of the impression. No wonder she had the flashes of full recollection and comprehension!

"Couldn't you see it?" Arthur asked. The man whom she had found at her jewel case Christmas eve was her brother. And worse—much worse—the man who had attacked her in the south was her brother. For this a Negro had been lynched. And there was nothing to do about it.

The Negro was dead. It could only have destroyed Richard, morally destroyed him—because he sternly acquiesced in this form of swift and necessary justice—if he were told than an innocent man had paid for a taint in the blood of Hope's unfortunate family. She couldn't tell that. She loved him too much. His happiness was too dear to her. The possession of him was too exquisite a joy to her. She could not tamper with such things—just or unjust, events had to take their form and have their consequence, except, Arthur said, that if Hope could have saved the Negro's life by revealing what really had happened she would have done so. But the Negro was dead. She probably had, secretly, reimbursed any one dependent upon him; but couldn't you see the terror of the things for her? This terrible secret! And the man was in the house.

Arthur said that the panic of the thought made him almost delirious. He, the only person aside from Hope who could be in the house and know what Gerald really was and what Hope's dilemma really was, had two miles to go and something might happen any minute. Terror of this nature is distorting and unbalancing. Arthur said he regained sufficient command of himself to approach the house under control, as if his purpose in coming back were really what he was about to say it was.

Life, he said, is an anticlimax. Here he had come in a delirium, or near one, wishing he had wings, desperate in his ideas of what had and what might happen, and Hope and Richard—the only people of the party still awake and about—had been seated calmly by the fire, as indifferent to the unpleasantness, the menace, of the situation as if Gerald had been a year old baby! Arthur said he was glad he had managed to get control of himself.

They were astonished to see Arthur back again, but glad to see him; and his explanation of why he had come was accepted as adequate. With what he had on his mind he was afraid it was flimsy.

They had been discussing Gerald. Richard said that Hope was distressed that there should have been a veritable irruption of this unpleasant man.

"It is unfair to Richard to subject him to Gerald," said Hope, "and yet I don't know what to do about it. We can't turn him directly out of doors and we can't be unpleasant to him, but he is the last thing I should have asked to happen."

"I've been telling Hope that she is foolish to be concerned," said Richard. "I'll admit that Gerald is not a prepossessing person, but he's nothing to worry about, and Hope is too sensitive. We'll survive his visit."

The consideration which Hope and Richard had for each other was very kind, Arthur thought, but he could understand why Hope was concerned. Arthur himself did not see how he could be of much service, but he had resolved to sit up all night and whatever service a wakeful, informed man could give he would give. At least there would be some one awake who knew what had happened and what might happen in the house.

When Hope and Richard were ready to retire Arthur said he was not sleepy and for a while would sit up and read. That intention caused no astonishment, and presently Arthur was left in the quiet of a house which, for him, contained possibilities of the greatest disquiet.

At first he was too apprehensive to read. When a great house settles into a condition which we commonly describe as one of absolute quiet, it in reality, permits the arising of small and, to the apprehensive ears, significant sounds which would have been submerged under the ordinary action about the place. They arise with such suggestions as the apprehensions are prepared to receive, and Arthur, although not a person of uneasy nerves, found that he was prepared to receive so much that at first he could not fix his attention on a book. He tried to, in a comfortable chair, but at every little sound, whether within or without, he started as if preparing himself for a dreaded revelation. He was too acutely perceptive at this period of the night to be merely a watcher. His mind was reaching out for signs and portents and finding them in insignificant causes.

Capt. Jasper Lord's story had convinced him that Gerald, as some monstrous brute, had made the attacks upon Hope. He was in the house, protected by Hope's desire to protect Richard.

Arthur wanted to make regular and continuing rounds of the house—he would have preferred to sit at Hope's door with a shotgun—but he realized that his watchfulness must seem to be so casual as not to seem to be watchfulness.

He did make several cautious trips up the stairway to where he could, by switching on the lights, have a view of Hope's door. His inclination was to sit at the head of the stairs with a view of the corridor in this wing open to him, but the strangeness of such procedure, even contemplated, embarrassed him.

He left a low light burning in the hall, having made several trips to the top of the stairs, and returned to the room downstairs where he had been trying to read. For a sense of comfort he had gone into a small room off the great living room, a small room in which there were bookshelves, a reading light, and several comfortable lounging chairs. To one side the windows of this room opened upon the sunken garden which he remembered when it had its paroquets and monkeys. On another side its windows opened upon a long veranda.

It had come a time of year when at night myriads of midges are attracted by every light and when moths and heavy June bugs flutter and buzz against the screens. The windows had their screens in, but the midges found their way through them, and Arthur, when he got to reading finally, had to keep a handkerchief busy whisking them off the pages.

There was a peculiar charm about the night, he said afterwards. It had what he could only describe as a profundity—a profundity in which silence really was established by the small noises which broke it: the sound of beetles hitting the screens, the occasional sound of stealthy animal movements outside, the occasional sounds not precisely attributable to anything.

He knew that, as a watcher for something he could not guard against, he was sensitive to impressions, and he said he did have an entirely new series of sensations—some that even gave him crinkly feeling of the skin, the sensation which is that of a light, cold, and impalpable finger drawn quickly down the spine.

He had quieted himself down for his long watch and had been reading with placidity and enjoyment for a half hour when he was brought out of his chair in a great bound by a startling noise at his very ear. He said that the uncontrollable fright was a revelation of his state of nerves and its cause was ludicrous. He had been sitting close to one of the screened windows. A cat had jumped at the beetles buzzing there and in hitting the screen had made a noise that no watchful and apprehensive man's nerves could have endured placidly.

When Arthur recovered his poise, having sprung out of his chair in alarm and turning in a posture of defense, the cat, with legs outstretched, claws clinging to the screen, was looking at him with eyes yellow in the light. With a ripping sound it pulled its claws from the wire mesh and dropped out of sight.

Arthur said that this experience almost sent him to bed. He was so ashamed of having starts and fidgets because of beetles and cats that he began to feel ridiculous.

It was then after 2 o'clock in the morning and cocks began to crow nearby and in distant parts of the countryside. These sounds, although having such intimations as may relate to the crowing of the cock as Peter betrayed his Master—and thus be associated with the supremacy of the ultimate human animal instinct over spiritual nature—have nevertheless a dimly consoling connotation for the perplexed mind—the conveyed idea of the barnyard, of the certain sunrise, of the disappearance of vapors and darkness, and of the return of light and perception and understanding.

Thus a person struggling through the unaccustomed phases of a watchful and restless night, of painful and distressed hours of darkness, may find in the nearby or faraway crow of the cock some triumphant signal of a release from darkness and perplexity, a homely symbol of the permanency of life and its brightness, purpose, and perception.

Arthur said that, having experienced the moment of awed stupefaction when the cat jumped at the screens to get one of the provocative beetles, he felt the application of a spiritual balm when shortly thereafter the cocks nearby and far away began calling from barnyards, across meadows saturated with placid human experience and expectation, and thus declaiming the certainty of human prospects.

The cat sprawled against the screen at the window had given him a start, he had to admit. The cheerful crowing, cock answering or defying cock, from far to near was exhilarating to optimism and quieting to nerves.

He had had so many ridiculous starts and fidgets that he began to lose a sense of the validity of his alarm. To sit reading with a consciousness that nothing but beetles and a cat, a few harmless night prowling animals, were making sounds, with the sounds of the chicken yard and barnyard insistent, with only this for significance, was to relax from a sense of apprehension and enter a region of drowsiness and comfort.

Arthur said that he was just about to reach up and extinguish his reading light when he became conscious of the sensation of being observed by a human being. The fact that later it was proved that he was observed at this moment never quite proved to him that there is such a sense. There may be. There may be a human sensitiveness which, without the employment of any of the ordinary senses, detects the presence, merely because the presence is there, of another human being.

Arthur, although conscious that another human being, without any of the noises of the cat which had startled him, without even a tenth of the noises of the beetles which had annoyed him, was observing him, insists that this sensation was not a true revelation of what happened to be true.

He knew later that a man was observing him at the time, but he still thinks that it was pure coincidence that he should have had the apprehensive sensation and that it should have been the fact. He thinks that he was in the mood to have had such fancies and that it happened at that precise moment that his fancy and the fact were one.

There is not much reason to doubt that he was being watched at that moment. He may have been under observation for a long time and his sense of being so watched may have grown out of some delicate perceptions which he was too ready to deny validity.

His idea was that the man had been standing in the doorway of the room and had just stepped out of sight. The significance of him remained, invisible but apprehended.

Arthur went quickly to the door, which opened upon the main hallway, which was lighted only by the light from the room in which he had been sitting. Across the hall was the large living room, which was dark. Arthur went into the darkness of this room and stood still, listening.

A presence, unindicated as to place or purpose, remained in suggestion. Arthur said it might have been revealed as another cat, soft footed and perceptive in the darkness. For a while Arthur stood still, still and tense. At one instant he was sure he heard rustling, a soft footfall, breathing, some sound of life—at another instant certain that he was alone in the room, alone awake in the house.

Then there was an unmistakable sound of a person stumbling against an obstacle, a piece of furniture, hitting it unexpectedly and making a barely perceptible sound, but nevertheless one unmistakably that of something—presumably a person—moving about.

Just as this revelation of one presence was given Arthur became aware of another. It was somewhere behind him. The sound which confirmed his suspicions had confirmed the suspicions of a third person. There were three persons in the room, or, at least, close by each other—he and the two others—none able to see either of the other two, each one evidently watching for the others.

Arthur said that the situation thus uncovered so startled him that it may have been a minute before he came sufficiently to his senses to find a light switch. When he had turned on the light he was the only person in the room. He went from room to room, turning on lights, but no one was revealed.

That was all there was. Arthur said that its nothingness was the most appalling attribute it had—if there had been something one could have met it and tried to understand it; but there was simply nothing, a few sounds, some beetles, a provoked cat, and a piece of furniture touched by some one who was trying not to make a noise, all this supplemented by the even more alarming sensation that there was a third person in the room.

It came to nothing more that night. Arthur could have his suspicions, but in all the search he made, simply tossing all precautions to the winds—he found no cause and no explanation. He had, he said, an idea that he had distressed the plans for at least one of the other two watchers, and, of course, he knew that Gerald was one of the two. Gerald might not have been, but Arthur would have been convinced that he was.

He came back to Simon and Sarah the next morning late—he took a little sleep after it came daylight and came to the Parrs late. Sarah, who had gotten to asking us to do chores—as she ought, we being such sponges upon her hospitality—wanted a piece of the garden spaded up for an early planting of peas. Arthur and I did it, and he said that there was a definite reassurance for folk in the handling of the soil. There was, he said, a substantiality about it which seemed to dissipate vapors of emotion, of fear, and of apprehension and foreboding. Reality was the foundation of life, and the soil was reality. To work in it—to have a part in its processes—was to be well founded. Then a superstructure of illusions could be erected.

He was going back to spend the night with the Brownings, he said. They were accustomed to his inviting himself. Did I think I'd care to go with him? He was not exactly timid in the house alone—alone in the sense that he was its only guardian awake—but there was an incomprehensibility about the trouble—it was a real trouble—which distressed a man sitting up alone to meet it.

The cat jumping on the screen at the beetles, he said, was enough to suggest the desirability of a companion—if I could spare the time and if I cared to remain awake. Of course I could doze in a chair if I wanted to, merely if I were where I could be aroused. He might doze himself. But if two men were clothed and ready at an instant's alarm to do what they could they might rid Hope Browning of something horrible in her life without deeply involving her in the method of the riddance.

Gerald had only twenty-four hours more to remain in the house. He had indicated that he did not want to stay longer. He had some reason for going. Arthur knew that he had only one reason for remaining. The family had every reason for wanting him to go—the truculent savage.

We had been spading for an hour in the soft earth and—nearly done with our work—stopped to kick the soil off our shoes. A bluebird was singing on a post. Chewinks were in the trees overhead. Sarah was hanging dishcloths on a line by the kitchen porch. Benignancy was in every apparent commonplace. Yet there was the overtone of malignancy, suggested by Arthur's ideas and experience.

"Of course you think it is Gerald," I said.

"That's rather obvious, isn't it?" he said.

"You know, we made a search of the premises Christmas eve, Richard and I, in a fresh snow, and there were no tracks in the snow. Whoever hurt Hope remained in the house."

"That's simple," said Arthur. "Hope enabled Gerald to conceal himself. She will not have this disaster bared to Richard. She will risk anything and do anything rather than subject him to the unpleasantness of knowing it. I imagine she feels a personal taint in having such a brother. Probably she thinks she can bring him to reason—with money, no doubt. He is beyond any other persuasion."

I did not think Gerald, wretched and truculent as he apparently was, was our answer. Out of a sense of the extraordinary strangeness of the sunken garden, as it had been described, with its exotic birds and animals, its strange, heavy, moist perfumes, had come another suggestion—to me. It was too wild to tell Arthur.

He had been conscious, he said, of two presences when he became aware that he was being watched. He referred to them as persons. One probably was Gerald—as Arthur thought. My idea as to what the other could be was—as I have said—too wild to mention. But it was not the idea of a person. It was an idea so extravagant that there, in Sarah's pleasant garden, with the bluebird singing and the chewinks in the trees—we with the good wholesome earth on our shoes and the pleasant commonplaces of a benignant life about us, with pleasant facts established—it was outrageous to have such a suggestion enter my mind.

Probably if I had not been so impressed by the exotic character of the sunken garden I could not have been so taken with my wild idea. It was too extravagant for credulity, and yet it persisted.

"I am going back to Quatuck with you," I said.

"Can you spare the time?" he asked. "Don't do it just because I am a little more than ordinarily apprehensive. I am very fond of Hope, and if she is in any trouble that she cannot tell Richard I am the person who must help her out—without her knowing it, if possible."

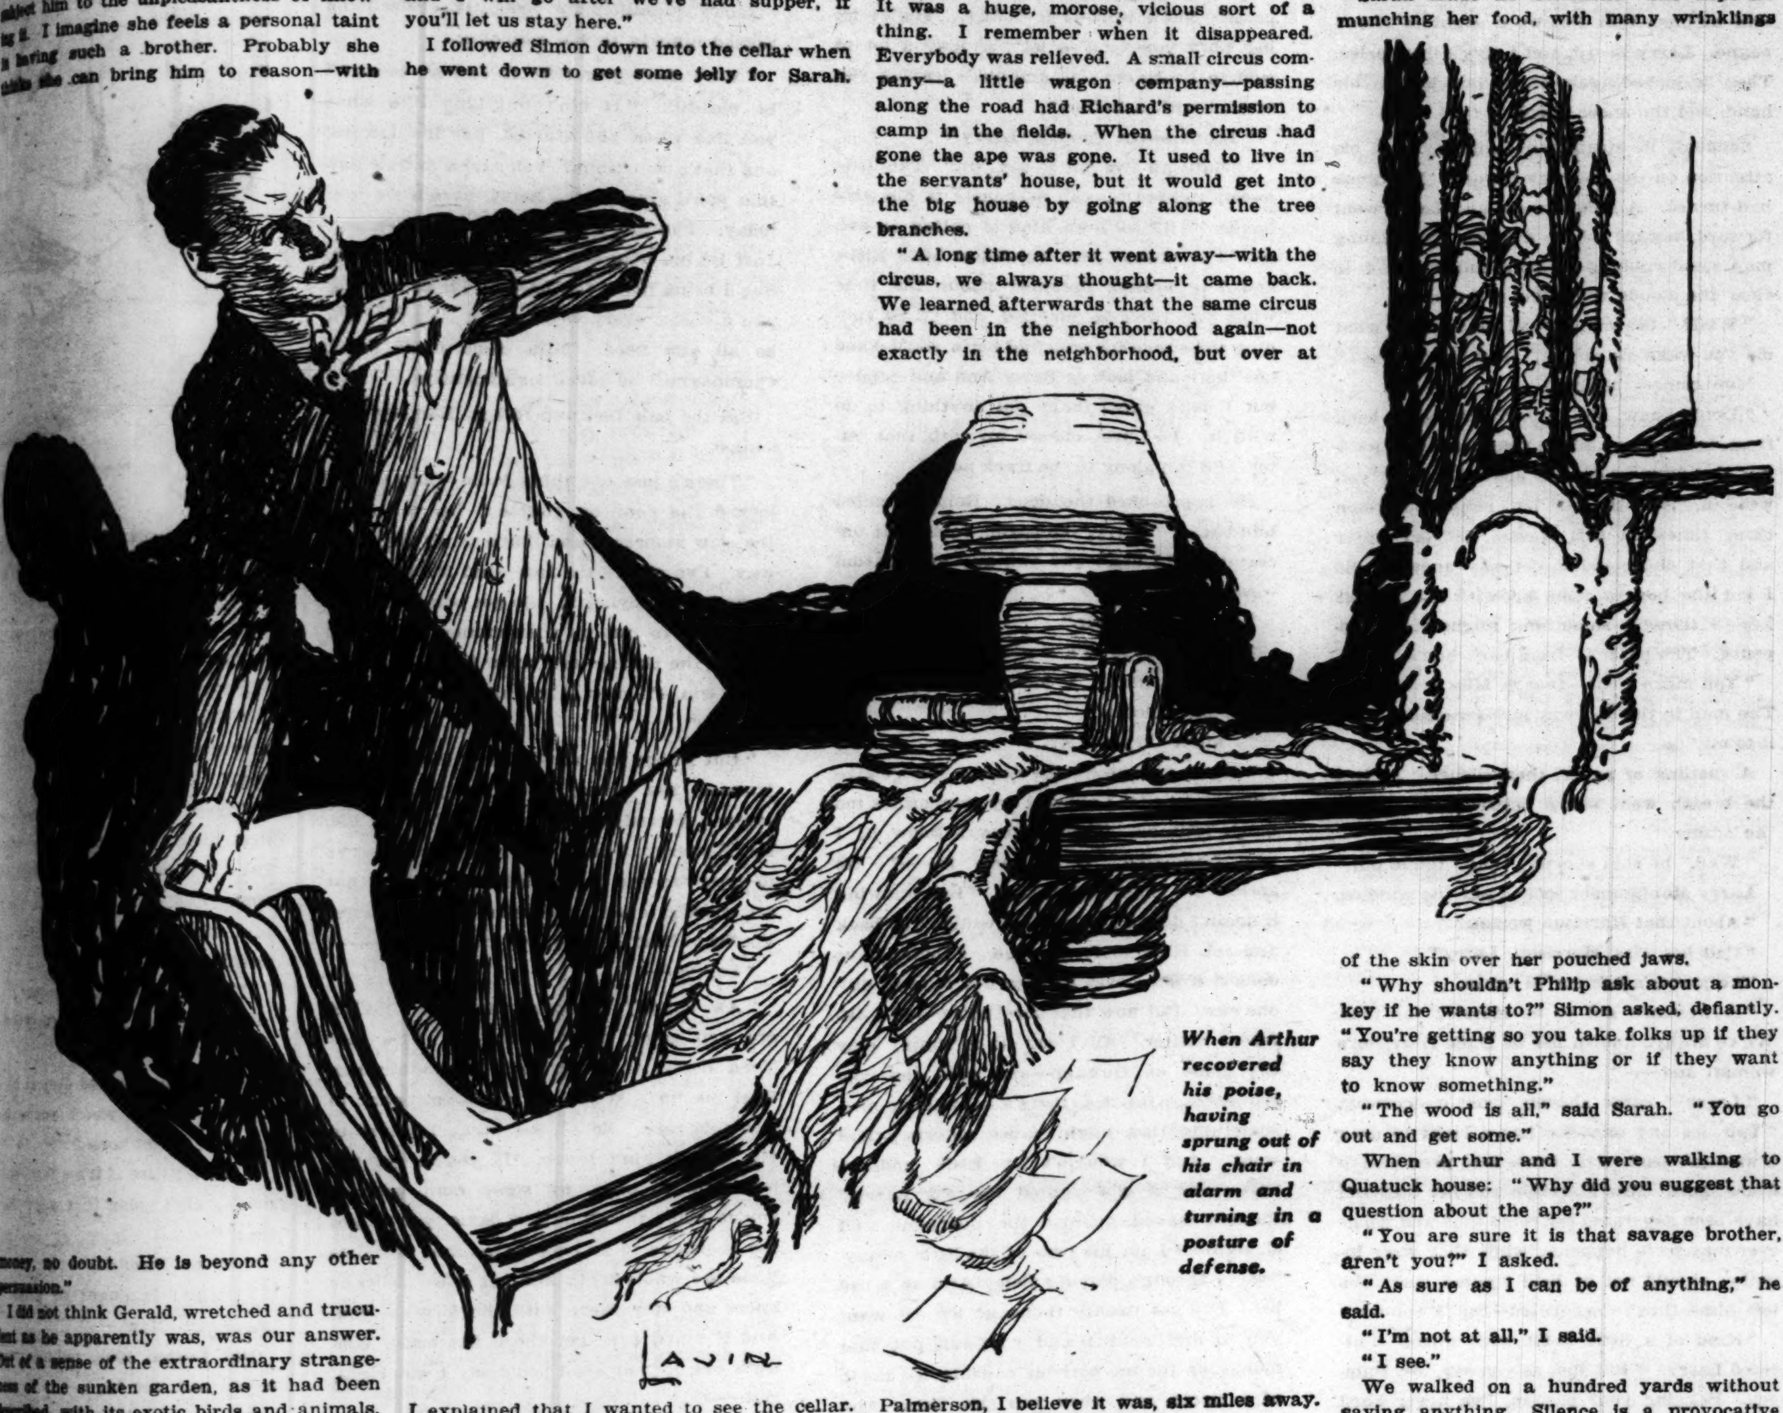
"I not only can go but I insist on going," I said.

One thing that he said questioned my idea—a trouble which she could not tell Richard. It was inexplicable that she could not tell what I had in mind as soon as she had recovered consciousness after the first shock—as soon as she had recovered breath after the first screams, she could tell and would tell, to be relieved of her terror. It would be a terrible terror.

An idea occasionally persists irrationally. Mine did. When we were through with our work we cleaned our shoes and our spades and went into the kitchen. Sarah was cooking spareribs and her homemade sauerkraut.

"I thought I was going to the Brownings for dinner," said Arthur, "but this settles it. The 'kraut is too much for me. Phil and I will go after we've had supper, if you'll let us stay here."

I followed Simon down into the cellar when he went down to get some jelly for Sarah.



When Arthur recovered his poise, having sprung out of his chair in alarm and turning in a posture of defense.

I explained that I wanted to see the cellar. I did. As a repository of Sarah's preserving it was entrancing. Simon carried a lamp and did so quite indifferent to consideration of me. I struck my head on a swinging shelf.

"I ought to have told you to mind those boards," he said. "They're all-fired bad to hit in the dark, but the mice and rats can't get to them."

"I'll mind them," I said. "I'll stand right here and mind them."

The cellar really was a repository of content. A granary, a roothouse, a cellar, any place in which ants, squirrels, or humans have made provision out of abundance for lean months has this suggestion of providence and sufficiency. The storms may come and the ground be deep in frost, but there is provision against all the rigors.

"Did Capt. Jasper Lord, or any one," I asked Simon, as I stood in the darkness of the cellar and as he held the light above his head some feet away, "ever give Esther Browning—or Hope or Richard—anything larger than a monkey?"

"She said to get quince jelly, didn't she?" Simon asked. "There's everything here but quince. Here's wild grape and crabapple and currant—what did you ask me, Philip? I know the quince jelly is all."

"I asked you if any one ever had given the Brownings anything larger than a monkey?"

"What do you mean by larger? A cow or something of that kind?"

"No. I mean did Capt. Jasper Lord ever send them an ape—a big monkey?"

"Yes, I think he did once," said Simon. "Sarah can tell you. I know the quince is getting. I'd rather have damson preserves, anyway."

He took a jar from a shelf and lighted the way up out of the cellar.

"The quince is getting," he told Sarah. "I couldn't find any. Here's some damsons; and Philip Kline wants to know if the Brownings ever had an ape."

"Yes, they did, a few years ago," said Arthur. "Some man that Jasper Lord knew sent one. I remember how much trouble it made when Hope and Richard got it. They didn't know what in the world to do with it. It was a huge, morose, vicious sort of a thing. I remember when it disappeared. Everybody was relieved. A small circus company—a little wagon company—passing along the road had Richard's permission to camp in the fields. When the circus had gone the ape was gone. It used to live in the servants' house, but it would get into the big house by going along the tree branches.

"A long time after it went away—with the circus, we always thought—it came back. We learned afterwards that the same circus had been in the neighborhood again—not exactly in the neighborhood, but over at Palmerson, I believe it was, six miles away. Then it disappeared again."

Sarah told us to sit down to supper. Simon, I remember, ate great quantities of damson preserves and bread and butter—making it an achievement in appetite.

Sarah from time to time looked at me as if I had amused her. She always suggested to me an unpleasant insistence upon realities. Once, I recall, Arthur, talking with old Simon, who was imaginative—had Jupiter and Saturn in his life, for instance—said something—related something of interest. I have forgotten what it was. It may have had to do with light years in stating the distance of stars or with the habits of head hunters or the functions of the white blood corpuscles. Whatever it was, Sarah, hearing him, demanded his authority for what he said.

"O, I read it somewhere," said Arthur.

"Did you read it in the Bible?" Sarah asked.

That was Sarah's idea of reality. Reality was what had happened within her experience. Knowledge was what had come to her from her dealings with the law of cause and effect. If a thing lay outside that experience, she asked for its credentials. She would admit the evidence of the scriptures.

This attitude towards life gave her tremendous importance to me. If Sarah knew a thing, it existed. If she knew it, she had encountered it. If she had encountered it, it existed. Otherwise, unless it had authority in the Bible, it was gammon. Thus she lived in a world of reality.

With respect to what puzzled us at Quatuck house, I was convinced that she had a great deal of knowledge which she was keeping to herself. I had no reason for this conviction and could not imagine why, if Sarah knew anything, she could not tell it. She was not taciturn. She loved her opinions and her gossip.

"What put that heathen monkey idea in your head?" she asked me, finally. I knew she was going to ask me that question.

"I was just thinking about the sunken garden and the strange things in it," I said.

Sarah made no comment. She kept on munching her food, with many wrinklings of the skin over her pouched jaws.

"Why shouldn't Philip ask about a monkey if he wants to?" Simon asked, defiantly. "You're getting so you take folks up if they say they know anything or if they want to know something."

"The wood is all," said Sarah. "You go out and get some."

When Arthur and I were walking to Quatuck house: "Why did you suggest that question about the ape?"

"You are sure it is that savage brother, aren't you?" I asked.

"As sure as I can be of anything," he said.

"I'm not at all," I said.

"I see."

We walked on a hundred yards without saying anything. Silence is a provocative argument. Frequently it angers more than words.

"Why don't you say it?" I asked, finally.

"I'm trying not to laugh," said Arthur.

"Laugh as you like."

"But really, Phil," said Arthur, "with all the plain simple evidences of a plain brutal human fact before you, you don't insist upon something swinging in over the trees to attack Hope, do you?"

"I don't insist on anything," I said, "except this: I know that there is something involved here that is not ordinarily found in a police court record. You are hunting for a police case, and I have just sense enough to know better. That's why I asked about the ape."

"It doesn't seem absurd to you that Hope would not tell of such an outrageous thing? You deprive her of motive. I grant her one—a noble one, of self-sacrifice."

"When we find out this secret nothing will seem absurd," I insisted. "That's my feeling."

"Well, we may find out tonight," said Arthur.

DOUBLE DARK By COU

Larry Loses a Race in a Most Unprofessional Manner—But for a Good Stake.

A QUEER expression was on the sun wrinkled features of Larry Montgomery, one that was rapidly deepening to disgust, as he stood alone in the big room of the hotel suite, staring from the silver champagne bucket before him to the post-blurred letter he held in his hand. The bucket, like the room, was empty, a reminder of the night before—and many a night before that. Larry Montgomery sniffed sarcastically.

From beyond came the faint sounds of some one moving about, in the hazy, uncertain manner that follows a night of champagne. Larry heard, and Larry's lips curled. Then he looked again at the envelope in his hand, and the sneer faded.

Suddenly he straightened and fastened his attention on the doorway beyond. The knob had turned. A second more and Larry went forward, toward where a heavy eyed young man stood rubbing his face and forehead, to clear the clouds which hung there.

"Well?" the man asked pettishly, "what did you wake me up for? Anything wrong?"

Montgomery blinked.

"Don't know, sir. I had just come back from my workout at the track, and was passing the desk when the clerk asked if you were in. Said the girl had rung your room three times on this special delivery letter and that she couldn't get any answer. So I got the boy to come up with the master key—I thought something might have happened. The letter's—from back home."

"You mean Elsie—that is, Miss Crandall?" The man in the doorway straightened. "Give it to me."

A rustling of paper, then silence. At last the breath went sharp between the lips of the reader.

"Well," he said shortly, "she's found out."

Larry Montgomery looked out the window.

"About that Harrison woman?"

"Call her Mrs. Harrison, Larry."

The jockey's lips curled again.

"A woman's got to be married for that. We've always known her as Dude Harrison's woman and——"

"Larry!" came sharply from a doorway. "You nor any one else has a right to drag a woman's past misfortunes into present day discussions. Mrs. Harrison and her husband have been separated for some time and whatever may have happened while they were together should not be held against her. She left him—they're separated—that's enough."

"Kind of a little habit with them," muttered Larry. "But just as you say, Mr. Ramsey. Begging your pardon, I've never liked her."

"Perhaps," the voice from the doorway was suddenly suspicious, "you may know something about this letter."

"From back home? I don't even know what's in it."

"There's enough. She's found out everything—and she's written to me to ask me to deny it."

"You can't very well do that."

"I didn't say that I intended to. I'm going to tell her the truth."

"And what then?"

"Keep on the way I've been going—providing Betsy Ann comes in first this afternoon. I'm nearly at the end of my rope on money."

"So we take the chains off Betsy Ann this afternoon, eh, and she runs her race as a dark horse, for a first! She'll come under the wire, all right—she's never had her chance before." The sharp eyes of the jockey were staring far out of the window. "She's a little like Miss—Miss Elsie. Neither one of 'em's had much of a show. O, Mr. Ramsey," and he whirled with a sudden, appealing gesture, "why don't you take the blind off your eyes and see where you're going? Why won't you see that you're just being played for a sucker, on the old hard luck tale that's copped a hundred easy ones just like you? If you've got a lot of sympathy to get rid of—take it back home. This Harrison woman don't think any more of you than she does of——"

"Larry!"

"I can't help it, sir, I'm giving it to you straight! The right kind of women don't have to have $8 a bottle champagne to help 'em bear their hard luck. The right kind of women won't tell about their hard luck! Can't you see she's playing you—straight across the board on a sure thing? It's her game! She's worked it before. You've let her bluff you—you've let her play a lot of woman tricks on you, and she's leading you around with a halter!"

"That's about enough, Larry."

"That's all I've got to say, sir." The little jockey twisted his cap nervously in his wiry hands. "It's all been kind of eating on me, sir. I've always just worshiped Miss Elsie, and I've always dreamed about the time when you two'd be married, and I'd be running the stable for you, and her'n you'd come out there and look at Betsy Ann and—and—but I don't guess that's got anything to do with it. I—I just chased up with that letter. I'll fan along to the track now."

He approached the door. Ramsey called him back. "Larry," he began, somewhat uncertainly, "I don't owe you any explanation—for anything."

"I know that, sir."

"Then, maybe it's my conscience that's making me talk. I haven't done right—about back home."

"I know that too, sir."

"If you ask me for the reason, I can't give any, except that I allowed my sympathies too much latitude. Then, before I knew it, I was fascinated. O, I know it——" He spread his hands helplessly. "But knowing it doesn't do me any good. I couldn't go back and ask Elsie to forgive me. I might have done it if she never had learned it from any one else. But now that she knows—it's a different matter. All I can do is simply play the game on through—and take the consequences. Besides, there's something else, something that might cause notoriety if I went. And I wouldn't let Elsie undergo that—even if she wanted to. So, Larry," Ramsey leaned against the doorjamb and straightened out his gaze at the little jockey, "we're through playing Betsy Ann as a bad bet. I've got twenty thousand left. I want you to find some friend who can put that money up for me without causing too much of a ripple, and when you ride Betsy Ann this afternoon, you ride to win!"

The jockey bobbed his head sharply.

"Betsy Ann'll be first under the wire, sir."

"Good. What are we up against?"

"Horses? Firefly, the favorite; Mazie Dell, good on a fast track; Jigger's Choice, a has-been, and Midnight. The last one's just like it's name."

"Never heard of it."

"Neither did any one else. It's as dark as the ace of spades. And from what I can see, it can run?"

A flickering smile came to the somewhat haggard features of Robert Ramsey. "So it's a double dark race, eh? One unknown against the other, Midnight and Betsy Ann."

The jockey nodded.

"Betsy Ann'll romp in ahead of the field, Mr. Ramsey."

A heartless laugh answered him.

"I'm staking $20,000 that she does. And if we win, Larry——"

"Yes, sir?"

"Betsy's yours. I'll play the game I've started with Mrs. Harrison. There isn't any turning back for me now. I made a promise—a bottle of champagne helped me. And unless she releases me of her own free will, I've got to go through with it or stand the gaff of notoriety. I'm killed back home, either way. So I'll play my cards without drawing from the deck. Look over there in the writing desk, under the stationery. You'll find twenty $1,000 bills. It's the pile. Get somebody to put it up—on Betsy Ann."

Larry Montgomery bobbed his head sharp between his shoulders and turned toward the writing desk.

"It's a lot of kale," he mused, as he drew forth the bills. "Sure you want to play it?"

The voice from the doorway seemed forced—but firm.

"Yes—all on Betsy Ann."

Larry Montgomery hesitated. Then he turned quickly to his employer.

"Why don't you take it and go home?" he pleaded. "It ain't anything like what you had when you started, but it's $20,000, and that's something! You said a minute ago that you'd give me the Betsy mare if we won today. I've got a better deal, Mr. Ramsey. Just let me take her and race her fifty-fifty. She'll bring home the bacon! I'll be sending you a check every week, see if I don't. It'd be all you need. Miss Elsie don't drink champagne," he added significantly.

But the pale featured Robert Ramsey only smiled.

"There's just one thing to do when you've locked the door on yourself, Larry," came the slow answer, "and that's to go the other way. I've played the fool—and it's up to me to keep on playing it. So get some one you can trust to put up that money. Tell him to hold the tickets until after the race. Then, if we win, I'll meet him and cash in. If we lose——"

"But I hope you win!" Larry Montgomery jammed the money into his pocket and stepped toward his employer. "You get me, Mr. Ramsey? I hope you win! You deserve to—you deserve to get all the wallops that are coming to you, and believe me you'll get 'em from that Harrison woman. She'll——"

"Larry——!"

"Aw, cut it!" the jockey sneered. "What are you going to do about it? Fire me? Then Betsy Ann won't run this afternoon. Beat me up? Well, sail in—if you want to lose this race. So I'll say what I please to you, and it ain't much. If you've got the backbone to stick by some bum promise you've made this Harrison dame, you've got the backbone to go back home and tell Miss Elsie the whole truth and get down on your knees and stay there until she forgives you. And if you'd ever get those fizz water cobwebs out of your head you'd say I was right. But——"

"You forget that I'm not the only party to the promise. It's either keep that promise or face notoriety."

"Aw, go chase that notoriety! Who's going to make it? Dude Harrison's woman—with a confidence record from here to Newark? Listen, you show up to Arlie Harrison without a cent and she'll bat an ear off you and tell you where to go. But—but this ain't none of my affair. You've told me to bring in Betsy Ann ahead of the rest—and that's where she'll be. Good-by!"

He dived for the door and slammed it before he could hear his employer's answer. Six hours later he stood by the paddock fence, talking out of a corner of his mouth to "Boston Jack" Murphy, the go-between of many a shady fortune. Quietly the gambler raised a hand and glanced at the tightly wadded roll of bills there. Larry shoved his head closer to the fence.

"Keep your eye out for Mr. Ramsey," he announced. "If you see him coming—duck!"

"Why? What's doing?"

A minute later they were squirming, with the rest of the field, at the post. Larry, easing his mount out of the constant pockets, glanced carefully around. Beside him was a lean, lithe limbed horse of inky blackness—Midnight, the other unknown of the race. Larry's quick eyes told him that there was speed in those muscles, endurance, and—but the third quality, steadiness, was a thing that only the race could tell. And steadiness was the best feature of Firefly, pirouetting in the favored position, rocking for the getaway. Larry leaned forward on his horse's neck.

"Forget this dark baby," he urged amidst the dusty scrambling for position. "Keep your eye on Firefly! She's the one to——"

"Lay over, there!"

"Aw, ride your race!" Larry shouted his retort, without even turning his head. For at the getaway he had angled Betsy across the path of the dangerous Firefly, holding it down from its first burst of speed and forcing it behind him, at the rail. To pass him now, Firefly must veer into the track, and that, for the moment, at least, was impossible. Pounding at Larry's right was Mazie Dell, while at her haunches, floundering along as best it could, was Jigger's Choice. Firefly, the favorite, was pocketed. Two lengths ahead, speeding along on a clear course, was Midnight, the unknown.

Larry Montgomery, his every nerve tensed, felt a telegraphic warning as Betsy Ann sought to increase her speed. Quickly he held her down, then leaned forward.

"Not yet, old girl," he ordered. "Take it easy—plenty of time yet—we've got to hold Firefly first. Then we'll get that other bird. Easy, girl, easy!"

Betsy Ann obeyed. At the right, the close pounding hoofs of Mazie Dell told Larry that she still held her position. From the rear the energetic cursing of Firefly's jockey carried the news that Jigger's Choice still was managing to scramble at the flanks of his lead horse, that the pocket still was closed. Larry Montgomery smiled grimly and squinted ahead. Midnight had gained half a length.

The quarter, and a burst of speed on the part of Mazie Dell brought her neck and neck with Betsy Ann. A quick, apprehensive fear shot into the heart of Larry Montgomery. A fear—not of Mazie Dell, but of the vibrant Firefly. If Jigger's Choice had not moved forward too——

But from the rear had come the crack of a "bat" as Jigger's jockey laid down his whip. Foolish—but a salvation for Larry and the rushing Betsy Ann. For, before Firefly could take advantage of the change in positions, the outside horse had also quickened its pace and filled the gap. Firefly still was pocketed, and Midnight had gained no more.

On they pounded to the half. Mazie Dell lost an inch, then six, then a foot. The flapping of the "bat" sounded almost continuously from the rear now as the jockey on Jigger's Choice strove to beat speed into his flagging mount. Up ahead, Midnight, running easily, veered not an inch in its steady pace. Larry Montgomery's eyes narrowed.

"Plenty of steam left," he mused. "Plenty of it!"

But still he held down the impatient Betsy, lagging as Mazie Dell lagged, still striving to keep the dangerous Firefly within the zone of absolute safety. The time was coming now when Firefly's jockey must play to make or break. If Mazie Dell could only hold on!

For the danger line was coming! Jigger's Choice had dropped to the rear. Midnight had pulled another half length ahead as they passed the three-quarters, while fairly stepping on the flying heels of the eager Betsy Ann was Firefly—Firefly struggling for the chance that would not come.

Just ahead the stretch! Larry Montgomery, his ears straining for the faintest sound, listened for the slightest change from behind. Suddenly his heart bumped against his ribs! Firefly was taking the chance! Firefly was dropping back to round into the track, and, encircling, try, too late, for victory. Anxiously, Larry waited until the cludding of the favorite's hoofs told that it had swung far from the rail. Then, squeezing his knees against the neck of his horse, he raised from his saddle for just a second. Something slid, unnoticed, from the horse's back to the trampled dirt of the track. Quickly Larry dropped back into position.

"All right, Betsy old girl!" he shouted. "Let's go!"

A flying leap from the horse beneath him. Into the stretch they rounded, pulling in, foot by foot, the lead of Midnight, the unknown. The clattering of hoofs at the rear seemed to grow farther away—Firefly had written its own finish in that fated maneuver from the rail.

Up ahead, the grandstand was roaring, a fluttering thing of conglomerate hues—which Larry did not even notice. He was talking to Betsy, and Betsy was answering every order in a constantly lengthening plunge that was cutting away the lead of Midnight length after length.

Fifty yards. Betsy Ann's hot breath touched the sweat stained coat of the leader. The stand blurred ahead—closer. And Betsy Ann's nose was even with the flat pressed ears of Midnight. A last, shouted order, a last, leaping plunge, and Betsy Ann had gone under the wire, half a length ahead.

Larry Montgomery smiled with a corner of his lips. Then he dropped from his mount, jerked off his saddle—and stopped.

"Must have lost 'em," he said slowly.

"What? The weights?" It was a checker-in.

"Yeh." Larry Montgomery stared about him aimlessly. "I——"

"Montgomery on Betsy Ann——" the call was echoing forward—— "disqualified. Slipped his weights——"

"Disqualified!" sounded another voice. "Midnight first, Firefly second, Mazie Dell third!"

Larry swerved quickly, at the sight of his rubber.

"Listen," he said sharply, "I'm going to duck before Ramsey can get here and bawl me out. And you don't know where I've gone. See?"

He scampered to his dressing room. Quickly he divested himself of his jockey clothes and readied himself for the street. Then, as the gong for the last race sounded, he slid away and toward the street cars that led to town.

Just as he veered along the high boarded fence and started toward the gate, something caused him to stop and seek a knothole. On the other side was a man and a woman—Mrs. Harrison and her now-and-then husband, Dude. The man waved a cane angrily.

"That ain't the point!" he snapped. "You ought've had enough sense not to let him bet his last cent on the race. Why didn't you take the money and bet it for him——"

"You mean——"

"Like you bet it for Carney up at Winnipeg, with fake tickets on a sure loser. You could've stalled him that you'd put it up on Jigger's Choice and——"

But Larry had slid from his knothole long enough to corral the hurrying figure of another jockey, clap a hand over his mouth, and drag him to the knothole.

"Listen," he whispered. "Get it all! I may want you to front for a friend of mine some time."

The jockey slowly winked an eye, and snuggled close to the knothole. Larry looked about him anxiously, half afraid that Robert Ramsey would find him, that Robert Ramsay would——

But Robert Ramsey was not in sight. Five minutes more, the man and woman outside, still talking, still gesticulating, got into a taxicab. Larry turned to his comrade.

"Get that stuff?"

"About th' frame-up? Yeh."

"Then keep it under your hat. May never need it—but you can't always tell. S'long." Then, as Larry started toward town, he changed his viewpoint of life. For that conversation outside the fence could mean only one thing, that somewhere a man was waiting for Larry, to upbraid him for the loss of money, for even worse chances "back home," if such a thing had been considered, for——

"Let him rave!" mused Larry. "All I promised to do was to bring Betsy Ann in first. If he can't see where he's well off, all right! It ain't my fault—the shock tore him loose from a cannonball, but 10 t' 1 he won't know it. Anyway, me to the hotel now for the fireworks. The sooner it's over, the better."

But at the hotel no Robert Ramsey awaited. Instead, the clerk leaned forward, an envelope in his hand.

"Mr. Ramsey left here not a minute ago," he said as he handed Larry the note. "Seemed to be in an awful hurry and said to give you this——"

But Larry already had torn open the note and moved away, his eyes centered on the hurried, scrawling sentences:

"Keep Betsy Ann. I'm through. I've got enough left to get home, make a clean breast of it, and then move on to some place where I can try to work back into something worth while. I'm practically moneyless—so will not even humiliate a certain party by asking her to forgive. Will simply plead guilty and go on—hoping, Larry, that sometime—but that's too far away now.

"But don't think I blame you. It was the greatest thing you ever did—to lose that race. You had opened my eyes in the morning. I saw today—as I never saw before. And when Betsy Ann came down the stretch in the lead I felt as though I were sealing my own doom. Then—when we heard that Betsy Ann had lost! O, Larry! She freed me—she did not want me broke. I'm a man again, Larry! Good-by, good luck, RAMSEY."

Larry Montgomery puckered his lips. He opened wide his eyes.

"Humph!" he grunted. "Guess I'd better send another one of those confidential messages to Miss Elsie. But this time it'd better be a telegram!"

Once more that queer smile jerked at one corner of Larry's lips. Six weeks later it appeared again.

For, six weeks later, Larry Montgomery was back home, fidgeting in a too loose dress suit, watching a wedding ceremony, and anxiously passing a heavy envelope from one hand to the other. Suddenly he went forward, waited long and fretfully again until the congratulatory crowd had thinned away, then sidled to the side of a man and woman.

"For the love of Mike," he gasped under his breath, "take this off my hands, Mr. Ramsey."

The bridegroom stared.

"What is it?"

"Money." Larry looked hastily around him, saw that the wedding guests were out of hearing, then went on, hurriedly. "I've been lying to you. When you needed that money here a couple of weeks ago to get married on and I told you I'd put a mortgage on Betsy Ann? Remember? Well, there ain't no mortgage on her. I just took a little out of this wad and advanced it to you. And—say, take it, will you?" Larry rubbed his clammy hands against his braided trousers as Ramsey took the package. "I've been scared to death for six weeks that somebody'd blackjack me out of it. You see, I slipped those weights on purpose——"

"Larry!"

"Couldn't help it. Just had to be done. You see, I figured the whole thing out. Figured that if I could keep Firefly in a pocket long enough, Midnight'd be far enough in the lead to be safe. And that's just what I did. Then, when I was sure of the race for Midnight, I slipped my weights and made a flying finish just to produce a good shock—somewhere—and—but you know what you wrote in your note. You see," and Larry rubbed his perspiring hands again, "it was one dark horse or another, so I bet that twenty thousand on Midnight. And, if I do say it myself, I was some picker! The odds were 60 to 1!"

The MAN FROM BOSTON

by Elizabeth Jordan

The Longest Way Around Was the Shortest Way.

MR. FREDERICK ARMSTRONG paused in front of the rustic bench which Miss Elizabeth Suydam was occupying in solitary state and regarded with pleasure the picture she made.

She was an extremely pretty girl; that fact he had realized long ago. But this afternoon, in her white gown, set off by a brilliant blazer which blended nicely with the autumnal tones of the orchard around her, she looked, as Mr. Armstrong admiringly put it to himself, "like a magazine cover." A big old apple tree, whose branches drooped earthward under their weight of fruit, sheltered her from the rays of the setting sun. A book lay neglected at her feet. Her eyes were on a distant hill, over which the generous day had already thrown a cloak of purple shadows. It was plain that Miss Suydam was in a mood of deep abstraction. Beyond a slight nod, she made no acknowledgment of Mr. Armstrong's presence.

"Hello," remarked that young man brilliantly.

Miss Suydam responded with a sound which might have been a sigh or a greeting. Looking at her more closely, her companion observed that the beauty of her countenance was veiled by an expression of gloom.

"Anything wrong?" he asked.

"I'm afraid so. I'm just thinking it out."

"O!"

Mr. Armstrong regarded her with sympathy and growing interest. "Mind my being here and smoking?" he asked, dropping into the somewhat limited space by her side and opening his cigaret case without waiting for her reply.

"No—o." The girl looked at him, and a smile crept into her eyes. "Not at all, Freddie," she added graciously. "I can think just as well when you're here as when I'm alone."

"Then that's all right," murmured the gentleman, wisely accepting the tribute without pausing to analyze it.

"But I thought you were doing your duty toward the hostess by playing tennis with the other guests."

"Played one set. Too hot to play any more. Came down to the orchard to cool off. Didn't know you were here."

"Of course not."

"I mean—er—I wouldn't have intruded, and all that."

The conversation languished. He picked up the book on the grass and glanced at its title page.

"Read this?" he asked languidly.

"Yes."

"So have I. Queer what notions those writing chaps have. If life were as complicated an affair as they make it, we'd all be in asylums."

Miss Suydam looked at him, at first vaguely, then with deepening interest. "You surprise me," she murmured. "Proceed. Develop your theme."

Freddie stirred self-consciously on the narrow bench.

"Why—er—you know, I'm not much of a talker. But what I'm trying to get at is that authors, like the chap that wrote this book, simply tie their own tangles and then untie 'em. You'd think, to read what they say, that human beings were—well, awfully complex. But they're not—they're awfully simple. Anyway, men are. And I don't believe women are so different when it comes right down to the point—though of course it's the thing to say they are, and that you can't understand 'em. But you do understand 'em, really, all the time!"

The orator paused, and his companion looked at him in astonishment. "Why, Freddie," she said, "I don't think I ever heard you talk so much before!"

"Haven't had a chance," declared the young man. "Other folks talking most of the time. Nowadays you can't cut in unless you first muzzle some one else."

"And I didn't know you felt that way about—about things," continued Miss Suydam, following her own train of thought. "It's very interesting. Perhaps—I wonder—why, perhaps you can help me!"

Freddie stared at her. "Help you?" he echoed.

"Yes." She returned his gaze reflectively, a new idea taking shape in her mind. "I've been wondering whose advice I could ask, Freddie," she added suddenly, "how long have you and I been chums?"

"Ever since we were kids," he told her placidly. "'Bout twenty-five years, isn't it?"

"Twenty-five years! Well, I like that!" exclaimed Miss Suydam with some heat. "I was only 23 last month. But I've known you since I was 2 years old and you were 5," she added more gently. "That's a nice long friendship, isn't it?"

"You'd better believe it is," corroborated Frederick.

"So I'm justified in asking you for advice—don't you think?"

"You bet. Go to it, Bess. Fire away."

Miss Suydam hesitated, wavered. "It's—it's rather delicate," she murmured. "It's a confidence, you know."

Freddie's face sobered, and he looked her squarely in the eye.

"See here, Bess," he said seriously, "if you've got anything on your chest, get it off—as freely as you would to your brother if you had one. You know you can do that, don't you?"

"Yes, Freddie—and you're a dear! You see things so simply, too. I believe you really can help me. Anyway, I'm going to let you try."

Freddie waited.

"You see," she went on, "you see—well," with a rush, "I'm in one of those tangles you say we can't have!"

"You?" He blinked at her.

"Yes," she nodded. "And—when I tell you about it, Freddie Armstrong, you musn't shout, or grin, or stare, or seem surprised. I couldn't stand that, even from a chum like you. Just take it quietly—as if you heard it often."

"All right." Freddie's young face grew very sober indeed. "Fire away," he urged again.

"Well—well—Freddie Armstrong, if you laugh over this, I'll never speak to you again as long as I live."

"I won't laugh."

"Well, then—I'm in love!"

"The deuce you are!"

Mr. Armstrong took his cigaret from his lips and wheeled in his seat to gaze at her in frank incredulity. Then, remembering her instructions, he restored the cigaret and puffed at it with energy. He wore the look of one slightly dazed, but there was no twinkle in his eye, no telltale quiver of amusement about his mouth. After one apprehensive glance at him the girl went on more easily.

"Yes, Freddie, I really am. Odd, isn't it?"

"Who's the man? When did it begin?"

"I won't tell who it is. But it began in Boston—last winter."

"I see." Freddie nodded solemnly. "Do you know," he added, "I thought something happened while you were there? You seemed different, somehow, when you came back."

"I feel different. I was—awfully—unhappy."

"By Jove!" There was genuine sympathy in Freddie's tone, mingled with a growing surprise and interest. "But what's the matter? Why the gloom?"

"He—he doesn't seem to care for me."

"What?"

Mr. Armstrong almost leaped from his seat. The girl pressed him back into it with a hand on his shoulder and a little laugh that was almost a sob.

"It's awfully sweet of you to be so astonished, Freddie," she said gratefully. "You certainly are a dear! But it's a fact. He hasn't shown the slightest sign of caring for me—that way."

"What's the matter with him—the unmitigated, double-dyed, double-backed chump? Can't he see?"

"O, yes," dolefully, "he can see. And—Freddie, please don't call him names."

"Can't help it. Is he in love with some one else?"

"I've wondered about that sometimes. Perhaps he is. But I don't think so."

"He must be. It's the only thing that would explain—wait a minute. Let me think."

Mr. Armstrong gazed broodingly into space, and Miss Suydam awaited the result of his mental processes with ostentatious respect. Suddenly he turned to her with brisk decision in his manner.

"See here, Bess," he began, "there's only one thing for you to do. Cut her out."

"But I don't know who she is—and there may not be another girl, anyway. Besides"—this with somewhat belated nobility—"it wouldn't be right."

"Right, nothing! All's fair in love and war. If you want him, take him!"

"But I can't get him," wailed Bess. "Heavens, Freddie, you're making me seem dreadfully indelicate, but surely you see how few things a girl can do. She's supposed to sit still and let a man do the wooing."

"I know. Doesn't seem right, does it? But of course they don't always——" Freddie checked his words and sternly repressed a few memories that stirred restively within him. "There are lots of things girls can do," he added hurriedly, "without being unmaidenly, I mean."

"O, Freddie, dear Freddie, please tell me what they are!"

"Why—er——" Freddie found himself skidding. "You know what they are, Bess. Every girl knows."

"Every girl knows the first moves of the big game. She knows all the tricks of flirtation. But she doesn't know what to do when the man doesn't—well, doesn't return the ball. And—and—of course a nice girl can't throw the ball very obviously."

"I see," mused Freddie. "She can't exactly hit him with it, and if she doesn't hit him, he may not see it coming."

"That's it. You're so nice and understanding."

Silence fell. Both were thinking hard.

"Tell me something about the man in Boston," demanded Freddie suddenly. "Is he our kind—one of us?"

"Yes."

"Harvard?"

"Yes."

"Good prospects? Good income?"

"Yes; but gracious, Freddie, what's the use of going into that? I've already told you he may not care for me; so what difference does his income make?"

"But he's going to care. That's what you want my advice about."

"Yes, and I haven't had it yet," she unkindly reminded him. "Now, let's get right down to brass tacks. What can a girl do to—to interest a man who seems indifferent to her?"

"So far," amended Freddie.

"So far—and who's one of our kind—not one of the silly, flirting kind."

There was no doubt now that Frederick was giving his mind to the problem. His brow was corrugated by it. But all he brought out was a puzzled mutter. "Somehow, I just can't see you in this new light, Bess," he mused, "caring for any one like that, I mean. It seems so unlike you."

"Thanks. And now if you'll really produce the brass tacks——"

He disregarded the dryness of her voice. "The tacks being the methods you can use to pin him down?"

"Exactly."

"Well," began Freddie slowly, "the trump card is to let him know you care. That'll make him sit up!"

"That's out of the question."

"Of course."

"The next best card is to let him know you like him—that you're interested as a friend——"

"I've played that."

"And that you admire him most awfully."

"I'm not sure I do."

"Eh?"

"You see, unfortunately, a girl can love a man without—well—without wholly approving of him."

"By Jove, I suppose that's so." Mr. Armstrong gave a moment of pensive consideration to this startling admission.

"If she couldn't, where would men be?" added Miss Suydam bitterly.

"M—m—yes—exactly—of course. So you love the man in Boston without admiring him? That's odd—that's very odd."

"I admire certain things about him, but not all his qualities. He's awfully stupid about one thing. But I admire his looks immensely."

"O!"

"He's very handsome."

"O!"

"You haven't driven a tack yet."

Mr. Armstrong aroused himself from what threatened to develop into a brown study.

"Well?"

"Perhaps you've let him see you too often?" he hazarded desperately.

"Freder-ick Armstrong—what a thing to say!"

"Why—I—I—what I meant was that sometimes absence makes the heart grow fonder, you know."

"I'm trying that."

"Of course, so you are. But you're going back to Boston next week, aren't you?"

"Yes. That's why I'm asking your advice."

Mr. Armstrong leaned back in his seat, thrust his hands deep into his pockets, and surveyed her gloomily.

"'Pon my word, you've got me," he admitted. "I don't seem to see the way out."

"And yet only a little while ago you were telling me that everything in life is so simple!"

"So it is." Freddie spoke with robust certainty, cheered by the reminder. "The thing for you to do——"

"Yes?"

"Is simply to—forget him!"

"O, Freddie, I can't!"

"Yes, you can. Keep away from Boston till you've done it. Change your mind about leaving next week. Stay right here, as Mrs. Duryea is begging you to do. I'll help you to divert your mind."

"But you're leaving this week."

"I won't. I'll stay on and see you through."

"Do you really think that's the only way—to try to forget him?"

"I'm sure of it. Don't you go on casting pearls before swine. It makes me sick to think of it. The man's a fathead, and you'll see it after a few weeks. Take my word for it."

Miss Suydam favored him with a long and deeply thoughtful regard. "Do you know," she said slowly, "I believe—your—plan—is worth trying."

"Of course it is."

Mr. Armstrong rose, took up her book and parasol, opened the latter, and waited for her to stand up.

"Come along," he said urgently; "we'll have a game of tennis. There's just time before we dress for dinner. And stop thinking about that Boston chump. He isn't worth it."

With touching obedience Miss Suydam rose and started for the house by his side. "And you'll really help, Freddie?" she asked with pathetic trust. "You won't forget all about it in a few hours? You're so absent-minded sometimes."

"You bet I'll help. I'll make you forget that that Boston chump is on earth. Confound it, here's our noble host and the Abbott twins, come to find us. What an infernal nuisance!"

Two weeks later, side by side in a hammock in the moonlit garden, Mr. Armstrong turned upon Miss Suydam a face of smiling triumph.

"I want you to make a confession," he said. "We haven't mentioned the man in Boston for a week. Confess that you haven't even thought of him for days."

"O, Freddie, don't I wish I could?"

"What—you mean——"

"It wasn't just a silly infatuation I had for him, Freddie. It was the real thing. How could you imagine that I'd get over it so soon?"

Mr. Armstrong seemed stunned. "But you seemed so happy—so awfully jolly all the time," he reminded her.

"Did you expect me to go about moaning? Girls don't do that, you know. They dissemble. They conceal their breaking hearts."

"Good heavens! Do you mean that all the time we've been playing like kids you've been feeling 'concealment like the worm'—and—and—that sort of thing?"

She did not answer. Instead, she drew out an absurdly small handkerchief and openly wiped her eyes. Freddie gazed at her aghast.

"Great Scott!" was all that he could say. "But you ate," he reminded her after a stricken silence. "You ate a lot! Remember that night of the clam-bake? You ate——"

"One has to sustain life," the sufferer coldly reminded him.

"And all the while you've been——"

"Loving him? Yes."

"And thinking of him every minute, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"Darn him!" Mr. Armstrong spoke under his breath, but the words reached her ears.

"Freddie!" she gasped.

"I can't help it—the—the dolt—the uncomprehending idiot—the——"

"Don't—I can't bear it." Miss Suydam's voice shook.

"Does he write to you?"

"No."

Mr. Armstrong straightened his shoulders with an effect of adjusting a burden to them.

"Look here, Bess," said Freddie quietly. "I want the truth. Are you playing fair?"

"Wh—what do you mean?"

"Are you trying to get over this thing, or are you deliberately encouraging yourself in it?"

There was a long silence, broken only by the splash of a fountain near them and the soft notes of a whippoorwill in a neighboring meadow. At last Bess spoke.

"I am not trying to get over it, Freddie," she admitted. "I never shall try." And she added slowly: "I may as well admit the truth. I would not get over it for anything in the world."

There was a strange quality in her voice, a deep and throbbing vibration. Under its influence young Mr. Armstrong suddenly experienced a new sensation. Something in his breast seemed to leap, then stop.

"It makes me utterly wretched," she went on quietly. "But, O heavens, how much more wretched I'd be if it were taken away from me! Of course I laugh. Of course I sing. Of course I play. Why shouldn't I, with such a wonderful thing held close in my heart all the time?

"You see, Freddie," she went on, "it doesn't really take two to make a love affair, though most people seem to think it does. A secret, silent, waiting, patient love that asks and expects nothing is one of the biggest things in the world. I have it, and the man I love belongs to me, just because I love him—until some other woman marries him. If that happens—well, then, my little universe will crumble. But I'm not going to tear it to pieces myself."

He listened to her in silence and with a bowed head. Depression settled upon him like a substance. His throat ached as it had ached when he was a very little boy, bearing sorrows for which he had no words. He felt, too, something of the incredulity of a hurt child suffering and wondering why. He turned to her abruptly.

"Don't talk like that, Bess," he groaned; "I can't bear it."

She looked at him and then looked away again.

"You're a dear, Freddie," she said, "and you're just as sympathetic as you always were. I remember how you cried, when you were 12 and I was only 9, because you thought I had broken my arm that time I fell from the tree. I knew I hadn't broken it, but I let you cry. Perhaps I'm doing the same thing now. Perhaps I'm letting you feel that things are worse than they are. My heart's not broken, any more than my arm was. And, as I've just told you, I glory in my pain."

"But I don't."

Mr. Armstrong spoke very quietly but through clenched teeth. "It's just torture for me, Bess. The only thing that made it possible for me to endure it these last two weeks was my feeling that you were beginning to forget—to get over the thing. Now you tell me it's as bad as ever, and I—well, I'm down and out, that's all there is to it."

He felt rather than saw that she turned to look at him. Something in him caught, without understanding it, the tense excitement in her voice.

"But Freddie," she asked, "what do you mean? What are you saying?"

"I'm not saying anything," he muttered. "What I'd like to say, if I could find the right words, is that I know just how you feel, because—well, because I'm in the same box myself."

"The same b——" She could not finish the sentence. Something abysmal in her soul rose and looked out at him through her wide brown eyes.

"I'm in love, too," he said simply.

She did not move or speak. He waited a minute, and then went on.

"I made up my mind I wouldn't say anything about it while you were in the midst of your trouble. What would be the use? And I thought it would help me as well as you to try and see you through it. But it hasn't. It's made things worse."

"I'm sorry." Her words were a mere breath, but he caught them. "How long has it been going on?" she added.

"Mine? O, I don't know. One never does know, I suppose. But these last weeks—it's been"—he stopped for words—"it's been pretty bad," he added simply.

"Dear old Freddie—dear, dear Freddie!"

She leaned toward him, putting two firm, friendly hands on his shoulders, her brown eyes full of tears. "I wish I could tell you how sorry I am," she said. "It's such beastly luck that you must go through this thing—for I suppose you mean that the girl doesn't care."

He nodded. Her hands were still on his shoulders. Now, suddenly, they shook a little.

"O," she cried, "how can she help it?"

His head rose with a jerk. Their eyes met and held while Life seemed to wait, her finger on her lips, hushing the night around them. The next minute they were in each other's arms, gasping, stuttering incoherent words. Slowly the whirling world steadied itself. Close by, the fountain laughed at them. In the meadow the whippoorwill reiterated his three notes, with a triumphant accent on the last one.

"And you said everything in life was so simple," Bess chided tenderly a little later. "Yet see what a mess this momentary misunderstanding might have made of our lives!"

"Momentary!" He echoed the word with a groan.

"Of course," she replied. "I never doubted that you loved me, except for one horrible moment just now. I was merely waiting for you to find it out, you darling goose. And I knew you might never realize it," she added, with a happy sigh, "unless I opened your eyes."

"But you said it began in Boston."

"It did. I realized last winter when I was away from you that I couldn't live without you. You couldn't endure the separation, either, you remember. You promptly came on for a visit. But I knew you'd moon along for another year or two without understanding your own heart, as the novelists say——"

"So you took it out and operated!"

Freddie gave a reminiscent grimace of pain.

"Then tonight," continued Bess, "for one awful moment it came to me that perhaps I was mistaken, that perhaps you had met some one else—O, Freddie!"

There was another silence, rapture filled. Then Frederick Armstrong spoke again with all his old time assurance.

"But the awful moment didn't last," he said blithely. "And now we're going to get married, as every one has always expected us to. It's just as I told you: life is mighty simple'"

Two Words That Mr. Sherman Was Unable to Shake from His Vocabulary.

WHEN the "flu" came along the show had to close. And Herman Sherman was beginning to do a good business with his "Glad Girlies" company, an organization flaunted to divert minds troubled by the high cost of living but which failed to live up to its gaudy press agenting.

Mr. Sherman belonged to that type of men who do not participate in life themselves, so busy they are in studying the passing procession. Standing to one side, he nervously scanned fellow human beings and strove not to give them what they wanted but to make them think they were going to get something. He scanned his fellow man with his head slightly lowered, his eyes alone shifting from side to side.

The "Glad Girlies" company, Mr. Sherman in the lead, had breezed into Big Falls, Mont., only to discover that the epidemic was already playing the town and that, by decree of the mayor, the theater must remain dark for a period. Manager Sherman did not register his chagrin publicly. He had a manner of alighting from trains and entering hotel lobbies that, despite circumstances, never changed. Long years before he had found it a part of wisdom to radiate faith, hope, and cheer by way of clothes and countenance, no matter how the cards were being dealt. But on reaching his room in the hotel, and with only his wife as a witness, Mr. Sherman made no further effort to conceal his peeve.

No doubt about it, Mr. Sherman was deeply saddened by news that the epidemic had enveloped Big Falls. Ahead of him he saw a bleak spell during which there would be nothing coming in. The season was in its infancy and the bank roll was a thing in prospect rather than an actual possession.

"And no one ever had any spicier billing," grumbled the manager, removing his trench coat and smoothing out its train wrinkles. "No use wiring ahead. It's the same all along the route. You ought to know me well enough, Effie, to know I've done everything that could be done."

Effie was not only one of the "Glad Girlies" but also Mrs. Herman Sherman. She may have been fair to look upon once but she had aged along with Herman and had shared so many of his exploits that she had ceased tc serve as a symbol for gayety on the stage in spite of artificialities strenuously applied, and off the stage she made no attempt to be other than her invalid self. For Effie life no longer held silver linings and rainbows and golden tints.

"I've believed it right along," she sighed, tossing her jaunty overseas cap on the dresser.

"Believed what?" snapped Herman.

"What I read the other day. I told you."

"What was it?"

"'And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars. . . For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom, and there shall be famines and pestilences and earthquakes in diverse places.'"

"O, that end of the world interview," recalled Herman indifferently. "I remember now you read it to me on the train, but I was thinking about something else. What paper was it in?"

"It was taken out of the Bible."

"No wonder I hadn't seen it. Better get that grip unpacked. We may be here in this room for a long, long time. Not so very long, either. We may be camping out in one of those snow drifts in another week or two. Don't suppose it would do any good to try to slip the mayor something to get him to lift the quarantine. Same trouble in the towns ahead anyway."

"There's trouble everywhere," interrupted Effiie. "It's as I told you, the world is coming to an end."

"Bunk," brisked Mr. Sherman, crossing to the mirror to comb his departing hair back smoothly. He was still all business although business had been forced into a lull. He hated lulls.

Mrs. Sherman watched him, melancholy deepening.

"Ain't you ever going to take anything serious?" she asked plaintively, rummaging among the contents of her traveling bag. "Can't you see it's a judgment, your route being cut off? You know you ain't giving the show you pretend to. Look at the paper you got out all along, announcing 'chorus of thirty,' and you've only got six, counting me, and half the time my smile——"

"I'll admit your smile is sour at times, Effie, but you're fine in that Red Cross patriotic tableau."

"You've been the same ever since I knew you, Herman—fake prize fights, fake wrestling bouts, anything to get the coin. You haven't any patriotism, political faith, religion, nothing. All you think of is playing on the public. And what's it going to get you now with the world coming to an end?"

"Listen, Effie, you're worn out from that last jump. Come on, now, we'll go down and get something to eat. Come on, cheer up. They've put the sugar bowls back on the tables."

Down at the dining room table he demonstrated that he had lost none of his managerial pose. He was as critical with the waiter as if the prospect of the bank roll had not dimmed in the least, as if the snow bank did not loom as a possibility. He sent back an omelet that had not been properly prepared for his Effie. His rôle as a protecting husband was not played unseen; the dining room was crowded.

"Flu, nothing," he remarked to the traveling man who shared the table. "What these people have got around here is the old-fashioned grippe. It all comes from closing the saloons. Funny I haven't caught it if it's catching, coming in contact with people every day."

Mr. Sherman spent a restless evening. It was a snowy night and bitter cold, yet Mr. Sherman felt sure the theater would have been packed. He chafed to be back in the box office with something doing—lights and the clink and crackle of the medium of exchange. He decided he would get action of some kind on the morrow.

But on the morrow Mr. Herman Sherman awoke with an ache in every bone. He made an effort to leave his bed, but changed his mind. He was burning up one minute and chill the next. Grudgingly, he let Effie send for a local physician. A worldly man, he had always been in shape to meet the world. No athlete or anything like that, but able to stay up nights, eat anything, drink anything, and keep going.

"I suppose you know what you've got, don't you?" finished the doctor, pocketing his thermometer and writing out a prescription. "Flu!"

"Effie," inquired Mr. Sherman weakly, when the doctor had gone, "what was that dope of yours about wars and rumors of wars and famine and pestilence?"

He tried to lift himself from his pillow.

"It was a prophecy," sighed Mrs. Sherman. "Think of all the bad money you've taken all your life, Herman. Think of the elections when you've voted twice and the grafters you've knowingly helped put in office. O, if we'd only gone out on a farm some place and depended on the sweat of your brow."

Mr. Sherman answered with an expression that was meek.

He felt a trifle better on the third day. "It would make a great movie film," he said to Effie. "All I would need would be backing. It's a great hunch—cameras on the job at every point of vantage. Good title, too, 'The End of the World.' You know what I mean, film it while it's taking place."

"There's a hitch to it, just as there was a hitch the time you scalped all those tickets for the world's series," responded Mrs. Sherman, listlessly, "because there wouldn't be anybody left to go and see the film."

"You're right, Effie, you're right. Can you see what the town looks like from the window? Scratch away some of the frost. Never mind. Like all the rest of 'em. I know without your looking. Might have been all right for a 'one night stand,' but I'd never pick it for a place to be in when this thing happens. How about the landlord?"

"He's been wanting to speak to you, but I said it was against the doctor's orders."

"You're right, Effie. Have you noticed anything in the elements that would indicate, you know, anything peculiar about the moon or a ring around the sun or anything like that? I suppose we might as well be patient and wait. It's a thing that can't be pushed, a big thing like that—the end of the world."

"Think of all the years, Herman, that you've used to sting folks. Always wanting to get hold of something and put a fence around it and then working up people's curiosity so they'll pay you to get in and get a peek. Always figuring out how you can stand at a gate some place and say, 'tickets, please.'"

"You ought to be more forgiving, Effie. I've said I was sorry."

. . . .

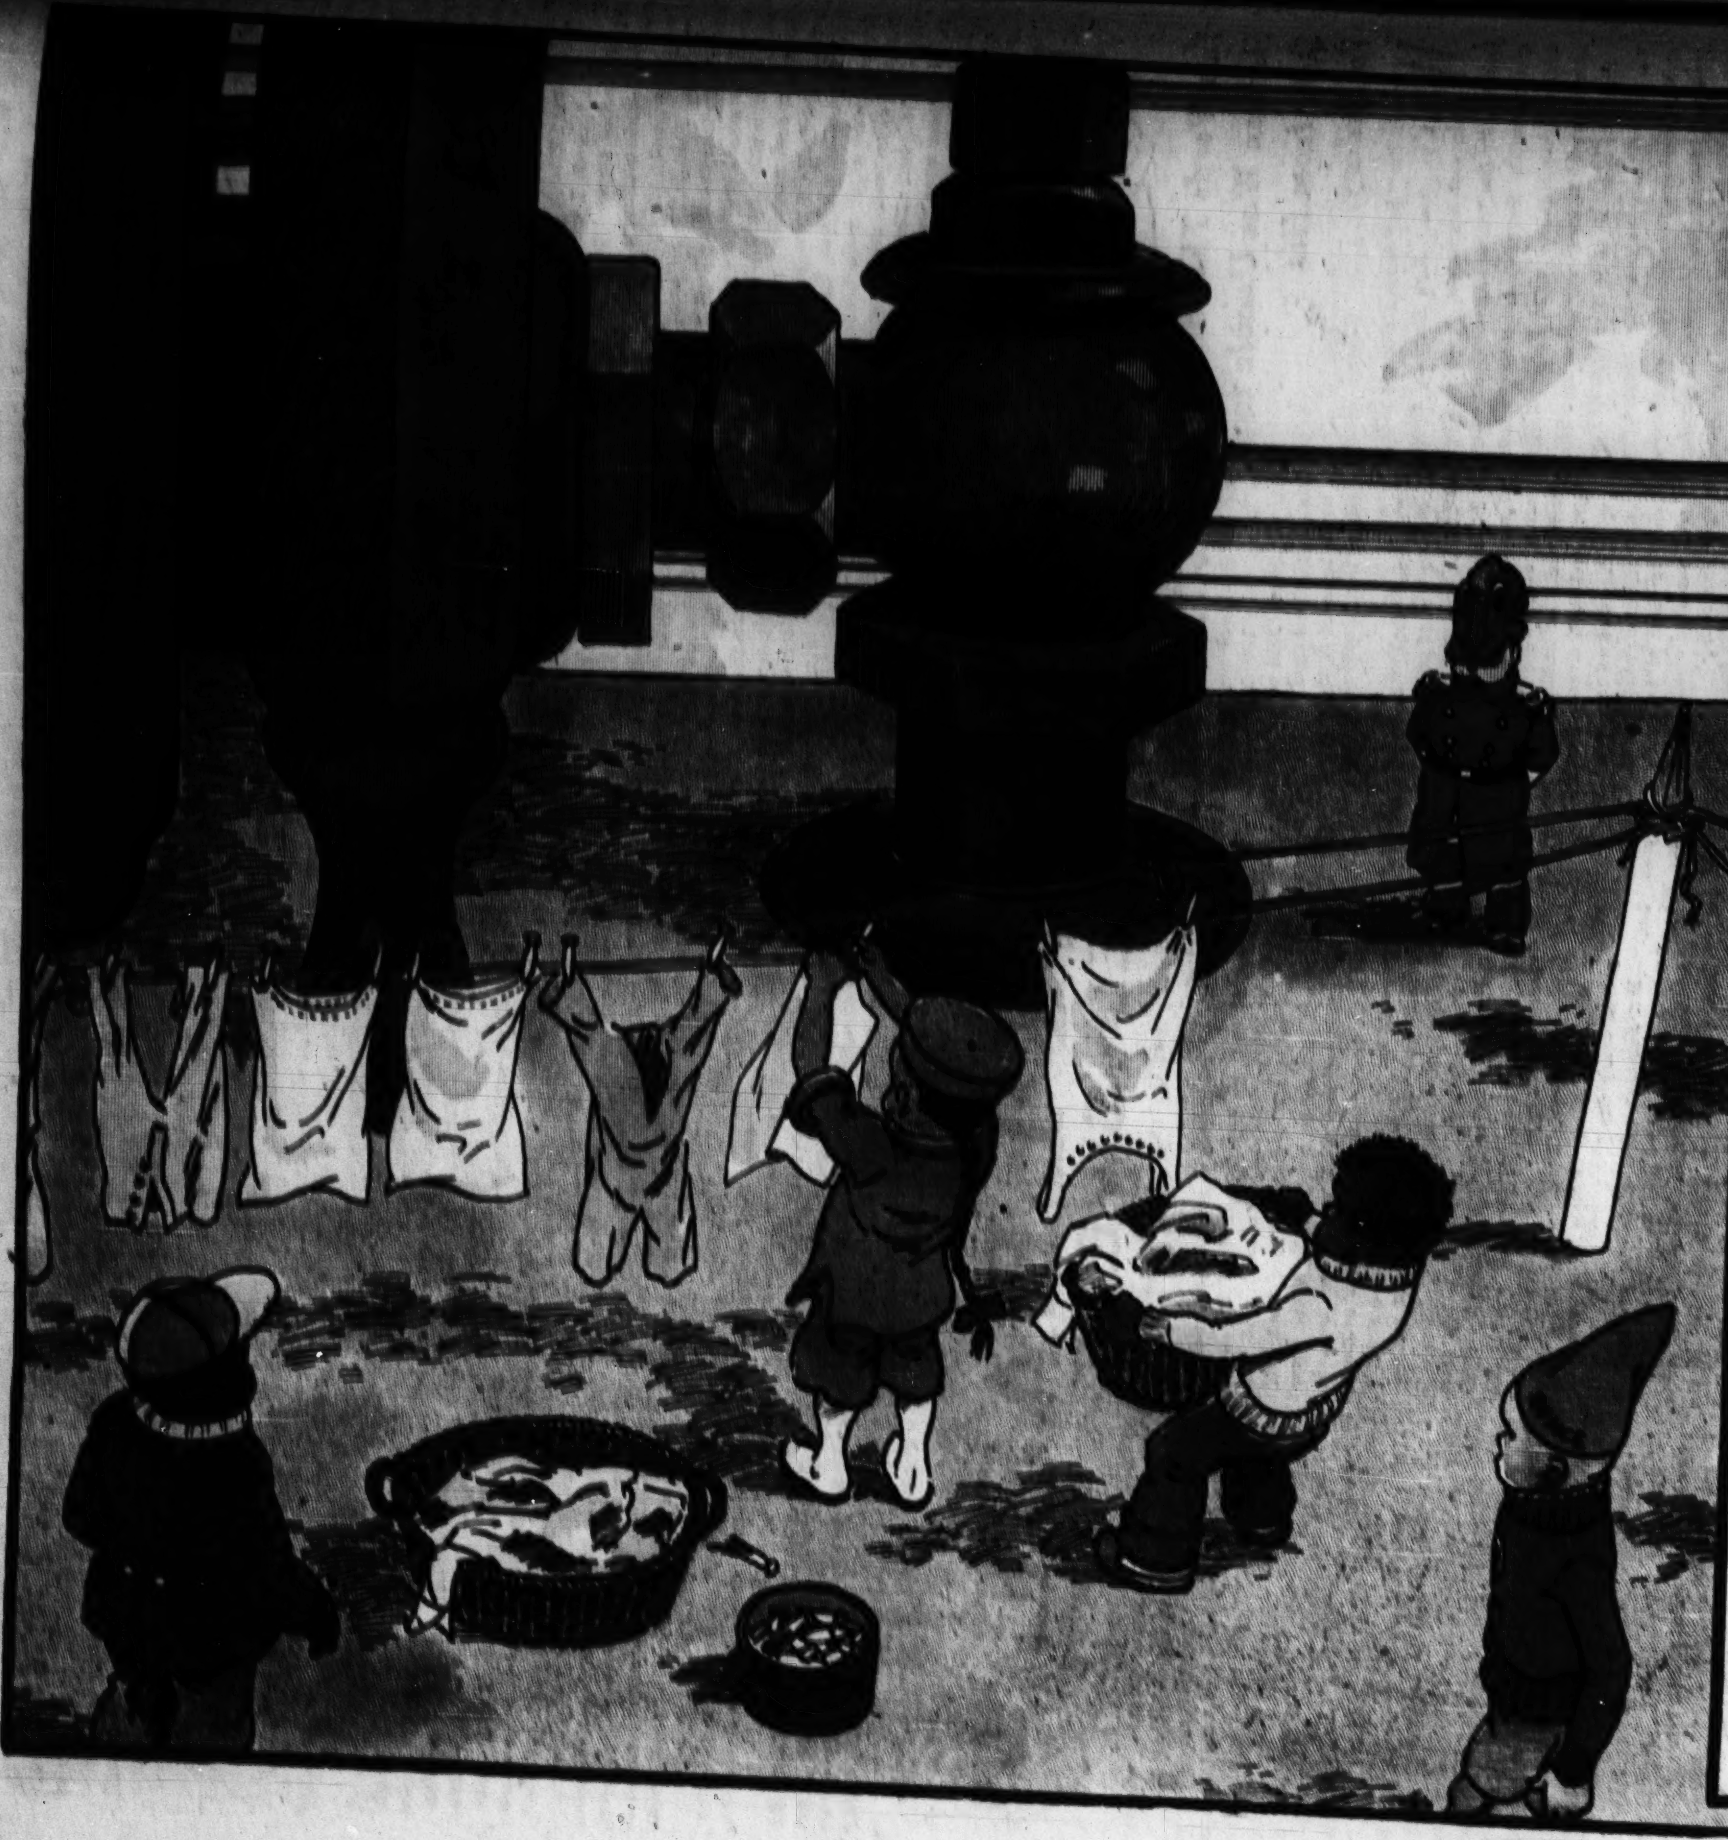
The quarantine had been lifted. Mr. Sherman was again out of bed. The "Glad Girlies" had just finished their effort. With the window drawn against the tide of Big Falls leaving the theater, Mr. Sherman stood in the box office. His face was whiter than usual, there was a drawn look about his month, echoes of the days that he had spent amid tablets and camphor and mustard plasters. But his head was bent at the same old angle.

Effie entered behind him. Her face was gaunt above the furs that Herman had bought at half price from Ed Shilksoki's back-door-at-midnight gang.

Mr. Sherman nodded briefly. He was busy with the evening's proceeds and he did not wish to break the count. He was stacking the silver carefully, smoothing out the crinkling bills according to denomination.

On the other side of the window the audience was trickling home. Audiences had a way of being disappointed in the "Glad Girlies" performances. Mr. Sherman was never really surprised over this disappointment; there was a reason why he favored one night stands.

But, reasoned Mr. Sherman, as he eagerly shoved the night's receipts into a tight tin box, what difference did it make to Big Falls if it didn't get its money's worth? What good was money—to Big Falls—with the world so soon coming to an end?



THE TEENIE WEENIES.

YOU CAN'T DRY A WASHING IN A TEAPOT.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"I wish the rain would fall at night
Instead of in the day.
For then, you see, we'd never lose
A single moment's play."

THE Teenie Weenie poet sang this little verse as he looked out at a huge rain drop which hung tremblingly to one of the tiny windows in the shoe house. It had rained five days and most of the time it had rained so hard that the Teenie Weenies dared not go out in it. The rain dripped off the rose bush and dropped with a thud on the shoe house. It slipped down the roof into the tiny eaves' trough and was carried away to the Teenie Weenie cistern. The cistern was a big one holding nearly two and a half teacups of water, but at the end of the second day it was filled to the top.

"Well, I've seen some pretty big rains in my time," said Grandpa, as he drew his chair a little nearer to the fireplace, "but I'll say right here that I never saw it rain so long. I've seen harder rains where it came down by the thimble full, but this takes the prize for a long rain."

"Jimminie f-f-fish hooks," sputtered the Dunce, who had been looking out of the window, "here c-c-comes the C-C-C-Chinaman."

In a few seconds the Chinaman stamped up the steps, shook off a few rain drops, and stepped through the door which the Dunce had opened for him.

"Well, sir," said the General, "what brings you out such a wet day?"

"O, me havie lottie trouble. Me muchie mad," answered the Chinaman.

"What's the trouble?" asked the Old Soldier.

"Me can no dry washie in tea plot. Muchie much too much rain."

"I never thought of that," said the General. "Of course you can't dry your clothes when it's raining like this. The old teapot makes a fine place to have a laundry, but there is hardly enough room to dry a week's wash."

"Couldn't you hang them up to dry in the hospital?" asked the Turk.

"Well I should say not!" cried the Doctor. "Do you want to get the place all damp? No, sir, you can't hang your washing up in my hospital."

"How about the tool house?" suggested the Lady of Fashion.

"Too muchie dirt in tool house," said the Chinaman, turning up his tiny nose.

"I'll tell you the place to dry the clothes," said Gogo, who had been listening to the talk. "Why don't you all take them to that big house over back of the garden? There's a room in the house that the people who live there don't use much, and you could hang them up by the radiator."

"That's a bully good idea!" exclaimed the General. "That's just what we can do."

Several of the Teenie Weenies went over to the tea pot with the Chinaman and in a short time they carried the baskets of wet clothes up to the radiator. The little men carried plenty of string with them and after a short hunt they found several pencils, which they used for poles to prop up the clothesline.

In a short time the clothes were quite dry and, packing them into the tiny clothes baskets, the Chinaman covered them with waterproof cloth and soon carried them back to the teapot.

The Chinaman put his big irons onto the little stove and soon he and Zip were busy smoothing out the tiny sheets and tablecloths, while the rain splashed loudly against the old teapot.

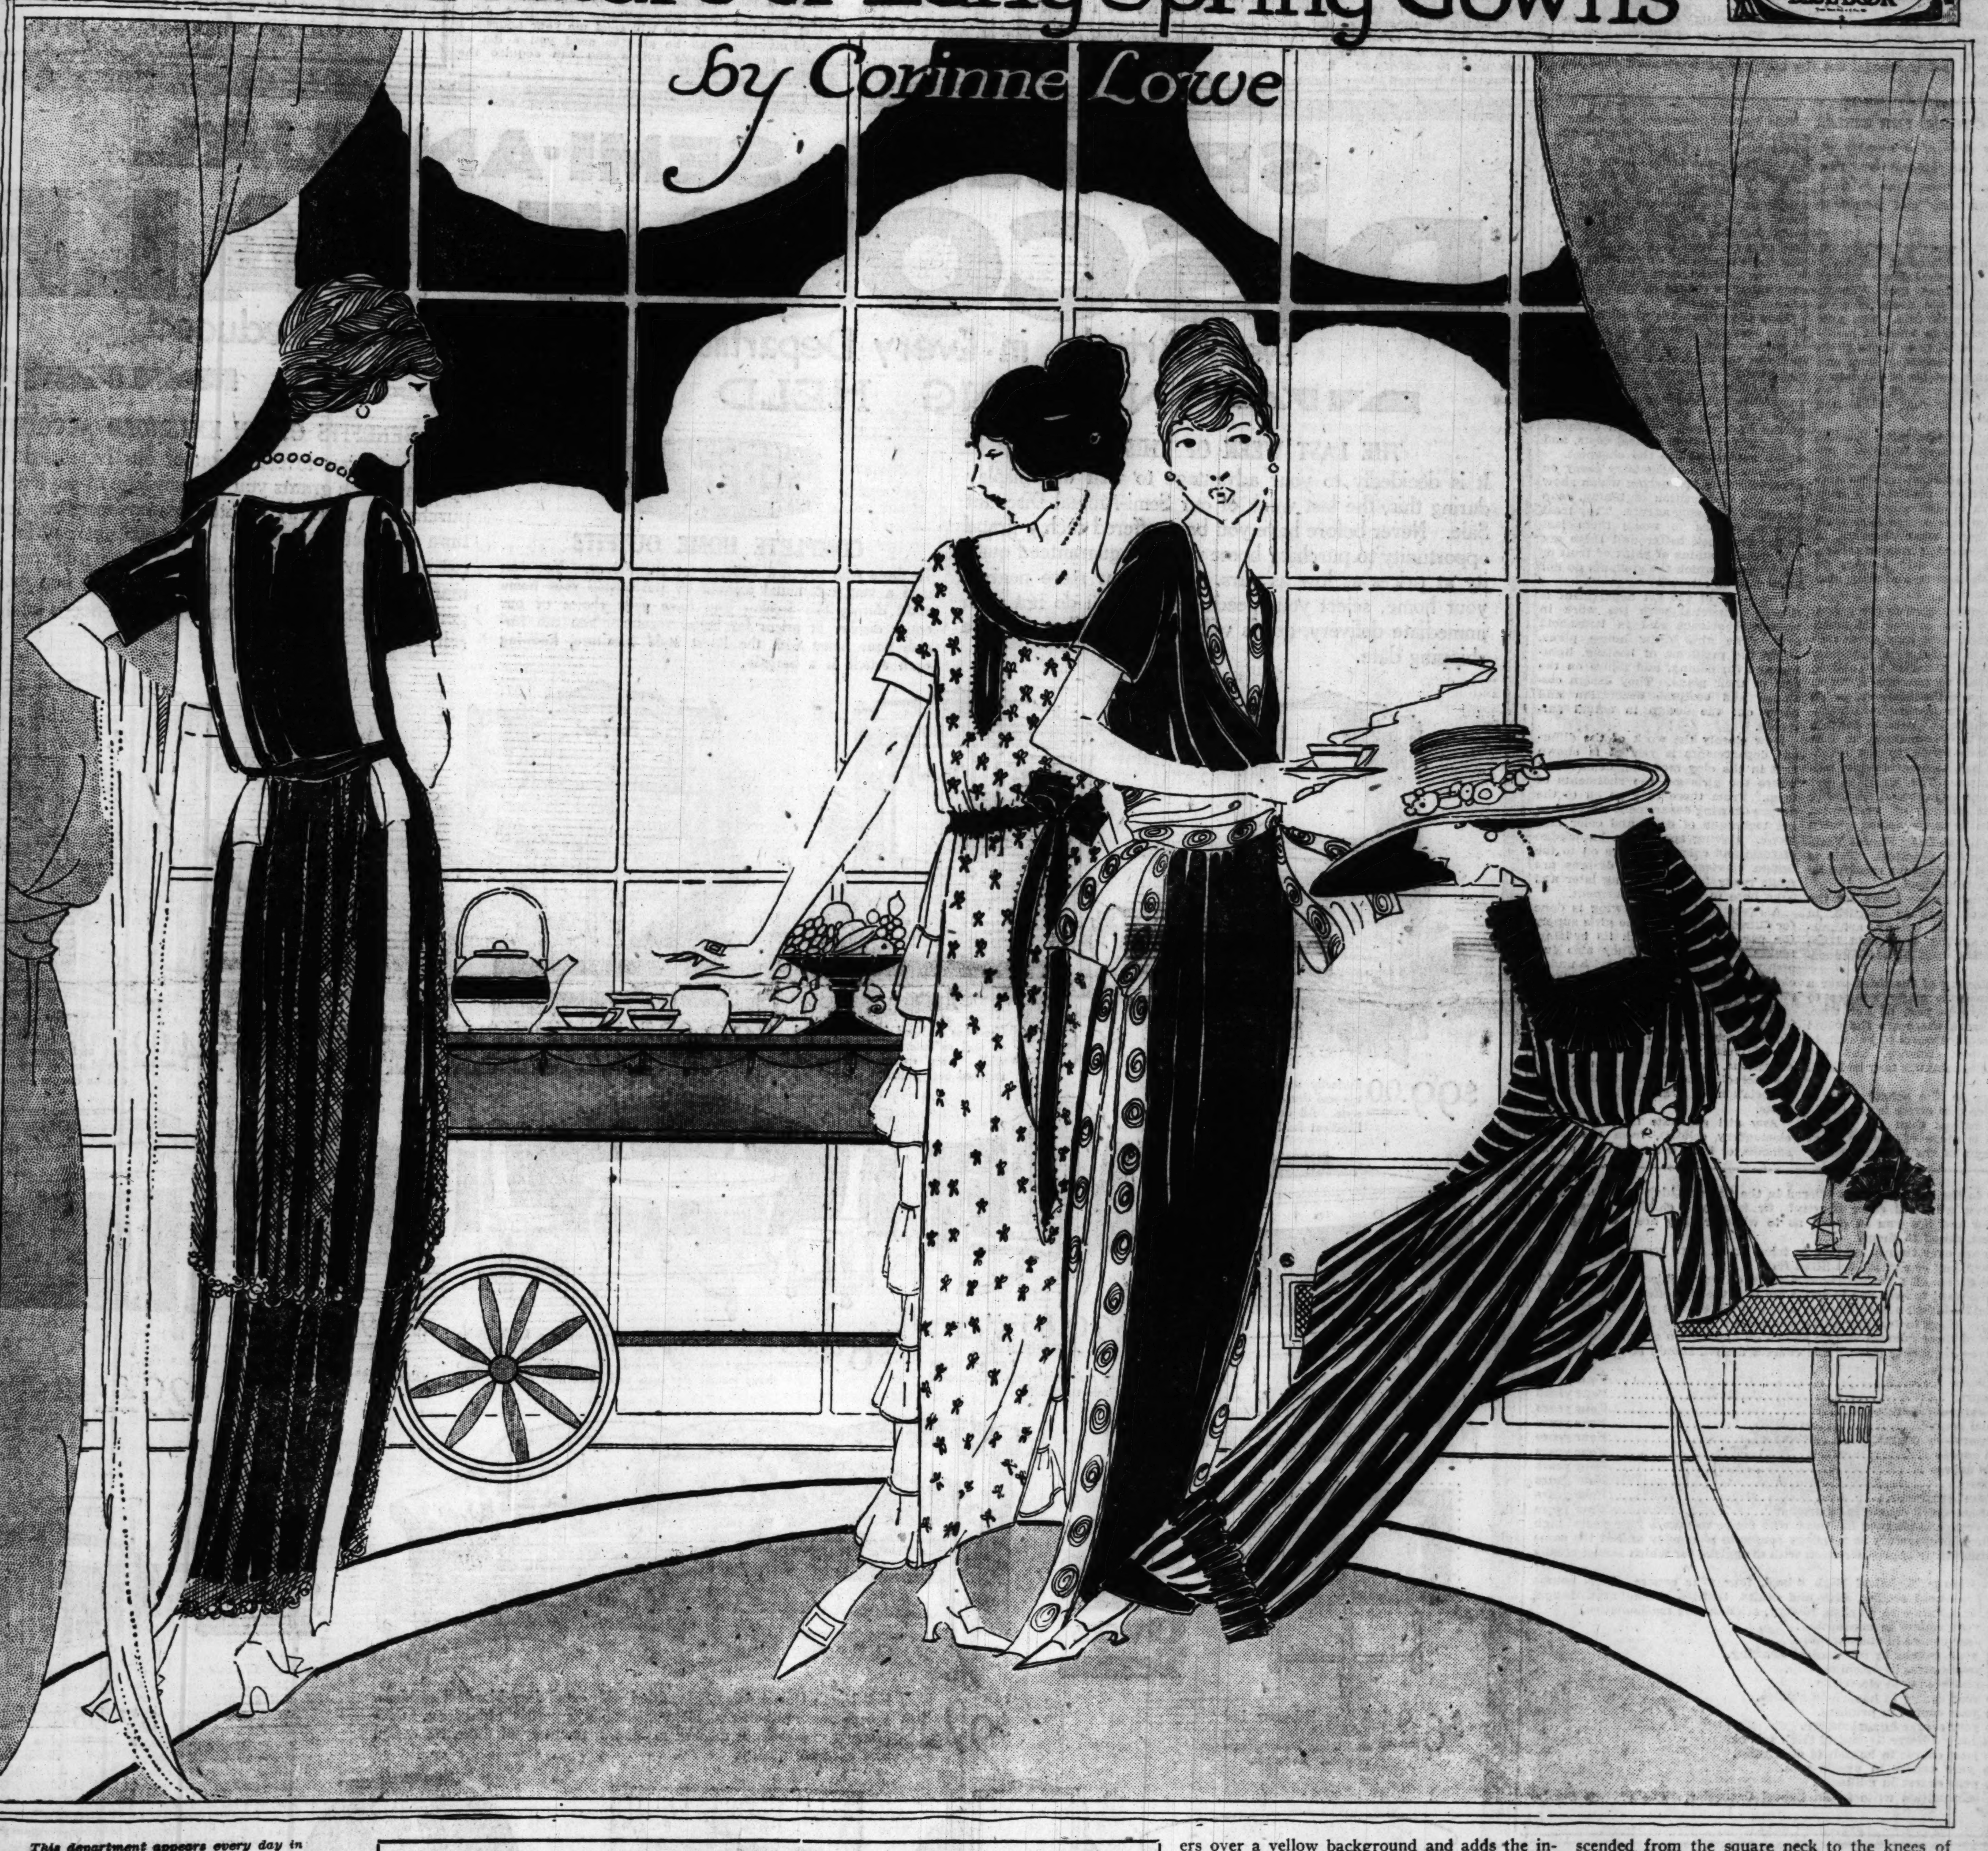
Ribbons A Feature of Early Spring Gowns

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

by Corinne Lowe



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

ARE we not, then, a rib-bonbon when we do all these things to our clothes? First, at the left, unfurl in the back ribbons of Victory blue upon a dinner frock of black satin and Chantilly lace; add the popular loop-and-tie ribbon girdle to a frock of yellow habutai draped in yellow voile that is figured in Nile green; make a black satin gown look as if we had never seen one by a looping and trailing ribbon girdle of black embroidered in gold and plait the dark blue ribbon trimmings on a gown of blue and white striped indestructible voile?

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—"What did you have for dinner?" "O, some French pastry!" That would sound quite a good deal like a dialogue from Alice in Wonderland, wouldn't it? Yet present frock menus are almost as grotesquely concentrated. They have so much French pastry about them—they are so dependent upon their color effects and their ribbons that it is hard to tell about the mere calories of your frock.

Ribbons! Nothing except a Maypole in Merrie England was ever decked like one of us today. There are so many different kinds of ribbon, too—plain color with picoted edges of silver, velvet ribbons and wonderful new ones in broche effects, metal ribbons—well, we can't go on this way or it would sound like a catalogue.

Above we are showing a group of frocks illustrating the more conservative applications. At the left a restaurant frock of Jenny's is draped in black Chantilly lace and then treated to a simple and effective arrangement of ribbons of Victory blue. These are used only in the back.

Next comes an effective little frock of figured voile and habutai trimmed with picoted ribbon. The ribbon girdle, looped and falling in long streamers just as you see it here, is, by the way, one of the best things to do with one of these new thin "picture dresses." Either that or the wide sash tying in the center of the back just as it used to before sashes became intellectual has been the report made by the Palm Beach observers.

Undoubtedly we are on the brink of a voile season. Plain colored ones are charming, too, when they add ruchings of flowered ribbon—O, yes, again ribbon! Yellow tints seem to be the favorites in these plain materials, although one sees much of various blues, of henna, gray and orchid. Then, too, if one tires of waging ribbon, there is a brand new trimming for these graceful plain colored voiles. It is to inset velvet of contrasting shade upon skirt, sleeves, and bodice. This is hemstitched upon white net and then hemstitched again upon the voile. A stunning effect in such a gown was achieved, for example, by spattering disks of black velvet on a henna tinted voile.

Figured voiles permit the same rainbow tippling. (And, by the way, these figured voiles and crepes are tremendously popular just now.) Thus, in this second frock from the left, we have poised over a daffodil yellow slip of habutai silk a flowered voile which scatters Nile green flowers over a yellow background and adds the inexorable ribbon sash and neck trimming of picoted Nile green.

If one goes to a dressmaker today she is apt to give one either of two things. First, there is the draped affair of Georgette, voile, or chiffon narrowing at the ankles. Second, we have in the heavier materials a long straight skirt with knee length tunic. You can take your choice.

Here, however, in this second dress from the left we see a style that is just a little different. It provides that a bodice of figured material may drop a long front panel over the plain foundation. Something of the same effect was noted by us the other day, for instance, in a frock where the underskirt of plaited blue voile showed under a long front panel of figured tan and gold foulard composing the entire bodice.

Another new idea which seems to have possessed the brains and fingers of every leading dressmaker is the "Masonic apron" tunic. This is seen in both blouses and frocks and is illustrated by a little afternoon dress we saw not long ago. This was a one piece dress of dove colored satin in which the "Masonic apron" of blue voile embroidered in silver threads descended from the square neck to the knees of the frock without any sign of a belt.

The next frock is one taken from a snapshot in Paris. It is of black satin and the only trimming is the girdle of wide ribbon—black embroidered in gold—which is tied in pannier-like loops on either side of the waist and falls a little below the skirt hem. The V neck has contracted the same ribbon malady, you see.

Plaited silk ribbon in a kind of cog-wheel effect has been one of the ribbonizations of the last month or so. We find this used on the hems of skirts and it is at its best outlining the dolman sleeve. The last frock on the page—one of striped blue and white indestructible voile—shows this on the hem of the long front tunic. Plaited, too, are the dark blue ribbons which form collar and cuffs. The accent of color is effected by a French flower of mustard color tucked into the girdle of white ribbon.

There are, of course, a thousand different provinces for Queen Ribbon to rule over. Graduated rows of it trim skirts of thin frocks; wide ribbon is inset upon Georgette gowns; millinery makes much use of it. In fact, are we not a rib-bonbon?

THE SCHOOL COUNSELOR

"I will go with thee and be thy guide."—Everyman.

SCHOOLS are a paying investment for the state, for education increases productive power.

The United States gives its citizens 4.4 years' schooling.

Massachusetts gives its citizens seven years; Tennessee gives only three years.

Citizens of the United States produced per capita $332 per year.

Massachusetts citizens produced per capita $466 per year, Tennessee $174.

It is impossible to attribute all this difference in productive capacity to the differences in educational systems. Climate and capital on hand must be considered. But the shrewd observer recognizes that education is a controlling factor when in all varieties of races, accompanied by all kinds of climate, natural resources, and economic and social environment, the educated peoples in every case produce much, and amass wealth, while uneducated peoples under the same circumstances produce little and save less.

The education of the nations is largely responsible for the vastly increasing productive power of their citizens. The power of illiterate nations is not increasing at the same rate.

Education is not a charity, but the best paying investment that the state can make.

PRACTICAL COURSE FOR GIRLS.

[This is the first of a number of articles which will appear in "The Sunday Tribune" from time to time on the different city and parochial high schools.]

A MODERN, practical education for girls is offered at the Lucy Flower Technical High school, Sixty-first street and Wabash avenue. It meets the needs of girls and its purpose is twofold. The first is to fit the girls to be efficient homemakers. The second is to make them skilled so that if necessary they can make their living outside of the home. For the accomplishment of these two ends there is a four year course and a two year course.

The average girl who takes the two year course fits herself to go out immediately into the business world. Two years is the shortest possible time in which a girl can consistently earn her living with a high school course. Graduates from this course earn good wages in millinery establishments, in dressmaking houses, as stenographers, typists, office girls, and helpers in catering establishments, and other similar lines of work.

The opportunities open to the graduate of the four year courses are much wider and better. She may enter normal or college, preparatory to teaching. If she has taken a major in cooking she is prepared to manage a lunch room, become a skilled caterer, or do successful work in institutional kitchens. If her major has been in sewing, this will lead to dressmaking, to lace work of various kinds, to the teaching of textile art, to dressmaking, millinery designing. The work in art leads to various commercial designing and different forms of craftwork. Business receives such women gladly.

Everything at the Lucy Flower Technical is extremely practical. This is one of the first impressions received by going through the school.

The four year course offers for the first two years work in English, in general science, art botany, arithmetic, cooking, sewing, household laundry work, music, and physical education.

At the beginning of the third year a girl may choose a major subject to which she devotes part of her time. Besides this work there are the usual high school requirements to be met, in English, history, science, and art. French and mathematics may be had if desired.

Everywhere in the school there is much evidence that stress is put on the family idea rather than ths student body; there is more of the home atmosphere than of the schoolhouse.

This home atmosphere is especially marked in those parts of the building where the cooking is going on. The lunchroom of the Lucy Flower is conducted by the pupils. It is an old fashioned kitchen, with a cooking range, and the students prepare the noonday meal for some 150 students. Each day ten girls are chosen and they hold a conference and plan for the next day's luncheon. In this way there is a practical application of the knowledge which is gained in the household science department.

Then the knowledge which is gained in the academic department is applied in similar manner in the school. For instance, the students in botany make and care for a kitchen garden, cutting down in this way the cost of the school vegetables and learning economy. Besides this they study the mechanics of the cook stove; they can compute to a cent how much a meal costs, and which vegetables are the cheapest.

The students in chemistry carry on experiments in laundering which show them the composition of bluing, soap and other cleansing agents. They treat various fabrics to make them last longer and look better and there are few spots or stains of paint or fruit or ink or grass which the students do not know how to remove.

The work of the art department is closely connected with the work in household science and in household arts. The girls draw house plans, study the problems of heating, lighting and furnishing, and figure on the cost of their plans. They design costumes and costume decoration and carry out the design in actual garments.

How closely the work of the different departments is related is shown first in the clay modeling department where the girls get the rudiments of form. From there they go on to the nature drawing department where they get technique of color and color harmony. Having acquired a knowledge of form and color they pass on to the design classes; then the designs are made ready for the drafting later and from here to the actual garment.

A great deal of the sewing is done for outside interests. The girls supply the parental school with its bedding, towels and clothing. They also furnish various other societies with underclothing, small garments and large piles of baby clothes.

The four year course prepares a girl for all of the courses at the Chicago Normal school and for admission to the University of Chicago with a few conditions, and the school is also on the accredited list of the North Central Association of Universities and Colleges.

Any girl graduate from the public elementary schools, from the parish schools, or from the accredited private schools of Chicago is eligible to enter the Lucy Flower Technical High school.

For any information in regard to schools write to the School Counselor, THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

"I am asking your advice in regard to my daughter who is in her last year at high school. I have been expecting her to be a teacher, but she tells me she does not want to do this, as she must go to normal two years and probably substitute a year more and then not earn as much as she could earn by studying stenography for six months. Will you kindly give this your best attention as your answer means much to both of us? R. D."

Comparison between the teacher's life and the business woman's life is hard to make; the work of each is widely different; the choice should lie with the individual entirely. To those who like teaching, the work with the children, the associations of the school, the long vacations in summer and the Saturday holiday make teaching infinitely more desirable than business. In business the hours are longer, the vacations shorter, but for the first few years at any rate, the average pecuniary returns are considerably larger. If your daughter has no liking for teaching and does not think she would care for the life I should certainly send her to some business college after she leaves high school, and fit her for a business life.

"I have a girl 15 years old and a boy 13 who are going to start high school on Feb. 3, and I wish to ask if the Bowen High school has the same two year business course as the Lucy Flower Technical school. The boy is quick at figures and I think he ought to take a bookkeeping course. I think the girl ought to take up stenography. I have three children under 6 years old, so I feel that we can only afford the two year course for the two older ones. We are in the Bowen High school district, but you seem to mention particularly the Lucy Flower Technical High school. Does the two year course in accounting fit a boy for a clerical position?"

The Bowen High school has a two year course in accounting which will fit your boy for a clerical position. However, if possible, I should give the boy two years of the general course first, as it will be of great value to him in later life. In a few weeks I am going to tell of the different ways in which a boy and girl can help to earn their way in high school, and if, by working a couple of extra hours a day, your boy could stay in high school it would be worth his while in after life. I have mentioned the Lucy Flower Technical school in connection with certain technical studies, but the regular high schools offer good business and technical courses also.

"I am graduating from the four year technical course this June and would like to become an aeroplane engineer. Will you please tell me the best place to go to acquire the necessary information? A. A."

If you will send me your address I shall be glad to send you a list of schools where you can acquire the training you wish.

Below is the list of courses offered in the Chicago high schools. Have you children who will enter shortly? Or have you children already in high school and are you in doubt as to whether they are pursuing the courses best suited to them?

There are over twenty courses to select from. Are you sure what line of work your boy or girl is best fitted for?

We shall be glad to answer questions on any subject pertaining to school. We want to help you to select the best the city offers in the way of training and education for your boy and girl. We want you to obtain the best the city offers in training and education for your boys and girls.

Copies of these courses will be mailed on application and detailed information given regarding them. The courses desired should be specified and a stamp inclosed.

DRINKS WITHOUT KICKS.

WITHOUT question poor food, badly cooked, has driven men to drink. Without question fine food badly or wrongly cooked, in bad or wrong combinations, has driven men to drink picturesque mixtures of sometimes rather innocuous ingredients and again so composed as to be like scorpion whips.

The first sort of man is generally poor of purse, with scant opportunity for pleasure, often wretched of body, and so seeks all the things missing from his life in a drink with a "kick." He usually takes his alcoholic beverage "straight" or "neat." This man is often horribly imposed upon. If report is true, he may get mixtures so fiercely spiced with cayenne and its kind that they burn his vitals out, or of stuff so ignorantly distilled that but a drink of it crazes him, as did the old fashioned "squirrel booze," distilled, it is said, by the druggists of thirty years ago. Some one describing this to me said that this cheap whisky made men frantic and dangerous. From a sight I saw on the busiest corner in the world the other day I think similar stuff must be manufactured today.

It is not going to be easy to find "soft drink" substitutes for these drinkers, because nine-tenths of what they need is a better social chance in the world.

Many Mixed Drinks "Soft."

It is going to be easier to find nonalcoholic substitutes for the 2,000 or more mixed drinks. A great many of them already exist, and have been served over the bar these many years. To one who has not perused bartenders' manuals and gushing writers on the "flowing bowl," it comes rather as a surprise that limes and lemons, oranges and pineapples, sugar and cream, boiling milk and boiling water, ice and the burning off of spirits in a mixture (leaving the innocuous essence), are used in much more than half of the most famous mixtures. In many mixed drinks no spirit of any sort is added, and in others so little as to count only as flavor just as a teaspoon of vanilla (an alcoholic extract) might. Sparkling mineral waters, seltzer and such are other innocent ingredients that are a necessary part of the numerous supplies for these mixed drinks.

Recipes for several dozen kinds of lemonades—hot, cold, iced—sherbets, sophisticated tea, coffee, and chocolate and plain fruit juices, beef tea, and milk drinks will be found mixed in with recipes for cocktails and mixtures of half a dozen concentrated alcoholic liquids like absinthe, brandy, rum, curacoa, vermouth, and whisky in bartender's manuals.

It is probably safe to say that when as much time, skill, expense, and imagination is given to devising liquid refreshments of the perfectly innocuous type as has been given to devising those others, the others never will be missed, especially by generations to whom they are but historic. In one recipe for absinthe there are fourteen ingredients besides the cognac, and most of these are quite innocent, like licorice, calamus, bitter almonds, peppermint leaves, coriander, juniper, fennel, and anise. Fruits play a large part in the making of some of the wickedly strong liqueurs used in many mixed drinks.

Juices for the Beer Thirst.

The excess of fruits now being produced in our country over what can be marketed fresh is now being utilized in the making of the fruit sirups, the plain sterilized fruit juices, and the dried fruits, which may ultimately be used for making temperance drinks. An article on "Quenching the Nation's Thirst," printed about eighteen months ago in the Country Gentleman, took up the question of "juices for the beer thirst," the turning of dry beer breweries into superior cider plants where the cider is carbonated to improve its flavor and zest, and of bottling it so that it would keep without the benzoate of soda imported from Germany, etc.

The author of this article, John R. McMahon, believes that topers can be converted to juice. He quotes the following from one of the United States department of agriculture scientists:

"In the cities especially men drink to overcome nervous fatigue. Some quick acting nourishment, whether milk, raw egg and milk, or fruit juice without too much dilution, will often take the place of the deleterious stimulant. Many soft drinks are little more than flavored water. Fruit juice is the natural and coming beverage for a dry nation."

It is not easy to prophesy about "victuals and drink," but it is my own private opinion that charged water plus delicious and hauntingly flavored sirups, with fresh fruits for a garnish, will replace many of the mixed drinks which have often been but a little more than this anyway—these things with a "stick." A cherry or olive can just as well be at the bottom of the glass as when a pony of brandy or whisky, and the lemon "horseneck" does just as well for a temperance drink as for the other sort. And we must not forget the shaved ice. Any number of the mixed drinks are concocted in a glass two-thirds full of shaved ice.

Drink for Business.

The instant answer several men gave to my question about what soft drinks are served in the saloon today has been "Water," meaning the various sparkling waters. Perhaps the time will come when a seltzer bottle will no more mean a whisky accompaniment than it does on the countless sidewalk drinking places in Europe. If it is true that strong drinks are a great adjunct of business—no man drinking alone—some bottles of sirup, a seltzer bottle, and other makings of an innocent sort might serve a similar end when the country goes dry.

One author who puts down his experience in mixing drinks for men during thirty years or more, gives a long list of reasons why men drink and he decides that most drink for business. Physical comforts, good cooking, and fine flavors, with companionship, would otherwise take the place of the drinks. He tells of a broker who was unsuccessful selling diamonds to a customer until he treated him to a "Sans Souci," the recipe for which contains absinthe, maraschino, vermouth, and curacoa. After that he sold him $10,000 worth of diamonds—which reminds me of a recipe in an old cook book which reads: "To catch wild duck or geese alive, soak wheat in strong alcohol, and scatter where they are in the habit of feeding, and take them while they are drunk." Of course, no man thinks he is drunk until he is all seas over—until then his judgment is intact!

Fancy Names of Mixtures.

Even a partial running through a list of mixed drinks would convince any one that no end of imagination had been spent in naming mixtures and that some of these names were warranted to excite the imagination. Some are honest prescriptions, while others are dishonest and irreverent. "The Angelus" recipe shows anything but a holy combination, and the "Easter Crocus" is but a little milder. There are three villainous spirits in "The First One" and "The Preserver," "The Weeper's Joy," "The Brain Duster," are smilers with a knife under their cloaks.

Time, expense, imagination, but finally skill and great skill must go into the devising of nonalcoholic refreshments that will gratify men as have these products of the bar. Men drink because they are sick, says the bartender, and many times you will find him giving these men hot lemonades, boiled milk, and other heat producing liquids, often without a dash of anything spiritous.

You will find a bartender advising scrupulous cleanliness, and a man who has worked for years to excite men's curiosity by flavors—one of the reasons given for drinking—will prescribe that when lemon juice is to play a great part, as it does in so many mixed drinks, along with lime juice, that the yellow skin and every bit of the white part be removed, and then the rest rinsed with cold water so that no tiniest drop of oil of lemon affect the flavor. If the zest of the skin is wanted that is another matter. This is a somewhat different doctrine from that of the maker of Fourth of July lemonade in prohibition states—I have lived in two. He does not even wash his lemons, and he thinks slices of pulp with the skin appropriate, whereas they coarsen the flavor.

Varied Formulas for Lemonade.

A lemonade is not a bad thing for the one who would learn to mix nonalcoholic drinks of great attractiveness to begin on. Not that the bartender puts his lemon juice, sugar, or sirup, egg, or cream, in the glass first. That is the way to begin in making lemonade. Here are some of the bartender' recipes in some of which final ingredients are omitted, as he says they may be:

LEMONADE.—The juice of half a peeled lemon and orange, a large spoonful of fine sugar, the glass full of ice. Fill your glass with water, shake this well, ornament with fruits and ice cream. [Most people would think an ice more suitable than ice cream.]

SODA LEMONADE.—The juice of one-half lemon, one spoonful of sugar, dissolved well in a large glass, two or three lumps of ice. Pour in your plain soda with the left hand while you stir with the right and serve.

SELTZER LEMONADE.—Made the same as soda lemonade, using seltzer instead of soda.

STRAWBERRY LEMONADE.—The juice of a lemon, one spoonful of sugar in a large glass, the juice of one dozen strawberries. Fill your glass one-third full of ice and the balance with milk; shake this well and strain into a long, thin glass.

CHERRY LEMONADE.—Put two pounds of sour cherries in a tureen, mash them with a wooden spoon, and pour two and a half or three quarts of boiling water over them. A small portion of the pits is cracked, put them in the tureen, cover well, and let soak about three hours; filter; mix with a quart of sugar refined and cleared to a sirup, and let it get cold. A spoonful of St. Croix rum or arrack increases the fine taste of this lemonade exceedingly. [Note how small the proportion of spirit recommended!]

CHERRY LEMONADE FOR SICK.—Mash one pound of dried sour cherries, pits and all, and boil in one quart of water with the rind of half a lemon, and a small stick of cinnamon slowly for half an hour; strain through flannel, sweeten with sugar to taste, and keep in a bottle for use.

Sirup Indispensable.

The list of such beverages is really quite endless. The author of these receipes uses pineapple most variously, and in discussing fruits says: "The delicious pineapple may be used in the same way as oranges, the juice or sirup being almost indispensable." Canned fruits are also in his list.

The home cook may shine in the sirup making business, and when she once learns how serviceable in endless dainty ways and how economical of sugar the sirup is, she will consider those of her own make indispensable. They cost often not so much as a half of those she buys. Nothing but sugar and some liquid to start, but there are enough variations to fill a treatise. The candymaker calls the plain sugar sirup a "stock" sirup. It is indispensable to the beverage mixer.

Besides fruit juices ginger ale plays a great part in temperance drinks, and one of the near temperance drinks, a recipe for which is to be found in nearly all bartenders' manuals, that for shandygaff, Christopher Morley recently used as the title of a collection of entertaining writings. The simplest recipe I know of reads: "Put a bottle of ginger beer into a pint of ale." One bartender's manual says, use a large bar glass or mug, then "fill the glass half full of old ale and the other half with Belfast ginger ale; stir up with a spoon and serve. This is an old English drink; proper attention must be taken in order to have the drink to the right temperature."

Christopher Morley quotes from "Dictionary of Deplorable Facts" as follows: "Shandygaff: a very refreshing drink, being a mixture of bitter ale or beer and ginger beer, commonly drunk by the lower classes in England and by strolling tinkers, low church parsons, newspaper men, journalists, and prize fighters. Said to have been invented by Henry VIII. as a solace for his matrimonial difficulties. It is believed that a continual bibbing of shandygaff saps the will, the nerves the resolution, and the finer faculties, but there are those who will abide no other tipple."

Probably in addition to time, expense, skill, and imagination we need to gather around our temperance drinks some humor.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Six level tablespoons equal one cup (half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Roast Wild Ducks.

Dress and clean a brace of wild ducks; truss same as goose; place on rack or on thin slices of fat salt pork in bottom of dripping pan; sprinkle with salt and pepper; cover breast with thin slices of fat salt pork; bake thirty to thirty-five minutes in a hot oven, basting every five minutes with drippings in pan. Remove strings and skewers; place birds on hot serving platter and serve with olive or orange sauce.

Wild plum or black or red currant jelly may accompany the roast duck. Domestic birds should be well cooked, requiring more than twice the time of that required for the wild birds. When cooking wild ducks, to overcome fishy flavor that they sometimes derive from their diet, apples are cored and quartered or onions are placed in the body of the bird, neither one of which is to be served when the bird is served. If desired, the following stuffing may be used:

Crush two cups of crackers moderately, add one cup of English walnut meats finely chopped, one-half cup finely chopped celery, one cup of thin cream, one-half cup of butter, and one small onion finely chopped; mix well; add one-half teaspoon of finely chopped parsley and season with salt, pepper, and cayenne. If stuffing appears too dry, add more cream or milk.

Pork Chops Baked with Potatoes.

Wash, pare, and cut sweet or white potatoes in one-fourth inch slices; season with salt and pepper, and arrange a layer in the bottom of a covered baking dish (casserole.) Cover with pork chops from which most of the fat has been cut away; sprinkle with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Add one-half cup of boiling water. Cover and bake slowly in a moderate oven about forty-five minutes to one hour, according to thickness of chops. Turn chops once while cooking. Uncover the last fifteen minutes and increase the heat to brown the chops. Serve in a baking dish.

If sweet potatoes are used, a light sprinkle of sugar may be used between layers.

Baked Finnan Haddie.

Wash the fish; arrange in a dripping pan flesh side down; cover with cold water and let stand over a low heat or on back of coal range ten minutes. Drain; rinse with cold water. Place on a platter that will stand heat and suitable to send to the table. (A copper platter is particularly useful for such purposes.) Cover with milk and bake twenty-five minutes in a moderate oven. Serve with baked or mashed potatoes. The milk may be drained from fish, slightly thickened, and poured again around fish.

Salt Mackerel Cooked in Milk.

Soak a carefully selected salt mackerel, flesh side down, in cold water to cover over night. In the morning drain and rinse thoroughly; arrange in an agate dripping pan that it may lie flat; cover with fresh sweet milk (be sure the milk is fresh, as the salt may curdle it). Let simmer slowly on back of range or in oven from twenty to twenty-five minutes. Drain, spread with soft butter, and serve with baked or boiled potatoes. The milk may be strained and used for making a thin white sauce. (Omit salt in sauce.) Pour sauce around fish and sprinkle with finely chopped parsley or paprika.

Planked Whitefish.

Clean and split a three pound whitefish. Put skin side down on a hot oak plank one and one-half inches thick and a little longer and wider than the fish. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and brush over with melted butter. Surround fish with a border of coarse salt to prevent plank from burning. Bake twenty-five minutes in a hot oven. Remove from oven, spread with maitre d'hôtel, and garnish with parsley, lemon, and a border of mashed potato. The fish should be sent to the table on the plank.

Planked whitefish may be successfully cooked in a gas range having the flame over the fish.

Maitre d'Hôtel Butter.

Cream four tablespoons of butter; add one-half teaspoon of salt, one-half teaspoon of pepper, a few grains of cayenne, and one-half tablespoon of finely chopped parsley. Then add a scant tablespoon of lemon juice drop by drop, stirring constantly; chill and use as directed.

Baked Halibut Steaks.

Pour a marinade over two slices of halibut steak cut one and one-half inches thick; let stand an hour. Cover a fish sheet with thin slices of fat salt pork. Place one steak upon the pork; cover with a layer of oysters drained from their liquor, dip in melted butter, then in seasoned cracker crumbs. Place on the oysters the second steak, and cover the latter with thin slices of fat salt pork. Bake in a hot oven thirty-five minutes, basting every ten minutes with the dripping in the pan; five minutes before removing fish from oven remove pork from top and spread with maitre d'hôtel butter. Sprinkle thickly with buttered cracker crumbs and let brown richly. Remove to serving platter and serve with oyster sauce. Garnish with potato balls, sprinkled with finely chopped parsley, and slices of lemon sprinkled with paprika.

COLOR AND COMFORT.

ONE does not have to be very old to remember the time when the mistress of a home boasted that her living room was "done all in green" or that her dining room was "done all in red." It gives the present, younger generation the horrors to think of it.

The next step was the colorless period. Dull browns and grays came in. Always it is—in the matter of fashions—the far swing from one idea to another. Living rooms took on chills that chattered your teeth, if not your good bones. There was a sensation of deadness, not at all agreeable to one who aims to live a cheerful existence in spite of the antics of fate and the frequent visits of the bill collectors.

Now we have something better. We realize that definite color is good for the soul and the eyes. In the living room a bit of rose or old red fulfills a mission. We may still have our colorless backgrounds of grays, buffs, or barleys, but we brighten them with colorful pillows, lamp shades or vivid upholstery fabrics. The Futurist movement has had something to do with the change, since it brought along the most amazing tricks of combining strong hues and violent shadings, which startled the fiend for dullness out of her seven senses. The lady does not accept stripes of orange, black, green and red all dancing together, but she takes the hint. And she is no longer afraid to lift the gloom from her mobiliary arrangements.

It is quite certain that soft toned walls emphasize the furnishings. Also they make for expansion. Paint your walls a strong color and your room warps and shrinks. Your walls are the predominating influence then. No matter how beautiful your furniture may be, it is secondary. The eye perceives the background and the decorative effects fade. The same rule holds good in dress. The lady in a bright red frock is only a carrier of an exhibit of dry goods. By the time you have recovered from the shock of red fabric the lady herself has passed from your vision.

The wearer should be the dominating factor rather than the robe; so in the home the taste of the dweller is more pronounced than mere inanimate objects. It is the controlling influence. And in color arrangements good or bad taste advertises itself. Though one may possess the most beautiful furnishings, unless one assembles them beautifully there is discord.

To mix and mingle colors is much more difficult than mixing furniture of varied periods, and since it is a difficult task, the achievement is that much more satisfying. If your living room has taupe walls, a Chinese rug of gold and blue, and draperies of the same colors as the rug, you can with triumph add a Sheraton arm chair upholstered with rose, a lamp shade of many colors, and a touch of polychrome here and there. If your living room has walls of dull green, you can revel in chintz. Select rose and black, or mauve and black, with a black cushion here and there for contrast. Get color in your pictures, and let the book bindings do their share. Books, beautifully bound, are extremely decorative, and form a satisfactory blend between walls and floor.

If you are afraid that you will overmix, you can place chintz on your library walls, and select furniture and rugs that are of solid color. The chintz and the books will supply plenty of cheer.

In direct contrast to this would be a living room with walls of deep ivory, and rugs of black, black and white cut velvet for upholstery of sofa and large chairs and deep rose velour for smaller chairs and footstools. Add to this a mauve gauze lamp shade and a spreading bouquet of lilacs and jonquils, and you have an exquisite color scheme, one of delicacy and beauty. A restful color plan, which works out nicely, is living room of ivory walls, the floors spread with Chinese rugs in ivory, black and blue, and the furniture dressed in chintz in which terra cotta, orange and blue predominate. To provide the contrasting note, several chairs should be upholstered with bronze colored velvet.

The "feeling of comfort" that is so important an element in the interior decorating of one's domicile comes quite as much from the colors applied as from the style of furniture that is selected. Restful colors include all the soft variations of grays, tans, and greens—to call colors by their old fashioned names instead of the new ones. Warm colors embrace violet pink, soft rose tones, and yellows; cold colors include green blue, violet blue, and gray. South bedrooms call for cool colors, north bedrooms for warm colors. The living room is most successfully planned when its color schemes and plots include those shades, tones, and tints that combine restfulness and cheerfulness.

Very seldom should any color be applied in its normal intensity unless it is applied sparingly. There should be present the neutralizing effect of a companion color. It is best not to have too distinct lines. The whole finality should be like that of a beautiful painting. If one fears to attempt very much one can take a simple theme and work it out. For instance, a room can be done in old ivory toning down to rust shades, and the contrasting complementary colors can be a vivid green and black. This can appear in the window draperies, lamp shade, and cushions, with a suggestion of pink.

In the small apartment it is very wise indeed to keep the wall colors neutral, also to have them all—except the bedrooms—the same color. In the small apartment doors are always open and the effect is more or less that of one room with various extensions. And yet the character of each room can be made different if one desires. It is not unusual to see almost the same window fabrics throughout the small flat. It gives an effect less scattered and fragmentary than when various and varying materials are used. If room walls are of different colors there should be a proper transition of color from one room to another—not too distinct a shock to the eye. Otherwise there is an expression of overstimulation.

Many a room that is in a dull monotone can be enlivened by the addition of small objects that are colorful—reading lamps of soft olive green or parchment shades painted over with gay figures, or mantel ornaments that prove to be the exact medium of transformation.

Furniture, as well as colors, throw out their suggestions of comfort or discomfort. Climate and season must be considered. Reed furniture and wicker suggest coolness; therefore they are not desirable for the living room of the winter home. Heavy velours and tapestries are not appropriate for the warm climate. Neither for summer. Therefore they should be covered with cool linens or chintz as soon as the robins arrive.

If your walls are of solid color and plain, your rugs can be decorative; if your wall paper is "fawncy," keep your rugs plain.

Avoid striking contrasts. A dining room with white woodwork and a red rug is so highly keyed that one finds no suggestion of restfulness there. How much sweeter is the room done in soft mauves, taupes, and yellows.

Comfort, beauty, and repose. Without these elements no house or apartment can be really attractive, either to occupant or guest.

Answers to Inquiries.

M. A. O.: Use either a box lounge or a day bed in your room. Have a bookcase or shelves built in. Buy two brown wicker chairs, and cushion them in figured chintz. Have a valance of the same chintz at the window top over plain voile curtains. Let the walls and the ground work of the chintz be a neutralized buff color.

* *

E. I. L.: Yes, silk gauze is durable and will wash. Tan and blue striped linen would be nice for the slip covers. Use the small prayer rug at doorway between living and dining room. Your friends were mistaken. Delicately woven rugs are often reinforced by a lining of felt, not burlap. Use a little remnant of brocade on your library table.

M. A. S.: Use changeable peacock blue and olive green velvet, or velvet figured in these two colors for your portiere. For your windows use straw colored silk gauze made into upper and lower sash curtains.

* *

L. S.: To begin with, there was no circassian walnut in the time of Chippendale. It might be attractive in your bedroom to have a small figured paper in what is known as chintz pattern. The figures could be in rose, old blue, and mustard yellow on a pale ash tone with a carpet in gray of a tint known as elephant breath. If you will write to any of the big book stores, at your request they will send you a list of books covering the subject about which you wish to learn, together with the prices of books.

A. E. N.: There is no objection to having a linen piece on the tea cart tray, but do not keep the tea service on the tray when it is not in use.

* *

M. C. R.: Paper in light gray two tone stripe would suit your room. Have cretonne curtains printed on a ground the color of the side wall. Parchment shades are popular. Use a brown two tone carpet on your stairway.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

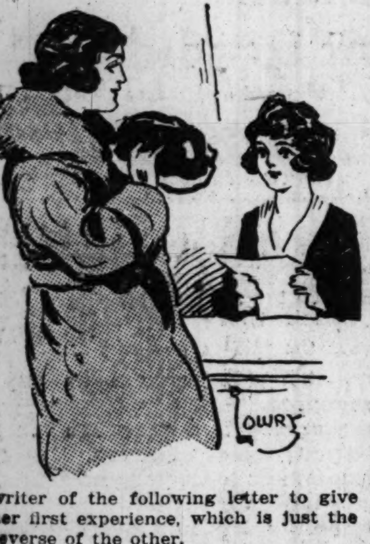
HER FIRST DAY.

A GIRL'S first days in a business office are not always filled with woe and discomfort, I am happy to say. The telling in this column a few weeks ago of a business girl's unhappy experience in a new position, when she was sorely tried by the snubs and coldness of the other girls in the office, inspired the writer of the following letter to give her first experience, which is just the reverse of the other.



The letter is an interesting one, as it expresses the appreciation and gratitude of the new girl for a bit of help or encouragement from the more experienced employés:

"Dear Miss King: Several weeks ago you made a plea to older employés to be a little more thoughtful of the newcomer in the office by giving to her the help and encouragement needed. The experience of the girl referred to may not be uncommon, but because mine has been just the opposite I would like to tell you about it, so that the girl about to start on her business career may know that all girls do not have to go through the awkwardness of the first days in misery.

"The story of the other girl has made me realize how fortunate my initiation into the business world was.

"It was a year ago that I started to work. While I was still in business college a position was offered to me, and, as it seemed an excellent opportunity, I decided to take it before finishing my course. I was almost through with the course and felt confident that I could manage the position all right. My teachers and classmates, though, tried to discourage me from leaving before the scheduled time, and, although I did not hesitate about taking the position, I was unusually nervous starting out.

"There were three other girls in the office, all of whom had been employed there for several years and so were familiar with all the work and the routine. When I arrived at the office my employer wasn't there, but one of the girls took me in charge, and, after showing me all through the offices so that I could learn the layout of the place, introduced me to everybody. She then wrote out for me the name and location of the people in the office and explained my work to me in detail.

"The first day I was given enough work to do to keep me occupied, but it was mostly simple tasks. When my employer arrived he came out to speak to me and told me that there would be splendid opportunities for me, and he felt sure that I would make good.

"When it came time for lunch one of the girls asked me if I would care to go with her. That pleased me more than anything that could have happened to me that day, as I was beginning to feel terribly lonely among all the strangers. During the luncheon period my new associate did her best to explain the system and routine of the office, and to outline my own work in general for me. As she chatted to me during our lunch all my nervousness wore away and I went back to the office not with the feeling of dread that I expected, but with relief.

"The next morning more tasks were explained to me, but so carefully that I had no difficulty in grasping any of the details, and instead of everything seeming hard and irksome I was surprised to find myself going through my work with ease and as though I had been used to it always.

"I realize that if everything had not been made so clear to me and if the girls hadn't taken such pains to make me feel at home with them I would have blundered through those first days in misery.

"I only wish that all beginners in the business world had as fortunate an experience as I had. T. R. L."

Made a Pretty Somersault.

I was a rural mail carrier and drove a little two wheeled sulky. One day in pulling up to a mail box my horse got too far away for me to reach the mail box. While the horse backed up he became frightened by a piece of paper and bolted. I just made a pretty somersault over backward, with the mail scattering to the four winds. Of course the act had to be witnessed by several farmers near by. F. H. T.

All Could Hear.

One night while in company with a young woman I attended the theater and during the intermission I was compelled to talk loud in order to make myself heard above the music. I thus became so engrossed that when the music suddenly stopped and the curtain went up I realized the fact that I could be heard all over the house much to the amusement of the audience and my own embarrassment. C. M. G.

Got Quick Service.

One rainy afternoon I stepped into a busy grocery store to get a can of tomatoes. After I had been standing there about two minutes I noticed every one smiling, so I smiled, too. A clerk waited on me long before my turn. I walked out and was about to put my umbrella up and found to my embarrassment that I had stood in the store with the umbrella over my head. H. S.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women as well as men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep in the pink of condition. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

A FRIEND IN NEED

I want to be the medium through which the friend indeed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be glad to be of service to you. Please write on but one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to "The Tribune," but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

By Sally Joy Brown.

Clothes for Boys.

"First a word of appreciation for the splendid work you direct. It is worth living for, isn't it? I have an outgrown suit for a lad about 14. This is a first long pants suit. Also two or three khaki outing shirts for boy about 12, three good suits of underwear for boy of 14, and a Boy Scout suit and knapsack. I have something else for which there may be need and that is time, which I will be glad to spend reading to some sick child or invalid, either in a hospital or private home, unless too far away. I love to read aloud and entertain invalids, old people, or convalescent children. E. K."

Thank you for your kind words of appreciation. I assure you we are deeply grateful to you for your many [illegible] offers.

Marks on Brass and Gilt.

"Could you inform me as to how I might remove marks from brass or gilt ornaments? I. D."

To remove marks and discolorations from brass or gilt ornaments, dissolve a piece of soft soap the size of an egg in a pint of boiling water, then add a tablespoon of ammonia. Wring a cloth out of the solution and gently wipe the article to be cleaned, then sponge it with care, using cold water. Finally dry with a soft cloth.

In Need of Clothing.

"I am 16 years old and a junior in high school. As I am very poor, I am working my way through school. My parents seem to think that I ought to give up school and find work as a domestic in some family. But I want an education. I have begun a struggle for it and I mean to stick to it. Thus far everything has gone well, and I have succeeded. But this year I have to appear in a high school reception, a baccalaureate address, and a class play, and I have no clothes that will fit any of these occasions. Do you think you could find some one who could help me? I am 5 feet 2 inches, weigh about 135, have dark brown hair and blue eyes, and wear 6 or 6½ shoe. I can sew very well, so I can make over anything any one would kindly send me. E. H."

The address of "Miss Sixteen" will be sent upon request.

"Setting" the Color.

"Could you tell me how to keep the color in black stockings? J. E."

Wash them with soap free from soda and add a teaspoon of vinegar to the last rinsing water.

Lift Off Corns!
Doesn't Hurt a Bit

With your fingers! You lift sore, touchy corns and calluses right off after applying a few drops of Freezone. Really! No pain! No soreness! So easy. Don't keep corns another day! Corns are needless.

Freezone is the remarkable discovery of a Cincinnati genius—wonderful!

Freezone removes hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes, also the "hard skin" and painful calluses on bottom of feet. Just think! Every corn and callus gone from your feet without a twinge of pain or soreness.

Tiny bottles cost only few cents at drug stores. Magic! No humbug!

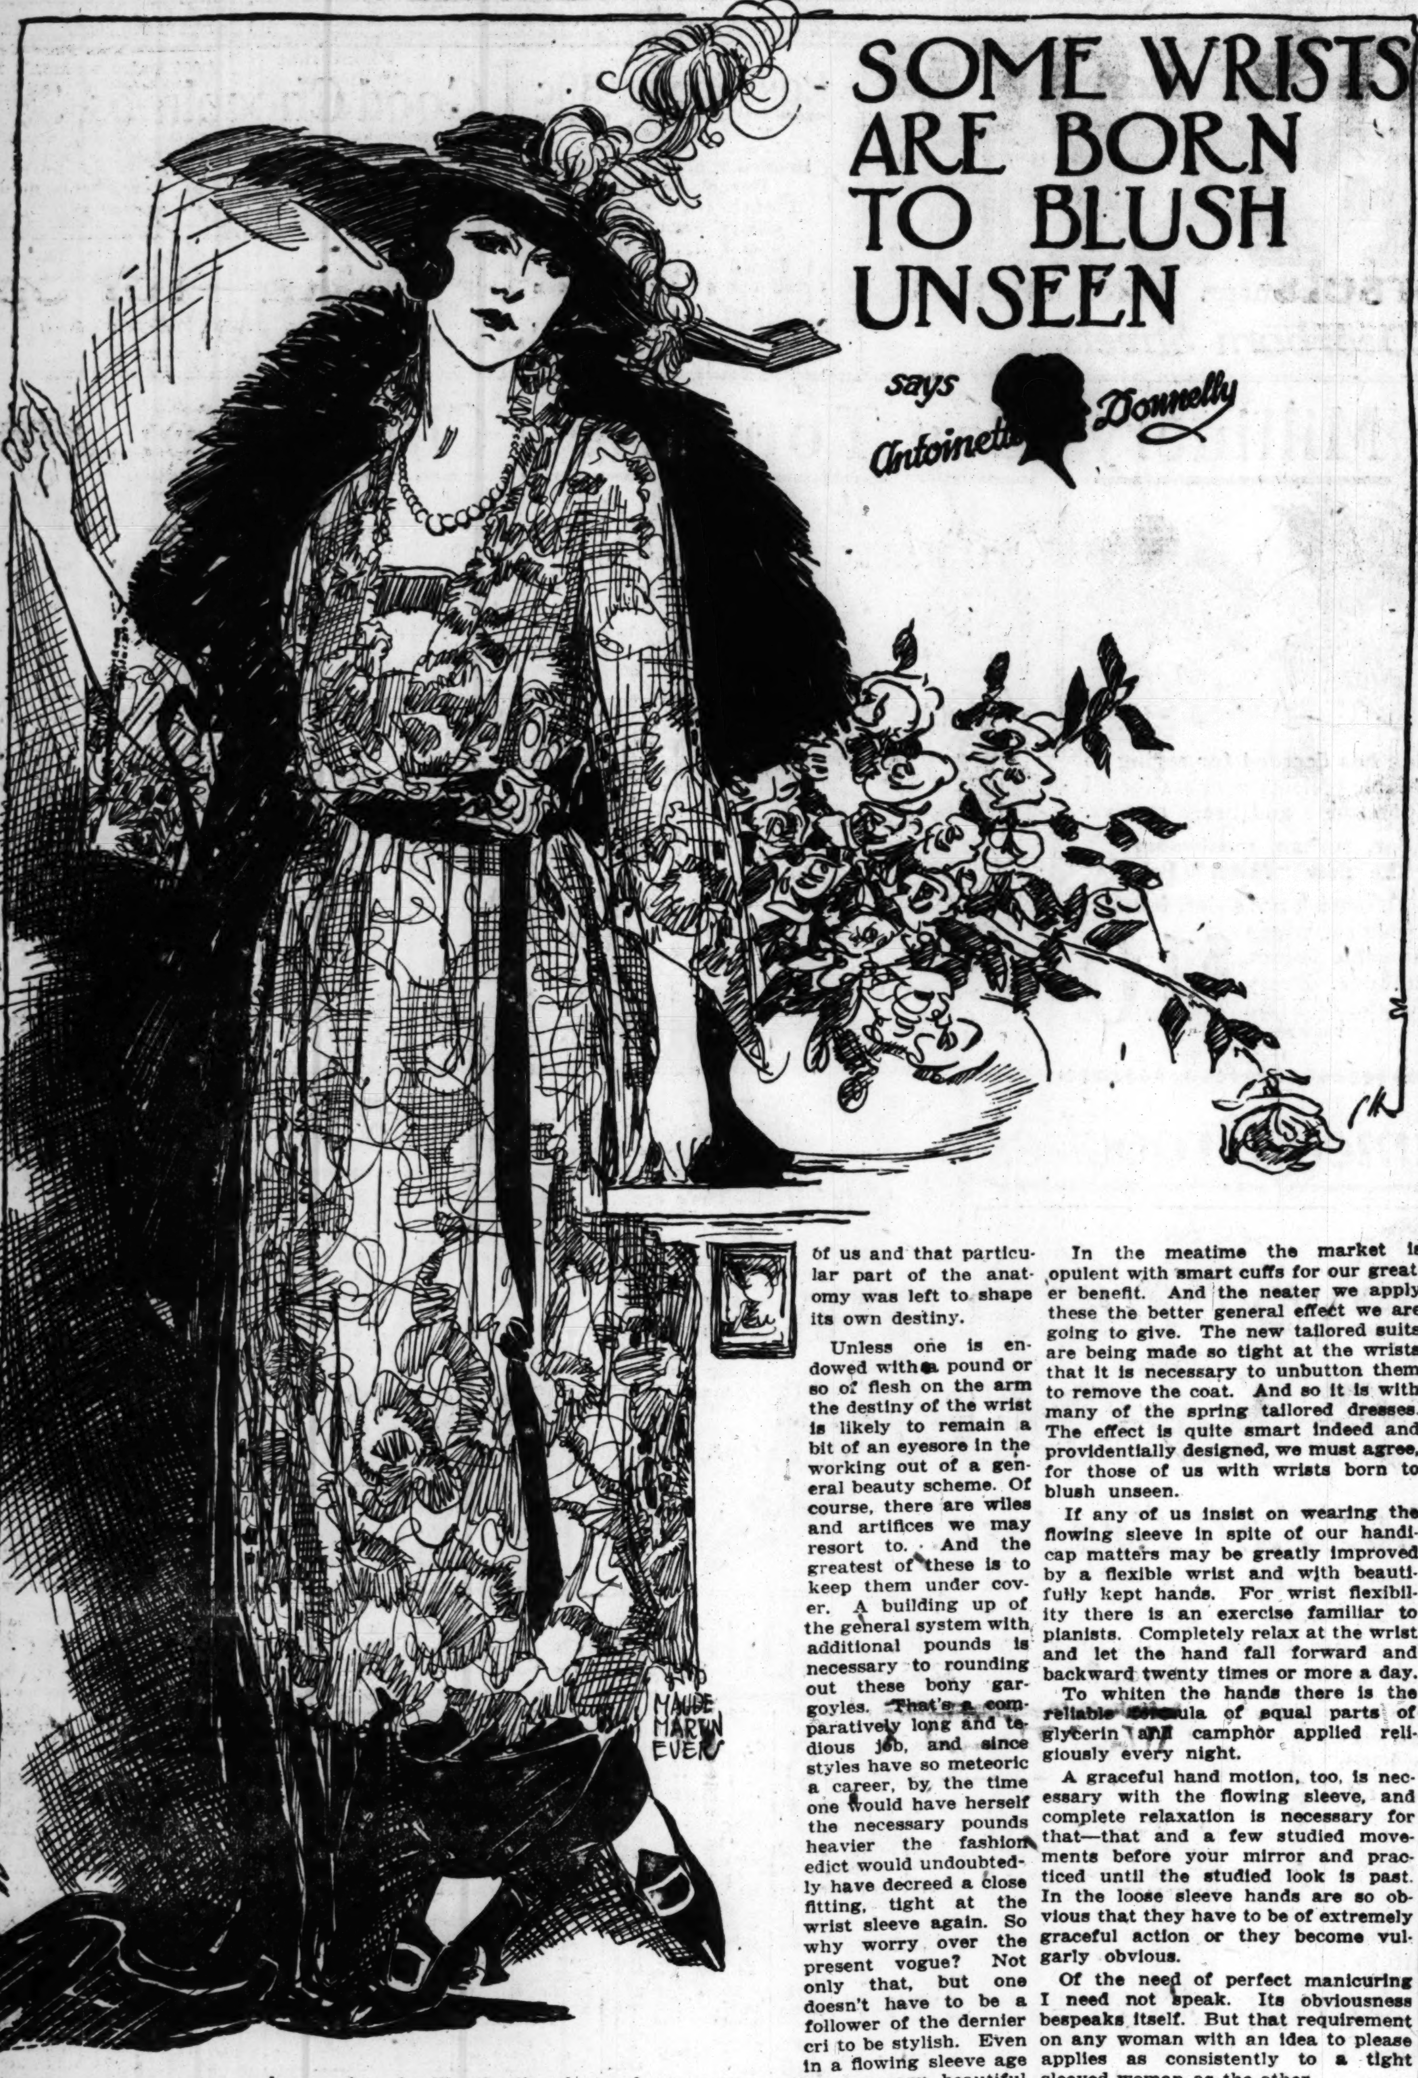
SOME WRISTS ARE BORN TO BLUSH UNSEEN

says Antoinette Donnelly



What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Or, what is your beauty ill? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, an exercise, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly "Chicago Sunday Tribune."

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

THERE are wrists that make you happy and wrists that make you sad; for the first, the new sleeves are snappy; for the other, too, too bad.

Or, one might change the tune to "Flow gently, sweet chiffon," over the bony wrists, for like the time honored modest violet they're born to blush unseen, and should be encouraged to remain in a quiet seclusion.

The new flowing and bell shaped sleeves might have been born of a Hun caprice, so wantonly destructive are they on hands and wrists not finely modeled. But, of course, they were designed for the finely modeled hands and forearms and for them only. But there breathe few feminine folk with souls so dead that once getting a new sleeve vogue into their heads won't try it out.

Of all the trying fashions there's none so full of trial and disappointment as the threatened invasion of the three-quarter wide mouthed sleeve. Viewing arms and hands as a general output, one might be excused for believing that there was a hurry-up job made on most of us and that particular part of the anatomy was left to shape its own destiny.

Unless one is endowed with a pound or so of flesh on the arm the destiny of the wrist is likely to remain a bit of an eyesore in the working out of a general beauty scheme. Of course, there are wiles and artifices we may resort to. And the greatest of these is to keep them under cover. A building up of the general system with additional pounds is necessary to rounding out these bony gargoyles. That's a comparatively long and tedious job, and since styles have so meteoric a career, by the time one would have herself the necessary pounds heavier the fashion edict would undoubtedly have decreed a close fitting, tight at the wrist sleeve again. So why worry over the present vogue? Not only that, but one doesn't have to be a follower of the dernier cri to be stylish. Even in a flowing sleeve age one without the necessary beautiful arms should be individual and stick to the thing that looks best on her. One can't offer a much more advantageous remedy for the beautyless wrist and hand than to keep as much of them out of sight as is consistent with reason.

Cocoa butter applications and massaging of the wrists are productive of little if any improvement, in a short time at least.

But there are sleeves on the fashion pages that aim to please the women who mourn their inability to wear the wide, filmy thing that is lovely on their more favorably modeled sister. And it is whispered in polite bureaus of style information that the old directoire gown of a decade ago is due for an early revival. Which news will be heralded with nothing short of the armistice joy by us bony wristed sisters.

In the meatime the market is opulent with smart cuffs for our greater benefit. And the neater we apply these the better general effect we are going to give. The new tailored suits are being made so tight at the wrists that it is necessary to unbutton them to remove the coat. And so it is with many of the spring tailored dresses. The effect is quite smart indeed and providentially designed, we must agree, for those of us with wrists born to blush unseen.

If any of us insist on wearing the flowing sleeve in spite of our handicap matters may be greatly improved by a flexible wrist and with beautifully kept hands. For wrist flexibility there is an exercise familiar to pianists. Completely relax at the wrist and let the hand fall forward and backward twenty times or more a day.

To whiten the hands there is the reliable formula of equal parts of glycerin and camphor applied religiously every night.

A graceful hand motion, too, is necessary with the flowing sleeve, and complete relaxation is necessary for that—that and a few studied movements before your mirror and practiced until the studied look is past. In the loose sleeve hands are so obvious that they have to be of extremely graceful action or they become vulgarly obvious.

Of the need of perfect manicuring I need not speak. Its obviousness bespeaks itself. But that requirement on any woman with an idea to please applies as consistently to a tight sleeved woman as the other.

Rules for manicuring and general care of the hands I shall gladly send to any of you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

MISS A.: I DON'T BELIEVE you're homely at all—that is, if you sent me your own photograph. It's cunning. I cannot see where you'd improve your hair style. Send me your height and age, and I'll tell you what you should weigh.

BLONDY: A GOOD CASTILE soap would not cause brown spots on your face. I think some internal disorder must be responsible for them, not soap applications. It may be a form of skin disease and again it may be evidence of some liver trouble. You should see a physician if the trouble is increasing.

Strange Weddings Contest.

Tell us about the strangest wedding you have attended—and the funniest. There's scarcely a wedding but has some humorous details. Tell your experience and that of friends. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on strange and humorous happenings at ceremonies. Manuscripts cannot be returned. Write on one side of the page. Address Strange Weddings Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Many Useful Presents.

We attended a wedding in the country and after the ceremony we all filed in to see the presents, which were spread out in an adjoining bedroom. Among the many useful presents there was a crate of chickens, a pig in a box, and a calf tied to the bedpost. J. S.

A Bill for Furniture.

Just before my wedding I handed my friend who was acting as best man a package and a plain envelope explaining to him that the package was my gift to him, while the envelope contained the minister's pay. After the wedding supper the minister handed me an envelope, which I opened and found to contain the statement from the furniture store for our furnishings, while down in my coat pocket I found the envelope intended for the minister. But by that time every one in the house had caught on to my blunder and even to this day I still hear of it.

Jolly Affair of Long Ago.

In the '60s I attended a wedding in western Illinois that would be considered a strange affair nowadays. The bridegroom wore overalls, hickory shirt, and cowhide boots. The bride was attired in a faded gingham dress and was barefoot. The ring was whittled by the bridegroom out of a bone button. The ceremony was performed by a traveling evangelist who received a pointer pup in payment.

The wedding feast consisted of salt pork, potatoes, cabbage, and corn bread. The bride's health was drunk in coffee made of parched corn. Every one was jolly and enjoyed themselves hugely.

Twenty years later the bridegroom represented his district in congress and his wife and daughters were considered welcome additions to Washington society. K. O.

All Smiles Now.

The funniest wedding I ever saw was my sister's. Her fiancé—then a soldier at Camp Grant—rushed into our house one morning last March dragging a frightened looking minister behind him.

"Marry me at once," he cried. "I leave for New York in thirty minutes."

My sister stood aghast for a minute but she loved him and she was game. Her hair was in curl papers, she wore a loose dragging wrapper, her hands were still wet from the dishpan, and I looked even worse.

Our washerwoman was called from the basement and the ceremony proceeded. It was soon over and the bridegroom departed, leaving behind a weeping bride.

However, the tears are gone and a pretty bride with a well stocked trousseau awaits the bridegroom in New York, all smiles. H. E. J.

More to Come.

At a wedding not so long ago the telegrams were being read while the guests ate the wedding supper. This was one of them which brought a laugh: "Many happy returns of this day."

The message of the Annual March Dress Goods Sale, which begins here in so conspicuous a manner tomorrow morning, is fraught with news of the greatest importance to both the public shopping with a new keenness for values, and to the countless thousands who act on Fashion's mandates first of all—new weaves aplenty—new colorings, though many are of sombre hues—by the scores—really so many that there are more than the quickest eye can count, or take in their individual beauties. A sale that holds the charm of the unexpected, because it always unfolds spring's choicest fabrics with a thrill for women who delight in the beautiful—more watchful than ever in these times of uncertain values you can come to the March Sale, assured that the values are unequaled today, and from a most careful study of the market conditions for the next few months to come.

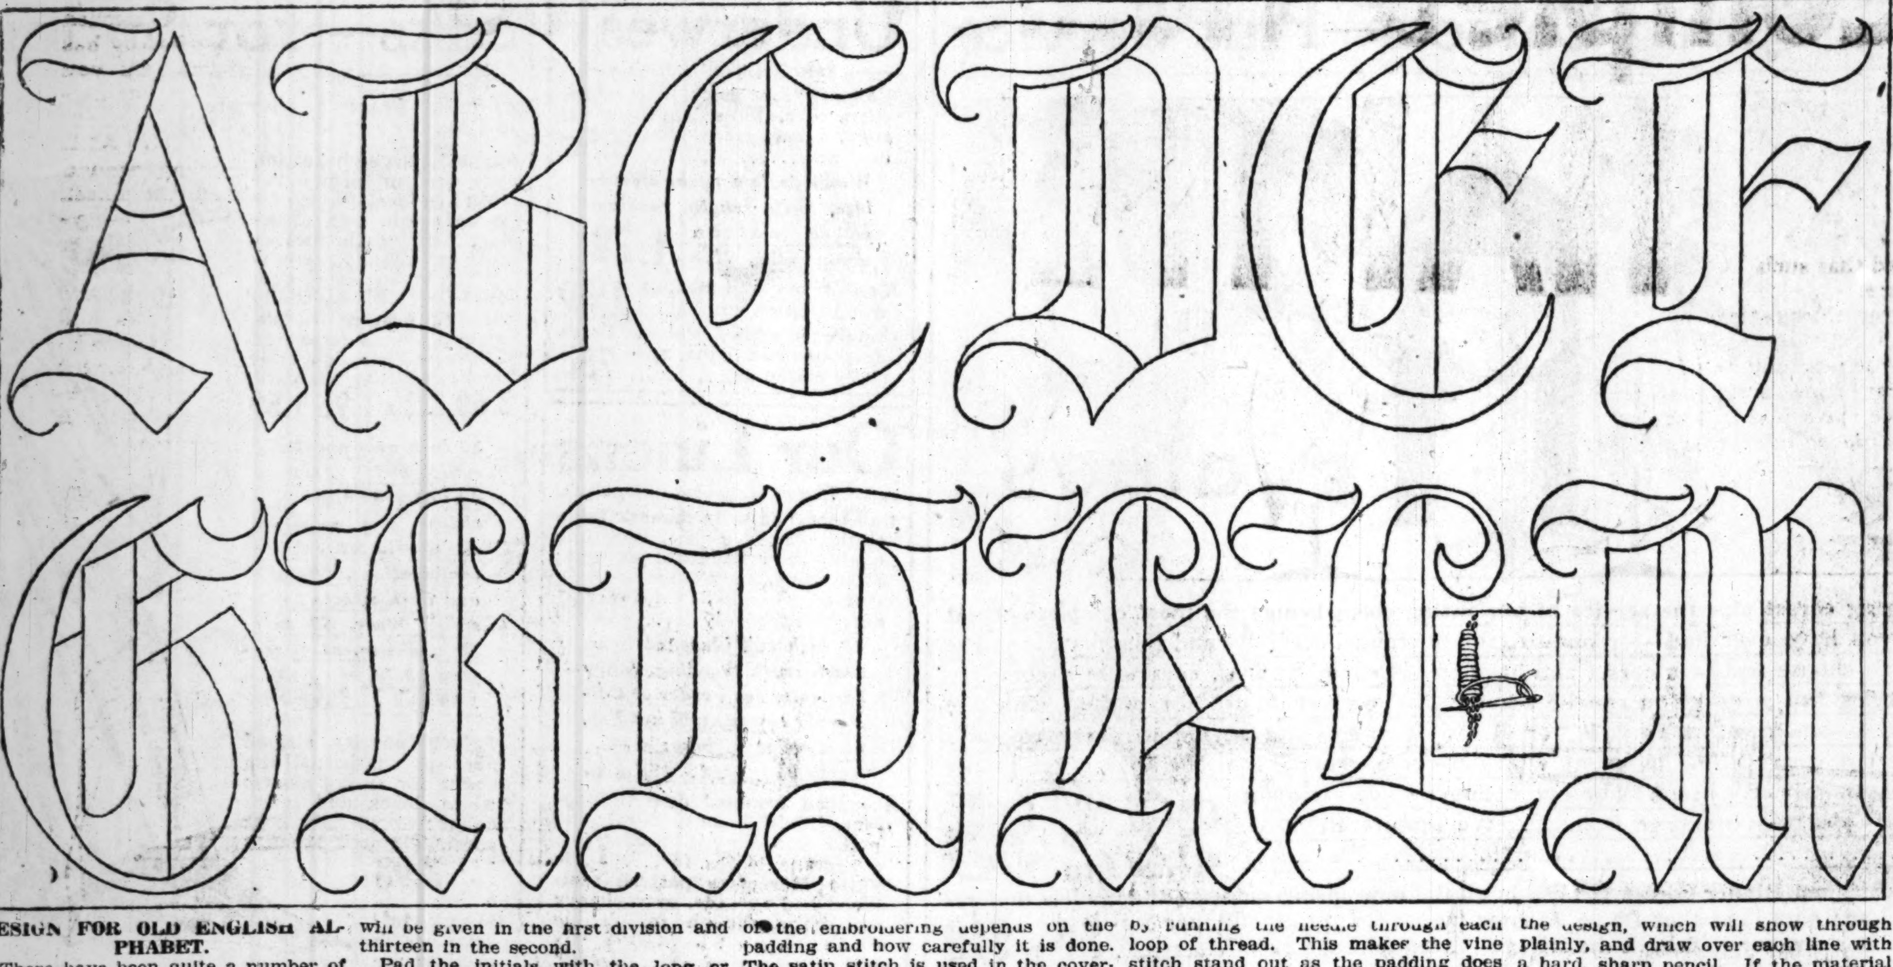
Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde



DESIGN FOR OLD ENGLISH ALPHABET.

There have been quite a number of requests for an alphabet in the last few weeks, especially the Old English lettering. The size of the initials compels their division. Thirteen letters will be given in the first division and thirteen in the second.

Pad the initials with the long or darning stitch, arranging the padding so that the heaviest portion comes in the center of the widest points of the letter. The larger part of the success of the embroidering depends on the padding and how carefully it is done. The satin stitch is used in the covering and the vine or outline stitch in the single lines. A good thing to do with the single lines is to come back over the line just stitched and restitch by running the needle through each loop of thread. This makes the vine stitch stand out as the padding does the other part of the lettering.

To transfer the letter design follow these directions: If the material is sheer, the easiest way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp pencil. If the material is heavy, buy a piece of impression paper, the kind that does not rub off, lay it on the material, place the design over it, and trace with a hard pencil.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Critical.

Have you a perplexing love affair, in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IF your birthday falls during the week beginning today you are under the influence of the sign Pisces, meaning the fishes. It is a watery fruitful sign, indicating a pure, limpid soul, a tremendous sympathy with nature, and a scattering of vital force.

You are cautious and careful when not under excitement. If you are reading an interesting book no one knows that you are in the house, and if you are disturbed at this time you are off like a rabbit for a new squatting place.

You are very "slow to wrath" but sometimes you get into a towering rage—only for a moment. If you are in a hurry to get into bed, you will tear a refractory shoe lacing into bits, well aware that you cannot find a new one the next morning within ten miles. But the next morning you sit patiently down and tie the bits together and somehow manage to make it do for the time.

You are sensitive and proud and desperately afraid of ridicule. You often cruelly hurt the feelings of others in your frantic efforts to save your own. Your heritage is a pure devoted interior love nature and a generous and loyal faith in mankind. Unfortunately this faith and generosity is too often betrayed and abused, and as you grow older you withdraw into a shell of indifference and cynicism to protect the natural sensitiveness of your nature.

Conventionality does not disturb you much, for if its demands crowd you, you quietly push them over. But you are so absolutely good natured about it that no one takes any offense.

You are fond of asking questions, curiosity being one of your strong points, and unless possessed of enough tact to perceive your mistakes, you can make yourself unpleasant. You are an inattentive listener and think little of breaking into a discourse with something entirely irrelevant, showing your attention far away. When you have learned the value of silence you are far on the road to success, but your faculty for seeing the faults of everything and criticizing so freely spoils a fine nature, loses you friends, discourages your associations, and sometimes ruins your happiness.

You are strongly drawn toward the occult and the mysterious, and study its teachings with deep interest. Nothing in statement or theory along this line frightens you much. You do not run away from a shadow, but rather incline to see what causes it. Not naturally secretive, you can keep all important business, whether your own or intrusted to your custody, under lock and key. You are fairly intellectual and a fluent, rapid talker. You are a nice sort of fellow, or, if a woman, sweet, lovable, and kittenish. You are fond of water sport, especially yachting. In fact, you do not care so much for steamboat travel.

You have many chances for happy, congenial friendships, and so you ought to find easily your conjugal mate among Cancer, June 23-July 22; Virgo, Aug. 24-Sept. 23; Capricorn, Dec. 23-Jan. 20; Aquarius, Jan. 21-Feb. 19, or Taurus, April 21-May 21.

Your most fortunate weeks are those beginning Nov. 12 and Aug. 5; your colors are gray, emerald green, pink, white and black; birthstones, chrysolite and moonstone.

Covered with Powder.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a boy of 19. I have been going with a girl two years younger than myself. She is a very nice, respectable girl, and my parents think a lot of her. So do I, but she is always covered with powder and paint. Now, I know she does not realise her mistake, as she is not in the least common or rude. If you were me, would you hint to her that she is wrong? I hate to hurt her feelings, but I know she is not really at fault, thinking she is making herself attractive. I hope you will give me advice as I am often ashamed of her looks. L."

I think I would be perfectly frank with the girl if I were in your place about her using powder and paint. A little powder to take the shine off her nose is all right, but that look as if the face had been dipped in a flour barrel which so many girls seem to effect to their great disadvantage is horrible. The use of rouge on one so young should be thoroughly discouraged. Perhaps if you were to tell her how much prettier she is without the cosmetics, she would be more apt to change than if you were to openly criticize her. She might be headstrong and resent your dictating to her, but for her sake as well as your own happiness, you ought to try to persuade her away from its use.

Can't Get a Gentleman Friend.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 19 years and it seems as though I can't get a gentleman friend. Have gone out with different fellows once or twice and they still consider me a friend as ever, but never call up or ask me out again. Am considered good looking, have good habits, talk refined, dress neat and stylish. Please tell me what you think is wrong in your estimation. Will be anxiously looking for an answer.

"DOTTIE."

You seem to have all the qualifications for a popular girl, Dottie, and I, too, wonder what is wrong. Perhaps you are self-centered and want to talk about yourself to the exclusion of the more popular topic—the other person. Perhaps again you are too formal and make a man afraid of you. Perhaps you may be overexacting or perhaps there are some other perhapses. Suppose you turn the light on your shortcomings rather than on your good qualities. Therein you may find the trouble. Clothes and looks alone will not make the popular girl.

It Worries Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: Would you please tell me how I could find out a question from my boy friend? He tells me that he has heard something about me and he will not tell me. It worries me somewhat, as I know of nothing I have done that was not right.

"PAT."

If you had done anything that was not right you would know about it. There would be consciousness about it somehow. This being the case, the thing to do is just simply to forget the boy's remarks. There are troubles enough in the world without borrowing additional ones over actions of which you have no sense of guilt.

You're Too Young, Chas.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in need of a little advice. I am 15 years old and will be 16 in May. I have been corresponding with two girls, one of whom will be 17 in June and the other will be 16 in March. I met the one who will be 16 at a party one night, and this was the first time I ever met her, while the other I went to school with for about four years. Which would you advise me to keep corresponding with, or to drop out corresponding with? CHARLES."

Well, Charles, I'd say you were nothing if not ambitious. I predict a great career for you with the ladies, starting in so young and so troubled! Don't you think, honestly now, that it would be much better for you at 15 to be making the most of your studies and of your athletics so that when you get to a really eligible age the girls will think you are a wonder? If you're going to clutter your mind all up with girls now, you're going to crowd out the study space and by the time you're a full grown man you will be a silly sentimentalist, than which there is nothing girls are likely to laugh more unkindly over.

THE WEDDING CEREMONY.

THE main plans for home and church weddings are much the same except that in the former it is often—in fact, almost always—necessary to resort to the inventing of some devices (such as the improvisation of the altar, aisles, etc.) found ready for use in the latter case.

The invitations are usually engraved in both instances, the wording practically identical; "at home" cards and cards to the reception inclosed when desired. It is not essential that all guests at the ceremony be invited to the breakfast or supper or reception afterward, only as many as are wanted and can be accommodated.

The bride's father bears the expenses of the wedding, with the following exceptions, which fall to the bridegroom's share: The wedding ring, the flowers for the bride and her attendants, the minister's fee, and his conveyance to and from the church, the best man seeing to the last two for him.

If the affair be small and more or less informal the bride may wear a suit (with hat and gloves); otherwise a white frock is correct, with or without a veil as she pleases, although in some churches it is an established custom that her head be covered. This dress is usually of silk, satin or Georgette crêpe, or, if in the late spring or summer, it may be of some lighter material. After half past 6 in the afternoon she generally wears an evening gown, but before that hour it may vary greatly in style according to her choice.

Her father or nearest male relative gives the bride away. If she has no one to do this she may ask any older family friend to officiate. Failing this her mother may do so, but only in the last extremity.

The order for the bridal party to enter the church is as follows: The minister takes his place in the chancel, entering from a small door near that end of the church; next the bridegroom and best man come in from the same door and stand at the right of the chancel steps. Then the ushers walk up the aisle and form a group with the other two men; after them walk the bridesmaids and maid of honor, who take their places opposite the men, to the left of the chancel steps. Last comes the bride on her father's left arm. They join the bride's attendants, the father stepping back to sit with his wife when he has given his daughter away.

The bride and bridegroom stand in the center of the group, facing the minister. After the ceremony they turn and walk down the aisle, followed by their attendants, the maid of honor and best man leading. After the young people, the parents of the bride and bridegroom are the first to leave the church.

These same directions may, with some slight alterations, be used in the case of a home wedding, as is easily to be seen. I shall be happy to explain more fully any parts that bother prospective brides and bridegrooms if they will write me inclosing addressed, stamped envelopes.

B. B. B.: Yes, a note of thanks should be written to every one who sent you a wedding gift, except the members of your immediate family, whom you may thank in person. Make these notes sincerely personal expressions of your gratitude and be sure in each instance to mention specifically the present and your appreciation of it.

I. B.: If you will write again, inclosing an addressed, stamped envelope, I shall be happy to send you a list of reliable books on etiquette.

* *

W. D. F.: If you wish to know the young woman better why not telephone her and ask if you may call some evening? She will probably wish to have her parents meet you before she accepts any invitations from you. That is the way careful girls are brought up. If you will write me again, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope, I will mail you the list of books on etiquette which I consider the most reliable.

C. P. P.: "My dear Miss Smith" is generally held to be more formal than "Dear Miss Smith," the former being more widely in use in communications of a business nature.

Tillie was leaving to go over to her little chum's house, when she suddenly turned in the door and called to her mother, "Mamma, has baby brother got any teeth yet?" When asked why she wished to know, she replied, "So I can tell Mabel's mother. She always asks me if he has any teeth yet when I goes over to play with Mabel." MRS. L. S.

When I went to see my little nephew who was ill I found him cheerfully counting the pennies that fond relatives had given him as the price for medicine taking.

"I'm so sorry, dear, to find you sick," I said to him.

"Well, aunty," was his optimistic answer, "see my money—it isn't as bad as if I were sick and poor both." M. O.

Carrie was invited to a party. Her mother cautioned her not to begin eating her goodies until all around the table had been helped. Carrie was honored with the first helping to ice cream. In a few moments she said: "Excuse me for eating my ice cream before it melts. I enjoys it best while it is freezed." MRS. L. S.

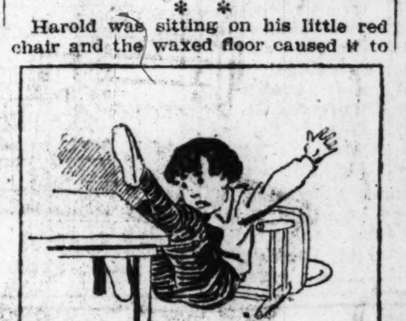
Harold was sitting on his little red chair and the waxed floor caused it to slip from under him. I heard wails and ran to the rescue.



"What's the matter, dear?" I asked.

Maggie always liked to talk over the telephone; one morning before she was dressed, aunty called up and after talking to mamma asked to speak to Maggie, but she positively refused to come to the phone, and when mamma asked her why she would not talk to aunty over the phone she said, "I's 'shamed to talk when I isn't dressed." Mother! If Your Child's Tongue Is Coated

If Cross, Feverish, Constipated, Bilious, and the Stomach out of Order, give "California Syrup of Figs."

A laxative today saves a bilious child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste; then the liver grows sluggish, and the stomach is disordered.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, with tainted breath, restless, doesn't eat heartily, or has a cold, sore throat, or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is a perfectly harmless dose, and in a few hours all this constipation-poison, sour bile and fermenting waste-matter will gently move out of the bowels, and you will have a healthy, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of genuine "California Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," made by the California Fig Syrup Co., which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle.

but little of this sort of to bring Mabel to the end of endurance. One day her sisters, driven over from the neigh farm, found her weeping her heart away. She had come home from school to find Bob and Violet off for a ride. Naturally explanations were demanded by the sisters, and the whole story came out. Mabel's family had suspected her unhappiness for some time.

When the sisters heard the full extent of Mabel's trouble they insisted on putting an end to her humiliation at once. They braved the ire of the mother by calmly packing up all of Mabel's belongings and stowing them away in the carriage. When everything was packed up they drove away with Mabel, thus ending her brief married life.

Imagine Bob's consternation to find his wife gone on his return! For, strange to say, in spite of acting such a cad, Bob still loved Mabel dearly —how much he only learned after he had lost her. In the months that followed Bob tried repeatedly to induce Mabel to return. But no persuasion on his part could bring her back. Her cup of bitterness had been too full for her to forget her grievance easily. Her family, too, kept her many wrongs continually in her mind.

By and by Mabel procured employment in a neighboring town, where she caught glimpses of Bob occasionally as he came to trade.

Mabel's family finally succeeded in talking her into the notion of getting a divorce. Mabel's father interviewed Bob on the subject, to whom the idea was distasteful. But when he saw that Mabel was sincere in her desire for a divorce, he acquiesced and agreed to arrange matters. To settle things finally, they found they were obliged to make a trip together to the county seat.

They made the trip in grim silence and transacted the necessary legal business without a friendly word. On the way back Bob asked Mabel if he might not sit beside her—just for a good-by ride. Mabel consented. It was really the first time they had been together alone since the day of their separation. With their hearts both brim full of love for each other explanations soon followed, apologies and protestations of love and devotion.

Mabel, however, refused to live with her mother-in-law and Bob upheld her. Then followed a most wonderful second courtship for Mabel while the new house was building.

After Mabel was settled in her new home the mother attempted to make up to her for everything she had suffered. And Mabel tried to be good to Bob's mother. For which she has always been thankful. For it was only one short year before the old lady passed away.

Your son, your brother, your husband, or your sweetheart in the service undoubtedly has told you some amusing incident that has occurred in his camp. Undoubtedly, too, there are ever so many stories originating in camp that are still untold. This contest is especially open to the soldier himself if he has a good camp story to tell. It is open also to every one who has been told a good camp story of actual happening. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. omen Find Clear Skin
n Simple Laxative

A sense of false modesty often prevents women from admitting that many of her ills and disorders are due primarily to constipation.

But women who know themselves have learned that headache remedies and beautifiers only cover the trouble but do not dislodge it.

What is needed is a remedy to move the bowels and stir up the torpid liver. An ever-increasing number of sensible women take a small dose of a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and sold by druggists under that name.

It will save a woman from the habitual use of headache remedies, skin lotions and similar makeshifts. Once the bowels are emptied and regulated, the headache and the pimples and blotches disappear. It is the rational, natural method.

A bottle of Syrup Pepsin lasts a family a long time, and all will find use for it from time to time. Thoughtful people are never without it in the house.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

PRICE AS ALWAYS
In spite of greatly increased laboratory costs due to the War, by sacrificing profits and absorbing war taxes we have maintained the price at which this family laxative has been sold by druggists for the past years. Two sizes— 50c and $1.00.

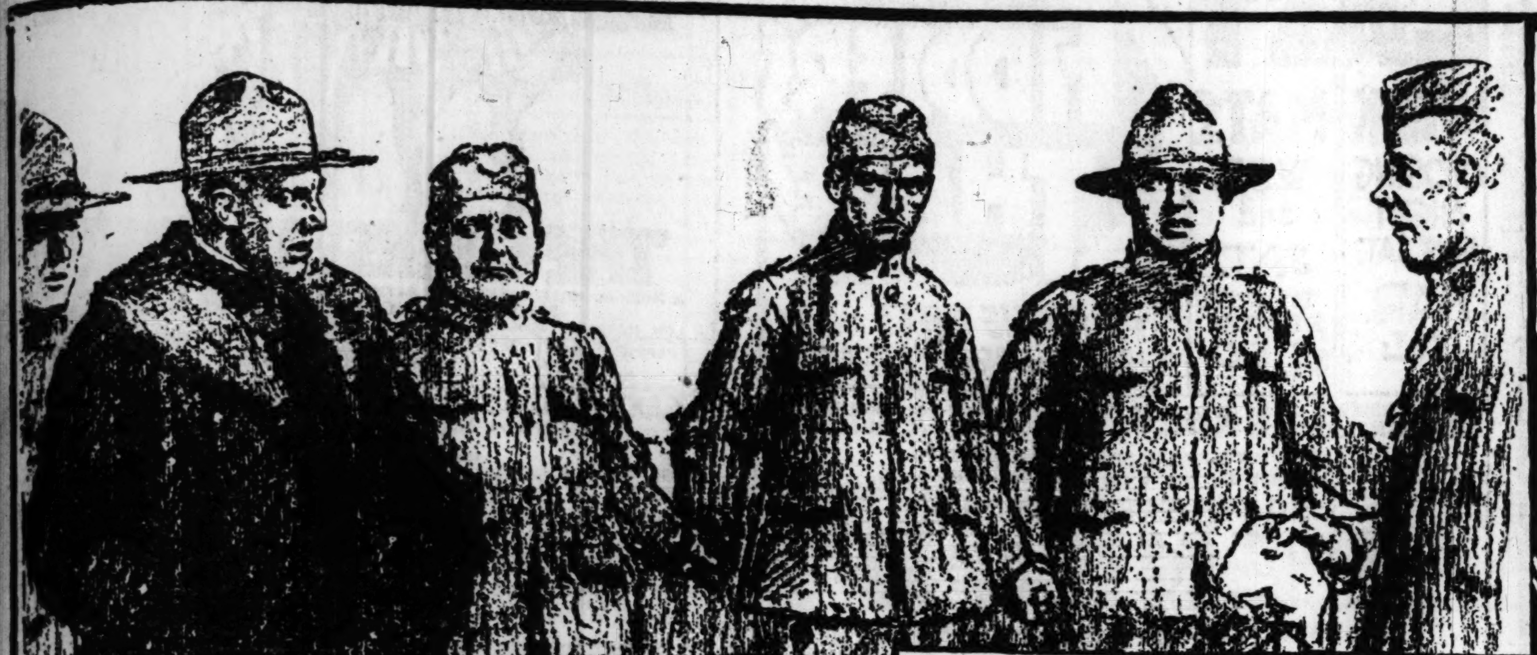
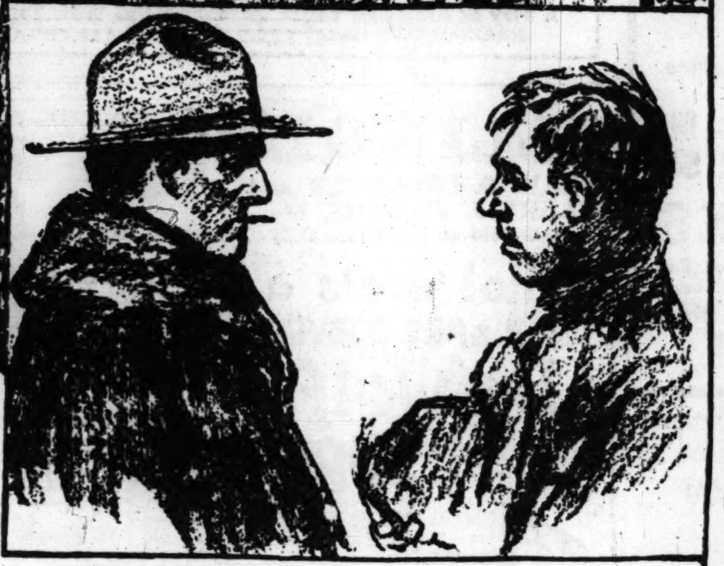
Among Us Mortals

The Demobilization Camp

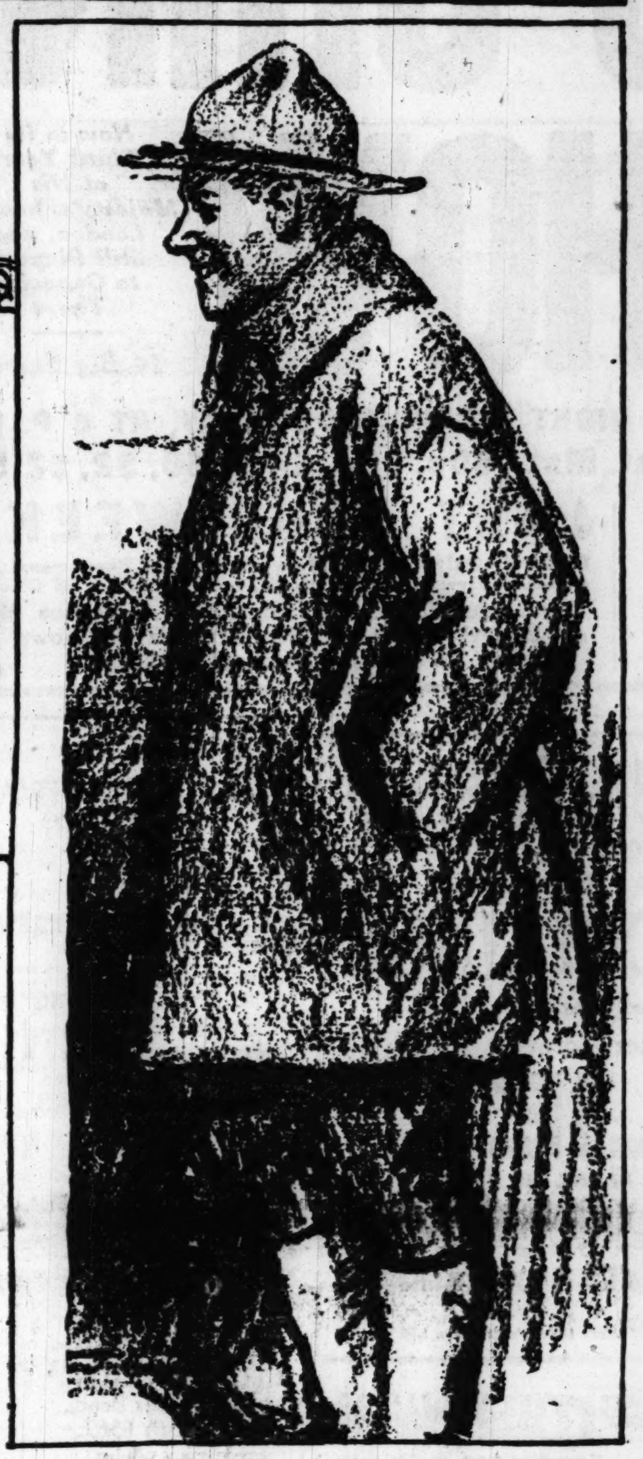
by W. E. HILL



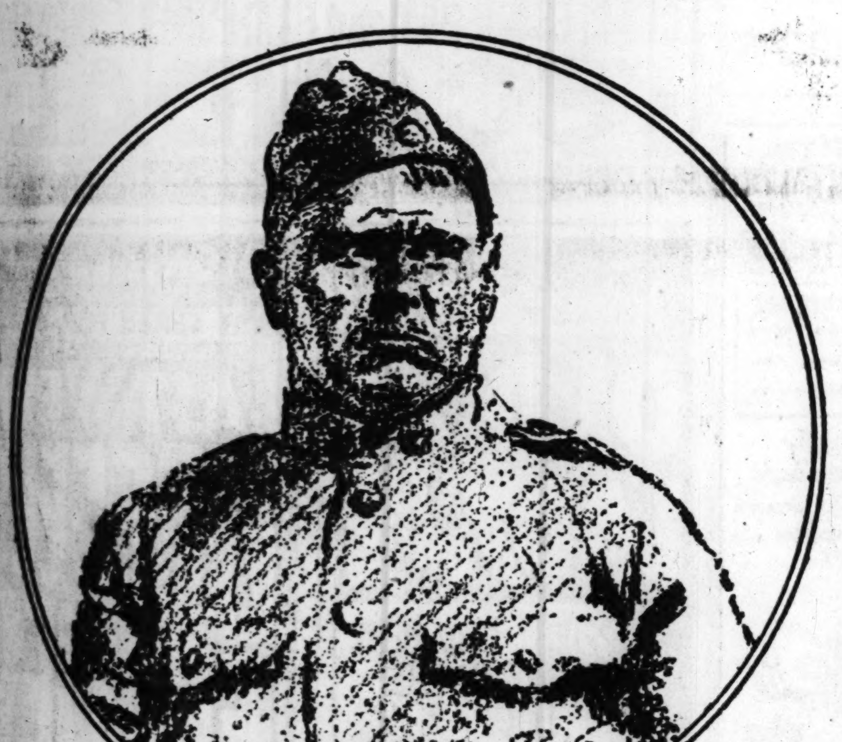
"Now, then, you men, snap into it!" Lieutenant Lovely has been detailed to take the depot brigade out on the parade ground to play games—to keep up the morale while the final papers are being made out at headquarters. There's no telling when they will be ready to sign, what with the two men who know all about making them out home on furlough. In the meantime Lieutenant Lovely, who was never very good at games, has started the men on "Drop the handkerchief." Some one in the crowd has just suggested a game of "Postoffice."



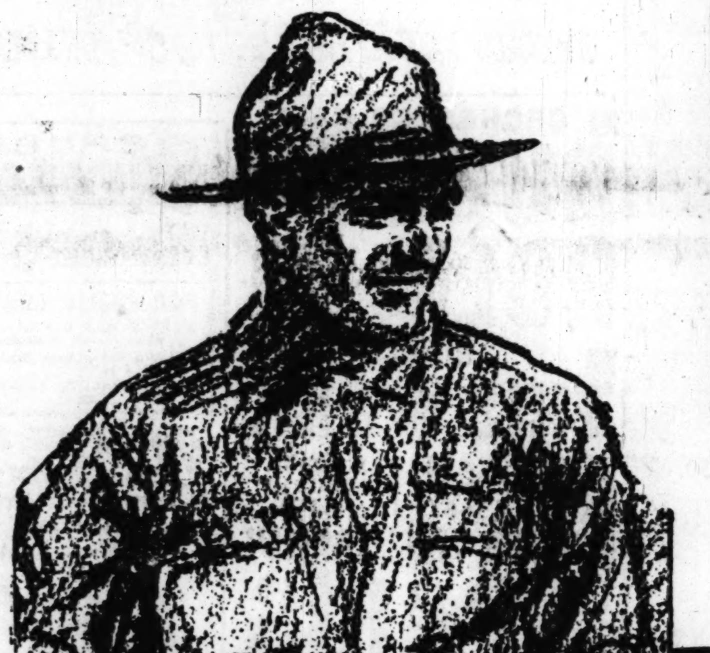
Private Herman Kidney of Polkcenter hopes the company commander will get his point of view and hand him transportation to New York instead of Polkcenter. Polkcenter being fifty miles from this camp and New York five hundred, Polkcenter has it.



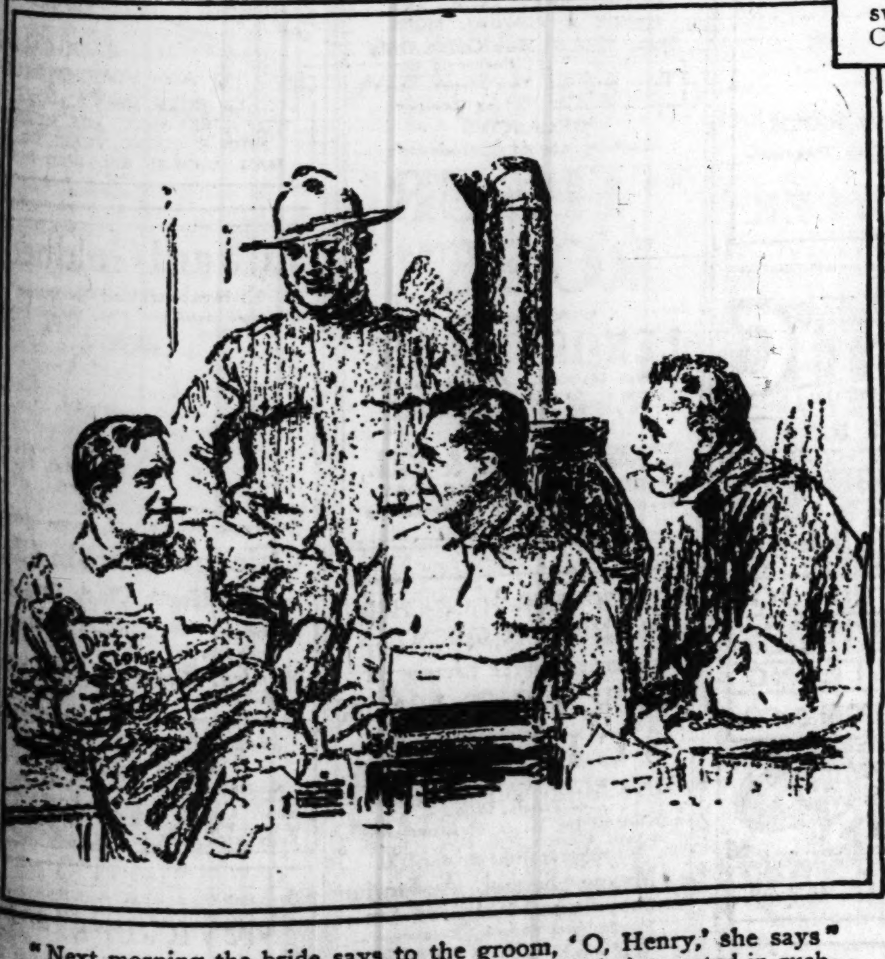
"Well, be good to yourself, sergeant!" Things begin to look rosy even to the guy who, the minute he was out of the army, was going to "knock hell out of the top sergeant"; with your discharge in your pocket, the red stripe on your arm, all ready to go home and pull the hero stuff—O, boy!



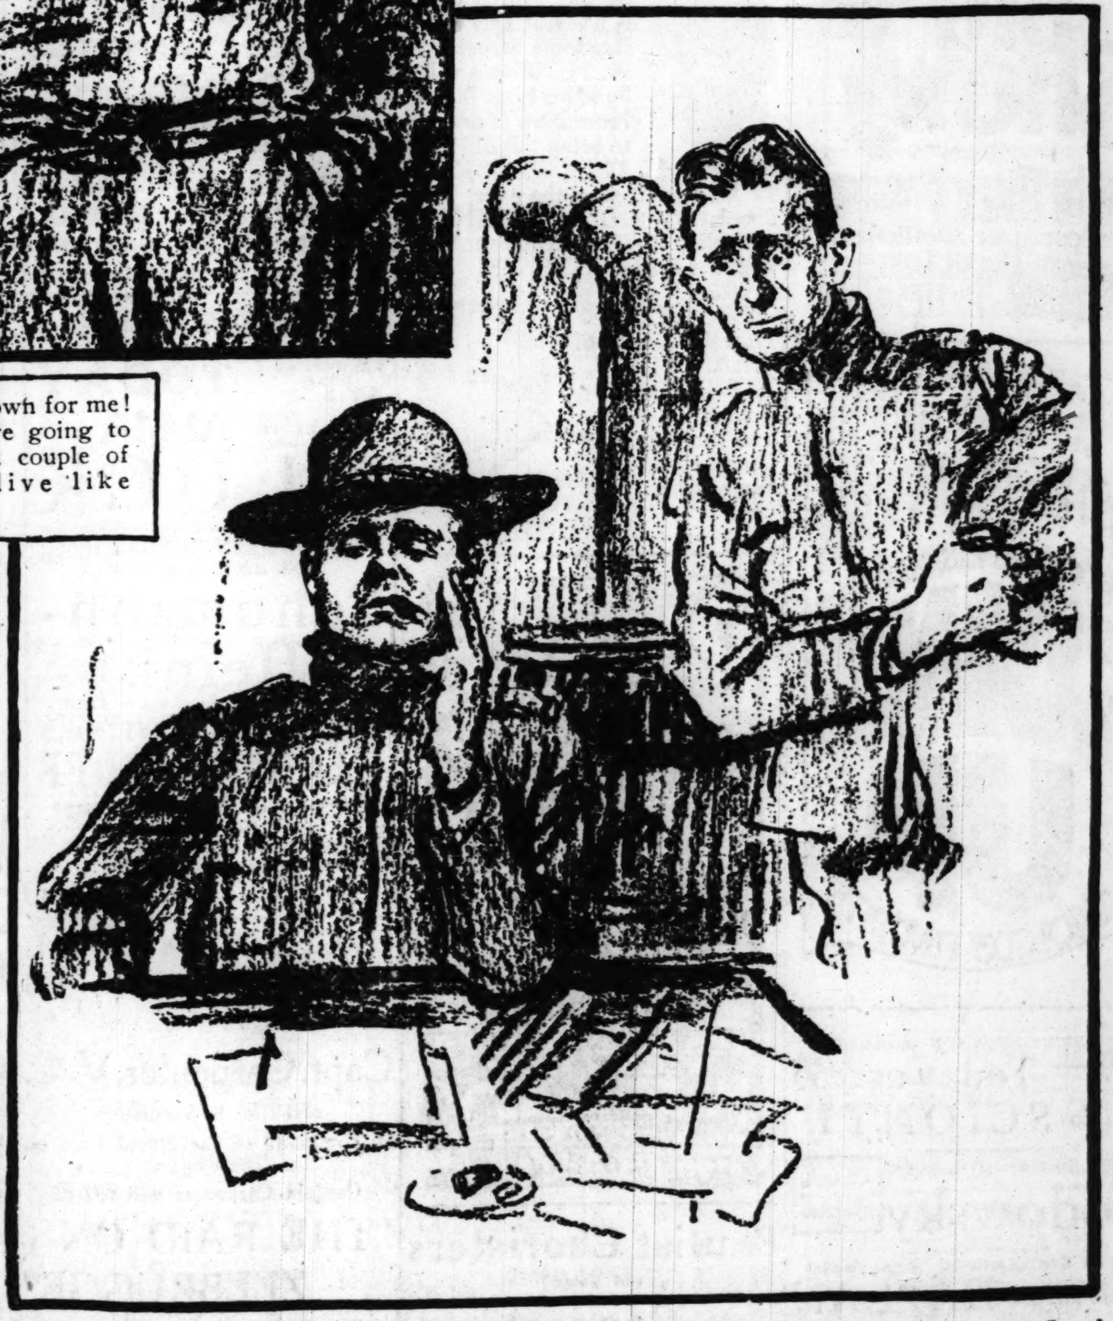
"All them pretty lookin' second lieutenants have better jobs than they ever had before, that's why they're keepin' us here in camp so long—for them to have somethin' to do!" "Red," whose discharge has been sidetracked, believes he has got at the bottom of things.



"No more hick town for me! Me and my pal are going to New York, grab a couple of swell jobs, and live like Caesars!"



"Next morning the bride says to the groom, 'O, Henry,' she says"—A busy day in the personnel office, where no one is interested in rushing any but his own discharge.



It took three senators, a member of the military committee, and a governor to get Lewis this far out of the army, and now, the personnel office having lost a part of his service record, there's no telling when he will be discharged. Lieutenant Pratt, just refused a week's furlough, is unsympathetic when consulted. "It may be three months, it may be a year," he tells Lewis.

"The Better 'Ole"; Theater Gossip

By Sheppard Butler

A CURIOUS entertainment with a curious history is "The Better 'Ole," which comes to the Illinois tomorrow night with De Wolf Hopper in all his comic majesty as its leading figure. Essentially a break of the theater—the kind of thing the biologists, I believe, call a "sport"—it started its career in this country some months ago as an unclaimed waif that nobody wanted and has wound up, to every one's amazement, as the most persistently popular and profitable of all the wartime plays.

Readers of THE TRIBUNE, of course, are familiar with the droll war sketches which Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather sent back from the trenches in Flanders. In England the young officer (he's only 30 now) is hailed as the creator of characters which rank with Dickens' Micawber and Kipling's Mulvaney, and he blundered upon the fame they have brought him in the most casual fashion.

In school Bairnsfather had carried a sketch book about with him, as many Englishmen do, but had never taken his drawing very seriously. Nor did it seem a matter of any particular moment when, early in 1915, he took to scribbling things on the walls of a ruined farm house in Flanders where he was quartered. To his fellow soldiers in the hard pressed British army, however, a man who could make them laugh was a Godsend, and it wasn't long before everyone up and down the line knew about Bairnsfather. Some one argued him into sending one of his sketches to a London paper, and the artist promptly became a national figure.

After a time he wrote a book, and later on put some of his characters into an aimless sort of play, punctuated with an occasional song. Old Bill, the rôle in which we shall see Hopper, was played by Arthur Bourchier, one of the London dependables, and the originator of another part we are to see soon, that of the central figure in Cosmo Hamilton's "Scandal," which impends at the Garrick.

London didn't go wild over the show. One critic dismissed it by observing that "it is not worth five minutes' consideration." The war was nearly over by the time it was brought to the attention of American managers, the reaction against war plays had set in, and for months the really crude Bairnsfather manuscript went begging.

One after another the producers turned it down, for reasons that seemed unanswerable, until Charles Coburn thought he saw an appeal in the quaint soldier characters. Coburn has never claimed to be an expert in estimating the popular taste. His forte has been staging things for the highbrow university communities who know what they like and don't care for "shows."

The play was put on at an out of the way New York theater down in Greenwich village, with Coburn himself playing Old Bill—and then came the deluge. To the profound astonishment of the managers who didn't want it, "The Better 'Ole" drew prodigious crowds. A larger theater had to be found. Then a second company, with James K. Hackett, was sent to Canada; a third, with Edmund Gurney, to Boston, and a fourth, with Maclyn Arbuckle, to Philadelphia. The Chicago company, for which Hopper was induced to leave his employment at the New York Hippodrome, is the fifth of the series.

And in all the records of recent seasons there is no play that has hung up so high a mark of unvarying success as this makeshift piece which the pundits of the theater unanimously cast aside.

Just what it is all about remains to be seen. All I know is that it centers about the figures of Old Bill, Alf, and Bert, the Three Musketeers of twentieth century war literature, and that the apparently cryptic title has to do with the wheeze that accompanied one of the Bairnsfather sketches—that of Old Bill in a shell hole, with bedlam cut loose around him, withering a scared companion with the sarcastic advice: "Well, if yer knows of a better 'ole, go to it."

Five Chicago theaters will be bereft of their present occupants at the end of this week—a proceeding which would seem to amount to a sizable job of housecleaning. In the case of at least two shows the players depart reluctantly, with audible mutterings about the inscrutable ways of the booking offices.

"Fiddlers Three," at the Olympic, and "The Overseas Revue," at the Princess, were doing nicely, every one seemed to think, and each had settled down for a pleasant bit of a run when word came that they must pack their lares and penates and go touring again. In the case of the latter entertainment there was a degree of solace, for Miss Brice and her company are headed eastward, with Broadway, the players' Nirvana, on the horizon. But the "Fiddlers Three" folk find themselves unqualifiedly out of luck. As late as yesterday they were still hoping against hope that they might be permitted to stay, though the coming of the Tarkington "Penrod" play seems to be definitely scheduled for the Olympic.

The Follies leave, too, but that was ordained in the book of fate, for there are shekels to be gathered elsewhere and Mr. Ziegfeld, like a good poker player, always quits while things are coming his way. Mr. and Mrs. Drew and "Old Lady 31" complete the roster of those who hope they leave us smiling when they say good-by.

Admirers of Booth Tarkington's engaging tales of boyhood and adolescence should have no fault to find with the order of things hereabouts. Not only is the play made from the Penrod stories due downtown next week, but "Seventeen," the footlighting of William Sylvester Baxter's eventful career, is making the rounds of the outlying theaters, giving 'em a taste of better things in the drama. It is the same delightful company which introduced us to the play a year or more ago at the erstwhile Fine Arts theater—Gregory Kelly, Miss Lillian Ross, Miss Ruth Gordon, and the rest—and is worth a trip on the elevated to see. At the Victoria this week, and no charge for the advertisement.

Miss Mabel Taliaferro is to return to the stage on March 7 in a comedy by Marvin Taylor, about whom I know nothing, called "Luck in Pawn." Stamford, Conn., will see it first, if that interests you.

Miss May de Sousa, one of our most cherished native daughters, writes from Australia that she has made the hit of her career in Melbourne as what the English call principal boy in "Goody Two Shoes." She has been telling the interviewers there about Chicago politics, her debut as a singer of Ald. Coughlin's "Dear Midnight of Love," and the discovery that she is a distant relative of John Philip Sousa, the bandmaster, all of which seems to intrigue them mightily.

Miss Ethel Barrymore's success in "The Off Chance" has been such that her sponsors have arranged for her the longest tour of her career. She will play all the way across the continent this spring, visiting the Pacific coast for the first time since 1911, when she was seen there in "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire."

Tim Murphy, the bright and shining light of the late lamented "Never Too Late," has joined the company which will appear with Miss Ruth Chatterton in George Scarborough's comedy, "In the Merry Month of May." Miss Laura Nelson Hall and Sidney Booth also are of the cast.

William Rock and Miss Frances White are to be reunited this week—in vaudeville. You remember their falling out in Chicago, of course.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—George Cohan is getting himself talked about again. Thinking it might be time for a good, old fashioned romantic opera comique, with the dare devil prince of Bargravia in love with Anitza, the milliner, and masquerading as Ferenz, the bandit, in order to be near her, his firm bought one such and put it in rehearsal.

When it was running fairly well young George (he's 40 odd, now, but we still think of him as a youngster) went to the city in which it was playing, looked it over, and saw that it not only was quite awful but that it would lose a lot of money if persisted in. Yet, on the other hand, there was a considerable investment to be considered. How was that to be saved?

Cohan gave the matter a night's consideration and then decided to burlesque his comic opera and turn it into a modern musical comedy with an old-fashioned setting. To do this he had to write several new ensembles, all of them having to do with the liberties he was taking with the plot. The opening chorus, for instance, now introduces the minor characters and the merry villagers humorously and in person, as "I am Marcel, the barber," "I am Janku, the apothecary," etc., and when the soldiers are announced they come trooping in with a Cohan hop-skip and admit in song that they are not really soldiers, but merely dressed that way.

But so far as the plot is concerned, that is permitted to stand. Ferenz, the bandit, is still the prince in disguise, which Anitza discovers when she visits the palace in the second act. But he is a modern prince, for in the third act he not only resigns the throne to marry the milliner, but permits the populace to elect him first president of the new republic.

By giving this happy and really clever twist to "The Royal Vagabond" Cohan has turned the entertainment into what promises to be one of the big successes of the year. His cast includes Frederick Santley, Tessa Costa, Robinson Newbold, Frances Demarest, and Louis Simon. The music that isn't interpolated is by Dr. Anselm Goetzl and very good. A gentleman named Ivor Szinneys and William Cary Duncan wrote the original book and lyrics.

I cannot vouch for the truth of it, not having been present, but the story is being told of Jack Barrymore. He has been playing the impressively gloomy rôle of the hero in "Redemption" for many weeks, and the strain is probably getting a bit on his nerves. During the "flu" epidemic recently the audience was unusually noisy, coughing, sneezing, blowing its several noses continuously, especially during the quiet scenes.

At the end of the play Barrymore, as the unhappy Fedor, disgusted with life, having made a failure of his own attempts at self-regeneration, and realizing that unless he removes himself from the scene his wife will be liable to arrest and punishment as a bigamist, shoots himself through the heart, and dramatically falls prone upon the stage.

The night of the coughing epidemic Jack proceeded as usual with the business of the scene, reading the final speech eloquently and with feeling, and then, as he turned away from the audience to adjust the revolver, he added, "Life isn't worth it, and, besides, the house tonight is full of trained seals." Whereupon he shot himself and flopped down in the midst of a company straining every nerve to keep its faces saddened by his death.

Gentlemen with uncertain memories have caused their share of the domestic tragedies that have interested the world, on the stage and off. But it is safe to insist no one of them ever got himself into quite such a mess as does the hero of "The Net," a new melodrama recently come to town.

This is the sort of play that intrigues your interest, even though you may hold it a quite preposterous affair. Starting off gayly with an arranged meeting between a dissolute husband and the wife from whom he is

IN "TILLIE"
BLACKSTONE THEATER
DAVIS & SANFORD PHOTO

Playbills

OPENINGS.

Blackstone—Miss Patricia Collinge in "Tillie," a play about the Pennsylvania Dutch, made from Mrs. Helen R. Martin's novel, "Tillie, a Mennonite Maid'" by Mrs. Martin herself and Frank Howe Jr. You remember Miss Collinge, of course, in "Pollyanna." She will have the assistance of John W. Ransone, Robert Hudson, Miss Maude Granger, and others. First time tomorrow night.

Illinois—"The Better 'Ole," an odd entertainment with music, based on Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather's war cartoons. De Wolf Hopper will be seen in the leading rôle; others in the company are Dick Temple, Percival Vivian, and Miss Betty Turner. First time tomorrow night.

La Salle—"Oh, Lady! Lady!" another of the dynasty of ingratiating music plays by Guy Bolton, P. G. Wodehouse and Jerome Kern—the "Oh, Boy!" and "Leave It to Jane" sort of thing. Miss Vivienne Segal, Carl Randall, Edward Abeles, and Miss Florence Shirley will be among those present. First time tomorrow night.

DRAMA.

Powers'—"Tiger Rose," a smashing melodrama superbly presented by Miss Lenore Ulric and other good players.

Studebaker—"The Masquerader," notable chiefly for the opportunity it gives Guy Bates Post, a good actor, in the Jekyll-Hyde rôle around which the play is built.

Garrick—"Business Before Pleasure," another of the dependably funny Potash and Perlmutter comedies. Final week at this theater; it's moving to the Woods.

Woods'—Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in "Keep Her Smiling," a comedy of the type they have made popular in the movies. Final week.

Cort—"Old Lady 31," an engaging little play about an old ladies' home, with an interesting cast of veterans. Final week.

Victoria—Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen," with the original company. A rare treat for the folks who don't like to come downtown.

Wilson Avenue—The North Shore players in "Common Clay."

Imperial—"The Brat."

WORDS AND MUSIC.

Auditorium—"Chu Chin Chow," the most dazzling and opulent spectacle yet fashioned for the stage. Because of a teachers' convention no performances will be given Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday evenings. Instead there will be special matinées today and on Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday.

Colonial.—The "Ziegfeld Follies," sumptuous as ever. Final week, with a special matinée on Friday.

Cohan's Grand—"Going Up," a musical comedy with some of the best music current in the theater.

Princess—"The Overseas Revue," a rollicking, irresponsible show about the doughboy in France, with Miss Elizabeth Brice dominating the proceedings. Final week.

Olympic—"Fiddlers Three," a genteel operetta with occasional interludes of unconventional fun to keep it from being too placid. Final week.

National—"Odds and Ends."

VAUDEVILLE.

Majestic—Eddie Leonard and his minstrels; Wellington Cross and Mlle. Nitta-Jo are the headliners.

Palace—Miss Gertrude Hoffman, Walter C. Kelly, Regay and Sheehan, and others.

Rialto—"The Cycle of Mirth," Jimmy Lyons, Regal and Mack, et al.

McVicker's—"Quaker Town to Broadway," a Charlie Chaplin picture, Joe Cook, etc.

MUSIC

ALL save one of the conductors engaged for a program apiece have appeared with the Orchestra: the one yet to take part is Polacco, for the final Friday and Saturday of next month, by which time his duties with the Chicago Opera will have been fulfilled. It is not likely that, with Mr. Stock back where he belongs, other conductors will be brought hither for the concerts—unless, perhaps, a composer should come to conduct his own work. The experience with special conductors has been interesting, although not, as intimated two weeks ago, the best of processes for the Orchestra as an ensemble. Prokofieff, Gabrilówitsch, and Victor Herbert will be remembered; and those who know Polacco expect him to make good.

Efrem Zimbalist comes week after next as soloist with the Orchestra, playing Mozart's fifth concerto.

The Civic Music Association has started a drive to build up its sustaining memberships, costing ten dollars a year. To buy one is among the good things to do with ten dollars; for this organization, devoted to spreading liking for and knowledge of music, has done wonders in the last four or five years. The distinct growth of Chicago's interest in what is called "community singing" is to the credit of the C. M. A. Free concerts, frequently involving good professional skill, have been given in the public parks and playgrounds and on the big pier; and its work to make Great Lakes in wartime a port of singing sailors was so important in building up morale that the government took it over from the association. As interesting a concert as the season has known was given in the autumn in Orchestra hall, with the children's choruses as a piquant and highly stimulating feature. I have an idea that, with twice the money the association has possessed so far, the achievements in a season would be at least four times larger.

The recent recital by Mischa Levitzki in Orchestra hall added $2,890 to the permanent blind relief war fund, the Musicians' Club of Women reports.

Claudia Muzio, who was so popular last summer in Ravinia Park, is to go for the coming summer to South America, where the pay for the somebodies is so big that the press-agent does not think it square to lie about the sum.

Gabrilówitsch, if he remain in charge of Detroit's orchestra, is to have ninety players in it.

The Boston Symphony is reported to have figured a deficit of $120,000 on the present season. The sum has been made up, it is added, by friends, who were privately advised of the conditions. The trustees have not yet said if Henri Rabaud, whom they brought from France to succeed Dr. Muck, is to be kept another season. He has recently been elected to the Institute of France.

The New York City newspapers, one day last week, printed a story that Galli-Curci, Stracciari, and Dolci—who has made a definite success there—had signed contracts to go into the Metropolitan after this season; and, a day or two later, Mr. Campanini sent to the papers a formal bulletin that he would give at least five weeks of Chicago Opera in New York next winter. This week is Campanini's last there.

Hermann Jadlowker, who may be recalled as of the Metropolitan when its singers visited Chicago, announces from Berlin that he is coming next season to sing for Campanini. As the German language will not be used in the Auditorium performances, it is assumed that Jadlowker is coming to sing in Russian operas—a subject to which Campanini has been giving thought. Not many have been imported, although we are told, every now and then, that there are uncounted musical riches in the Russian répertoire. The Metropolitan's experiments with "Boris" and "Prince Igor" have not been profitable, I believe.

Reinald Werrenrath, one of the best American singers, got his first chance in opera the other night in the Metropolitan: the piece was "Pagliacci." He did not get the big role for baritone, Tonio, but the "bit" of Silvio, in which it is not common to find important singers.

The Metropolitan, with the ballet of "Petrushka" newly in its répertoire, has been violating the convention binding "Pagliacci" to "Cavalleria" in one program. A paragrapher there recently said that the marriage of the two operas "was never more than a common-law affair, anyway." "Petrushka," easily the most popular item in the American adventures of the Ballet Russe, seems to be a success in the Metropolitan, which has been going in for better dancing. Adolphe Bolm, who was with the Russians, is now in the Metropolitan as director of ballets.

Another dance-success in the Metropolitan is "Le Coq d'Or," given there as a ballet-opera, with two impersonators, a dancer and a singer, for each important rôle. Sir Thomas Beecham, who puts a large part of his income from the pills into music, has staged the work in England as Rimsky-Korsakow designed it: that is, as "straight" opera. Most Chicagoans who have seen the Metropolitan's production say "Le Coq" would be a good thing for Mr. Campanini to venture with in the Auditorium. Dancers for the opera stage are few: Chicago has not exhibited a good one since Rosina Galli left—and Galli is the principal dancer in the Metropolitan. Pavlowa's greatness destroyed even toleration for the best of the others.

Gounod's "Mireille," in which Patti used to sing, is to be revived in the Metropolitan. About all known of it by present-day opera-goers is a florid waltz, beloved by the coloraturas, who think that they should be permitted to interpolate it into all other operas.

André Messager's opera of "Monsieur Beaucaire" is announced for early mounting in London, with Marion Green and Maggie Teyte in the principal parts. The play made from Booth Tarkington's tale was immensely popular there when put on by the late Lewis Waller—far more so than in the United States, where it served Richard Mansfield just well enough through one season, and then was dropped from his répertoire. By Mae Tinée.

DOROTHY GISH is due to visit your neighborhood theaters in her latest production, "Boots."

In it you will behold her as the funny little slavey of an English inn, immersed in her first and only love affair, and on the side defeating the best laid plans of the bolsheviki.

Believe editorial we, this picture is right up to date! They have President Wilson over in Europe and there are plans on foot by the bolsheviki to send himself and the allied heads to eternal rest, via the bomb route, as they sit at the peace conference. The bolsheviki are principally represented by a dark, determined, and eternally busy lady, who oozes guile and plants bombs. Her instrument is a "broken diplomat" who has fallen victim to her wiles and who shows her how to reach the honeycombed secret passages that run directly under the peace chamber and which may be reached from King's inn.

The dark woman has taken a room in the inn, where Miss Dorothy Gish ministers to the pots and pans, indulging in orgies of dime novel reading on the side. A handsome young detective from Scotland Yard also engages a room.

"Boots" looks once into those deep brown eyes, gasps, and is done for. From that time on she is terribly funny, as she struggles with her ardor and her awkwardness. Her peculiar style of love making, however, is most effective, though for a time she feels that all is over.

It is while she is down in the cellar, preparing to burn everything her hero had even looked at, that she stumbles on the busy dark lady and her bomb. The fight that follows is without a doubt the fiercest feminine encounter I have ever seen on the screen. I will wager that both Miss Dorothy Gish and Miss LaRue carried scars and headaches for some time afterward.

To one person's way of thinking this is the best picture in which this little actress has appeared for a long, long time. Not only does she herself do awfully clever work. The people supporting her play up nobly.

But, whist! list! Methinks we have stumbled on the secret sorrow of little Miss Gish's life! She wishes she were a brunette instead of a blonde! If she doesn't, why does she insist on wearing that little black wig?

I asked for some letters on the subject introduced by the business man who wrote registering a "kick" on the number of things he was compelled to sit through in the motion picture theater before the feature was shown. They have been coming in thick and fast. Some are with him, some are against him. W. J. L. writes four pages of clever protest against the practice. He says in part:

"As does the average movie fan, I usually reach the photoplay house after the feature has been partly run off, and must, necessarily, await the recommencement of it. But by the time that occurs other things have been foisted on the screen; horrors reign where, a moment or an hour before, appeared Elliott Dexter, Nazimova, Theodore Roberts, or Constance Talmadge, and after passing through the ordeal of reading the roster of the company's time clock slaves, I find that the thread of interest has commenced to unravel at the place which, at the ending of the picture, had been a clean cut.

"My perceptive powers have been weakened by dry subjects of the camera master's curiosity—say the packing of caviare, after eating a hearty meal; my attention has been jerked willy-nilly from the fish market to the hall of mirrors at Versailles, and thence to a flotilla of German submarines; my interest has been seduced by multi-colored clothes models, advance notices of next week's programs, and other brain children of the hairless advertiser; my memory is a mad house in which all the incongruent pictures and slides dance fiendishly in their endeavor to subordinate the original reason of my visiting the place; my emotion, like the discarded bone which Fido has hidden beneath the leaves, lies buried and forgotten. The dog has the advantage, though; he seldom unearths a bone which he has once buried. I, on the other hand, do, and again, armed with emotion—so essential to interest in the photoplay—am taken in."

I will quote from other letters next Sunday. In the meantime I would like to hear your views on the subject.

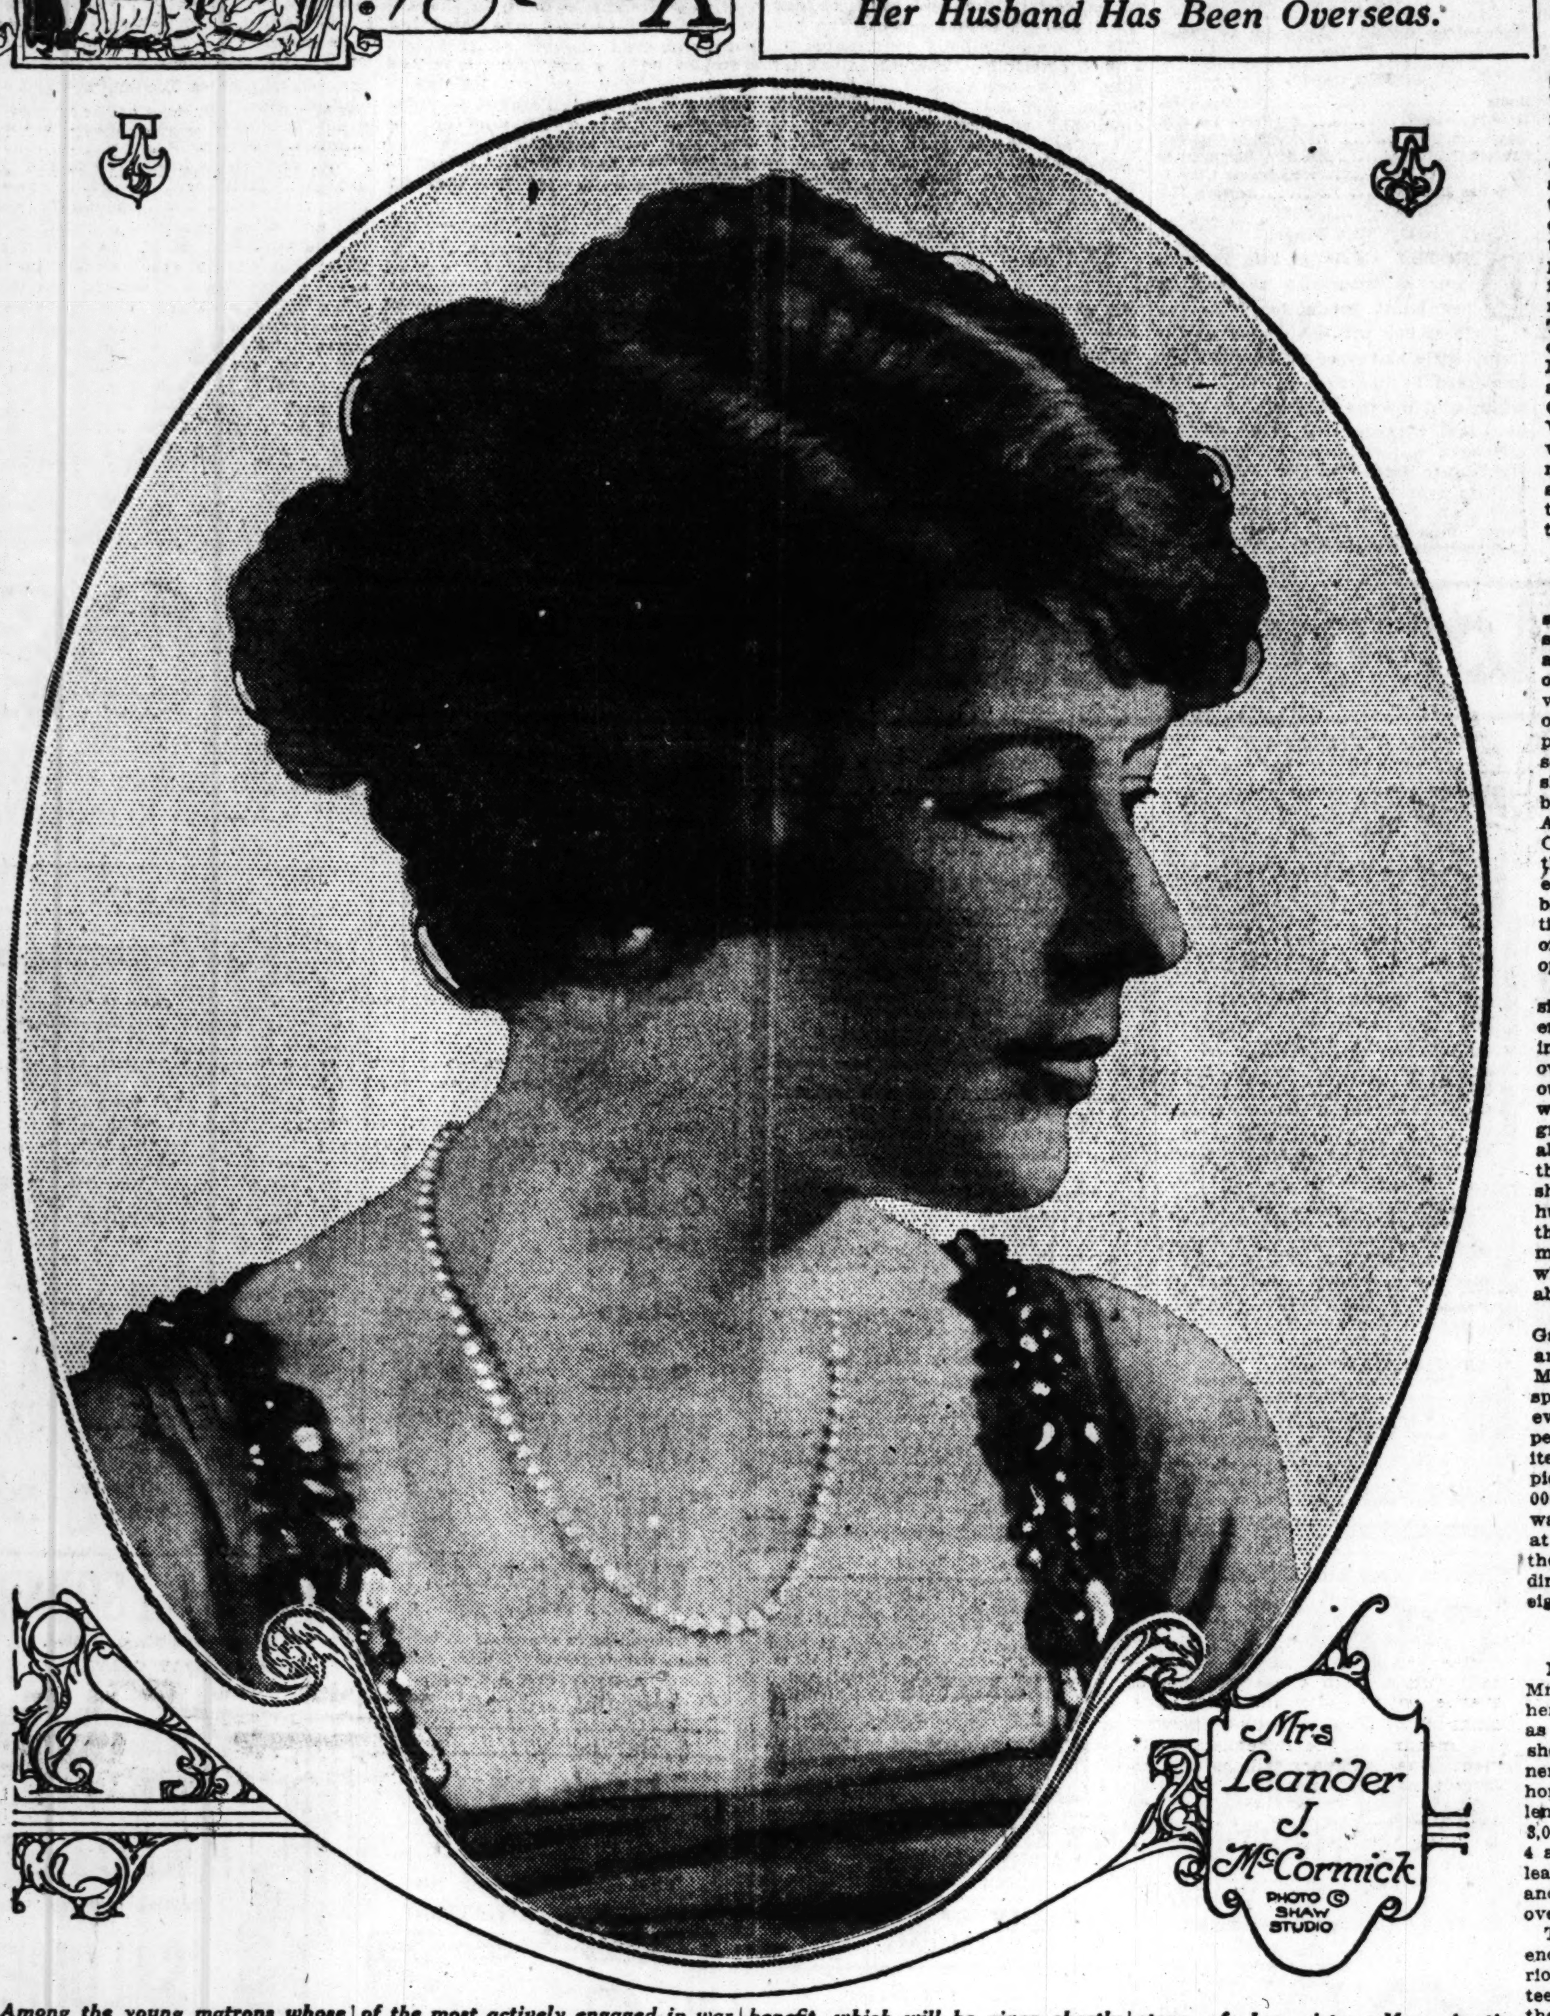
Comment by Mme. X.

Young Matron Who Has Been Engaged in War Charities While Her Husband Has Been Overseas.



Among the young matrons whose husbands have been overseas Mrs. Leander J. McCormick has been one of the most actively engaged in war charities. This year she is chairman of the annual Junior league benefit, which will be given shortly after Easter. In this office Mrs. McCormick is following in the footsteps of her sister, Mrs. Austin Niblack, who was the successful leader of the revels last spring.

News of Chicago Society

War Echoes Still Heard from Some Who Never Fought

By Mme. X.

THERE are evidences in this community of a good deal of undistributed or ill distributed hysteria—probably the inevitable aftermatch of a nerve destroying war. The chief victims of this hysteria—that is, those who manifest most pronounced signs of it—are numerous among the noncombatants. Those who have fought on French battlefields don't seem so addicted to this malady.

Night watches in the lonely outposts, charges in face of a hail of machine gun bullets, directing barrage fire of French 75s, are all forms of activity which serve as outlets for the overdeveloped nerves generated by four years of world war, for we were spiritually under the spell of the great conflict long before we entered it with our soldiers and sailors.

But those others, whom force of circumstance kept at home after April 6, 1917, and whose warlike ardor expressed itself in the negligible self-denials requested by Hoover, in working at war relief agencies, and in the various nondangerous branches of the military machine, seem prone to succumb to this post-bellum soul sickness.

Its two symptoms are an inability to realize that the war is ended and a tendency to hate not only our quondam foe, but the neighbor around the corner who differs with us either on world policies or the right treatment of the alley ash can.

Mankind, following a natural law manifested in the animal kingdom, is apt to get more quarrelsome in the spring time, but this spring this tendency is manifest on all sides in a more than usually acute form.

The war is over. Of that there can be no matter of doubt. This fact puts on the shelf various inhibitions, especially those affecting a free expression of opinion, except where such opinion attacks the foundations of our form of government.

Dramatics at the Arts Club.

Socially speaking, Chicago is almost entirely abandoned by its wealthy leisure class, who have gone, south, east, and west and left the machine to be run by a lot of happy, hearty, healthy workers, who mingle pleasure with business in a capable manner.

The Arts club on Friday evening gave a dramatic entertainment of a superior order, under the direction of that clever young woman, Miss Alice Gerstenberg, and her committee—Mrs. Lyman Walton, Miss Katherine Dudley, Frederick M. Grant, Arthur Heun, Arthur Aldis, and Theodore B. Hinckley.

Miss Dudley made some charming stage settings for the three playlets which followed the buffet supper. The three skits boxed the dramatic compass.

The first was one of Arthur Schnitzler's sophisticated and witty little Anatol pieces, "The Christmas Present," the scene being laid on a street corner on Christmas eve. The second was a lively farce called "Food," by William C. DeMille, with the subtitle, "A Tragedy of the Future," and set in New York City fifty years hence. The third and last, "Maiden Over the Wall," was called a fantasy, by its author, Bertram Bloch, and was set in "a garden out of the world."

The Paul Bartletts acted the Schnitzler play, while Mrs. Alexander Stevenson Jr., Miss Mary Hastings Bradley, George Wolff, William G. Nourse, Arthur Bissell, and Francis H. Abbott filled the rôles in the other plays.

Artistic Touch to Programs.

A particularly chic and novel feature of the evening was the professional artists' contribution to the occasion. Each of the 150 or 200 programs was adorned with a little sketch or dash of the brush from some one of them. Among those who thus gave of their talent were Mrs. Anna Stacey, Mrs. Pauline Palmer, Miss Anna Lynch, Miss Eda Sterchi, Miss Marie Brewer, Paul Bartlett, Frederic Grant, Gerald Frank, Joseph Birren, and Frank Werner.

The Arts club's new quarters lend themselves especially well to such an entertainment, as gallery opens out of gallery in a long vista of archways, with the stage at the further end.

The club's president, Mrs. John A. Carpenter, was not present, as she and her husband have gone to New York. Among their luggage are packed straw hats, muslin gowns, and summer flannels, the rumor is that they are headed for Cuba and its semitropical delights. Their return is expected by mid-March—not before.

Clubs seem the chief social field these days. Yesterday Washington's birthday was celebrated at the Casino by a big club luncheon with speeches and songs, a custom established two or three years ago. In the evening the members of the Saddle and Cycle club—much the same social outfit as the Casino members—donned sports clothes, outing togs, and garden frocks and partook of an old-fashioned supper in honor of the father of his country.

Lectures for Hospitals.

Society, instruction, and philanthropy mingle in the coming week's engagement calendar. On Tuesday afternoon the first of the series of four lectures, gotten up by the woman's board of the Chicago Policlinic and Henrotin hospitals, takes place at the Casino, 167 East Delaware place, when that wise and witty professor of the University of Chicago, James Weber Linn, will discourse on "The War Spirit in Literature."

This course of lectures is designed to raise money for the work in these two hospitals of this woman's board, of which Mrs. Edwin W. Ryerson is chairman.

Others on this board are the Mesdames W. McCormick Blair, Richard Ely Danielson, Morrill Dunn, Robert Gardner, William Prescott Hunt Jr., Chauncey McCormick, Robert Hall McCormick Jr., Joseph M. Patterson, George S. Payson, Augustus S. Peabody, and Charles L. Strobel, and the Misses Anita Blair, Edith Blair, Florence Harris, and Marie J. Rozet.

Opera Friends to Hear Report.

Second only in importance to the League to Enforce Peace is the League to Enforce Opera, and in the interests of this movement the "Friends of Opera" are called to assemble at the Casino next Thursday at 4 o'clock to hear the report of the organizing committee and to pass on the same. Names of candidates for the permanent executive committee will be presented, as well as a frame work on which to build an organization of far reaching possibilities.

Chicago's standing as a real metropolis will be greatly affected by the success or failure of this association—to make grand opera as much a part of the city as those other institutions, the Art institute and Chicago Symphony orchestra. There will be two forms of membership—governing members and associate members. Those on this present and temporary committee are the Mesdames Harold McCormick, honorary chairman; Richard T. Crane, chairman; Joseph G. Coleman, Julius Rosenwald, Frederick W. Upham, and John A. Carpenter, vice chairman; John H. Winterbotham, recording secretary, and Arthur Ryerson, corresponding secretary, while the sole man on it is Charles B. Pike, treasurer.

Has Other Aims.

Besides awakening a more widespread public interest in our opera and securing a better support for it, the aim of the new society is also a more or less active participation in the development of the artistic side of the opera. There is much room for improvement, for instance, in our stage settings, which up to now have not shown any signs of being influenced by such masters in this art as Bakst. Also the operas heretofore offered to Chicago audiences have not touched the great and interesting field of modern Russian opera. It is hopes and ambitions of accomplishing these innovations which are seething in the minds of many now working for this grand opera association.

There is one thing that is not lost sight of by the members of this young enterprise, and that is the ever enduring debt lovers of this form of music owe Mrs. Harold F. McCormick, without whose moral and financial support we should never have had Chicago grand opera. In all the years of her absence she has never failed in being the mainstay of this enterprise, and she and Harold McCormick have given hundreds of thousands of dollars in the six years of its existence to help meet the annual deficit—a deficit which up to now has seemed unavoidable.

Apropos of the opera when Mary Garden was here ("Miss" seems such an insufficient prefix or title for our Mary!) she sported the most exquisite specimen of the Parisian jeweler's art ever seen, a wrist bag of finely woven pearls and platinum, with an exquisite diamond band, clasp and chain, a piece of workmanship which cost $20,000. She is dedicating it to the French war orphans and is selling chances at $10 per, aiming to raise $50,000 for these young hopes of France. At one dinner given in her honor here she sold eight chances in three minutes.

Mrs. Bowen Dinner Hostess.

Mrs. Marshall Field, when she was Mrs. Arthur Caton, used to be famous here for the size of her dinner parties—as she is today in Washington. But she never invited 3,000 guests to a dinner. Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen has the honor of being the hostess par excellence of Chicago. She has asked over 3,000 women to dine with her on March 4 at the Morrison hotel. Probably at least a third of her invitees will accept and come. They will gather from all over the country.

The occasion is the two days' conference of the women's committees of various state councils. These committees are going to turn themselves, at the suggestion of the government, into community councils to continue the remarkable work they have set going in the past, nearly two years. They will lay their plans March 3 and 4, and the Illinois council will take the lead in determining the direction in which activities will be developed.

At the banquet, where Mrs. Bowen will preside, Gov. Lowden, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, and Elliott Smith will speak. The governor will present the point of view of the practical able man of middle life—the typical American of today. Dr. Shaw will speak from the ripe experience of over eight decades of struggle in a slowly wakening world, while young Elliott Smith, son of Mrs. Dunlap Smith, grandson of Mrs. Lucy M. Flower, will point the way to future development. It will be a most interesting, worth while occasion.

Vacant Chairs at Concerts.

A friend of this col. and of the symphony concerts writes urging that attention be called to the fact that it is almost impossible to get seats for the Friday afternoon concerts and yet there are frequently many vacant chairs there.

The owners of these are probably holders of season tickets who, when unable to go themselves, simply let their tickets rust in the upper bureau drawer, forgetting either to send them to friends or to give them to the ticket office for resale. It is a sort of thoughtlessness which could easily be remedied.

Those interested in the orchestra take pride in the popular Friday afternoons, but regard with regret the many unsold ground floor seats of Saturday evening. What a bit of genuine, unpretentious public spirit it would be on the part of some wealthy and perhaps unmusical citizen to buy a block of these seats and give the use of them to different groups of music students! There are thousands of these students in Chicago eager for this music, but with not the means to buy concert tickets.

Any art student can go to the Art institute to renew his inspiration by studying the works of art, ancient and modern, there. But those who study music are without similar means of getting like impetus for their calling.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, who went to New York a week ago, is expected back today, accompanied by her son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs. George W. Patterson. Both the Pattersons have been in France for two years, working for France, he in the French artillery, she as bacteriologist and nurse in a French military hospital. And now they return each with a French decoration pinned over the heart, proof of French gratitude.

Don't, O don't forget, sister voters, to turn out on Tuesday and show up at the polls to vote in the mayoralty primaries! Millions of men voters are watching from the bushes to see what suffrage means to us women.

Tone Differences In Phonographs

TONE varies greatly in different makes of phonographs. And it is for improvement of tonal quality that all producers strive. It does not take a trained musical ear to appreciate the superiority of The Brunswick. You'll notice the difference at once.

The Brunswick Method of Reproduction includes several unique departures from old methods. One is the Ultona, for playing all records. A turn of the hand and the proper needle and diaphragm are presented to each type.

The Brunswick Amplifier has taken the metallic twang out of piano and instrumental records—the most difficult of all to play. To any record, in a like degree, it brings a purer, a truer tone. This is because it is built entirely of moulded wood without a bit of metal in its construction.

You can easily verify these claims. A call will permit us to play your favorite records.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Dance Planned to Raise Funds for Rest Cottage

THERE will be a dance and entertainment on the evening of March 9 at the Morrison hotel for the benefit of Rest cottage, a convalescent home for men and boys at 3127 Calumet avenue. The funds are needed to make improvements, among them being the installation of an electric elevator, in order to care for returned soldiers, suffering with various heart ailments.

The institution has cared for 1,500 patients in the four years of its existence, and is the only one of its kind in Chicago.

The president is Mrs. Henry Roth, formerly chairman of the library extension committee of Illinois. Mrs. Emma Mandel, the honorary president, is the founder of the Jewish Home for Orphans, the Ruth club, Home for the Friendless, and Winfield Tuberculosis sanitarium.

A resident physician is maintained at Rest cottage, and men and boys discharged from hospitals are kept there until they are strong enough to take positions which the club endeavors to find for them. The cottage is nonsectarian, but is maintained solely by the Baron Hirsch Woman's club and co-workers. The dance will be given by the personal service committee of the organization.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME. Y.

Ten Dollar Movies Fail to Draw Even for Charity's Sake

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Mrs. Oliver Harriman is both peeved and grieved. I will give you eighteen guesses why. The dear rabble of the 400—not the leaders, but the led of this close corporation—are not apparently interested in ravished Armenia. Not only are they curiously passive in the matter of getting Armenia unravished, but they seem singularly uninterested in looking at her in her desolated state.

The facts in the case are these: Mrs. Harriman and others of equal social standing took a fancy to help restore Armenia and as the first step in this wholesale order, took over the rights of a moving picture of some of the worst parts of that country. The next thing the lady and her enterprising friends did was to take over a portion of the Plaza hotel. I scarcely know which of these steps might be considered the more audacious by expert financiers of Wall street. Anyway, the third step followed as the night the day. The committee sent cards of invitation and tickets purchaseable to members of the smart set. They made up a list of 1,000 names and they decided that not more than this number should attend the presentation in all of its several numbers.

Must Have Money's Worth.

They need not have been alarmed—not so many as that did attend, and I wish to venture an explanation. It is a vulgar explanation perhaps, emanating from one who has the practical type of mind. Whereas you can see a first class movie for 10 cents in Fourteenth street, you had to pay $10 to see this one at the Plaza. When you saw it, you had a little hurt feeling in your breast.

To be sure, several years ago on THE TRIBUNE when my attention was called to the works of Laura Jean Libby, I noticed that she advertised one of her books in the back of another, thus: "If you have never wept before, you will weep when you read this book."

Now, whatever the pleasures accruable from a good weep, the smart set, which holds out for getting the value of its money, does not care to pay $10 for this entertainment.

Paris Hats Too High.

If Mrs. Harriman does not know this, I am acquainted with a certain Fifth avenue milliner who does. She thought a little of taking her life in her hands and going over to France near the end of the war. Toward that end she interviewed several of her rich customers. Among them was Mrs. Orme Wilson, sister of the late John Jacob Astor, and another woman who abhors to have her name mentioned, but is of the house of J. Pierpont Morgan.

The milliner said to them: "Prices are, you have no idea how high in Paris. They make no discount to a dealer. I have my traveling expenses to pay and then 60 per cent of duty. Your Paris hat therefore would come high. Would you pay for it, say $220, if necessary?" The rich clientele replied in no unmeasured terms that they would not. They almost resented the question, and demanded to know whether there was a prevailing idea that they had no sense and did not appreciate the value of money. They would buy their hats at home.

That is the spirit that Mrs. Harriman has run up against without knowing what has happened to her. If the smart set likes to weep it does not like it well enough to pay $10 for the privilege. That price should carry something else with it in order to insure the feeling in the human breast of having received one's money's worth.

No Thrills in List.

To read the list of names constituting her committee and those to whom she sent tickets, is exactly like reading down a page of the social register. They are even in alphabetical order, and the only items omitted are their clubs, summer homes, and number of times they have been divorced and subsequently married. There is not the shadow of a thrill for any of this list in being seen with any others of it.

Mrs. Harriman fell down in her psychology. What she ought to have done was to intermingle with these socially great others of like bank accounts who are in a set just below hers. Added to the pleasurable sensation of weeping, they would have enjoyed that other ultra-pleasurable sensation of sitting in the society to which they aspire. The one time that a hostess is legally, or at least socially, entitled to sell out her friends in this fashion, is when she does it for a cause, and the cause of Armenia, Lithuania, or Poland does as well as any else.

Some of Mrs. Harriman's committee are Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt, William Howard Taft, and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. Although no invitation was sent to any one not known personally to some member of the committee, I fancy that the cause of ravished Armenia will be enriched quite a little just the same.

Marie Blair Engaged.

An important engagement was announced this week. Mr. and Mrs. C. Ledyard Blair have told friends that their only daughter, Marie Louise, is going to be the bride of Lieut. Pierpont Morgan Hamilton, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Pierson Hamilton, and grandson of the late J. Pierpont Morgan.

The engagement is one of the most important bits of society news given out this season. Miss Blair is the sister of three of the most successful hostesses and social favorites in New York, including Mrs. H. Rivington Pyne, who is the sister-in-law of Percy Pyne, who thinks up the brand new ideas in entertaining, such as taking over the entire floor of a restaurant and making it into a miniature Paris.

Lieut. Hamilton has just been discharged from the air force. He is the brother of Lieut. Laurens M. Hamilton, U. S. A.; Alexander Hamilton, and Mrs. Arthur Woods.

Mrs. Blair said no plans had been made for the wedding. Something else that she remarked, however, led me to the wholly new observation that time flies. She said that she made the announcement right now in order to get it in before Lent. I suspect that of being another way of saying, in order to run in a little entertaining for the betrothed couple before the sluggish days of repentance set in.

The success of the series of Alsace-Lorraine dances in the new café of the Lorraine hotel for the Free Milk for France fund has prompted the committee to start a second series. These dances have been a source of increasing interest to the after theater crowd.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF THEODORE ROOSEVELT

INSTALLMENT XXXVI.

[Copyright: 1919: By the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.]

In endeavoring to get the "Rough Riders" equipped I met with some experiences which were both odd and instructive. There were not enough arms and other necessaries to go round, and there was keen rivalry among the intelligent and zealous commanders of the volunteer organizations as to who should get first choice. Wood's experience was what enabled us to equip ourselves in short order. There was another cavalry organization whose commander was at the war department about this time, and we had been eyeing him with much alertness as a rival.

One day I asked him what his plans were about arming and drilling his troops, who were of precisely the type of our own men. He answered that he expected "to give each of the boys two revolvers and a lariat, and then just turn them loose." I reported the conversation to Wood, with the result that we might feel ourselves safe from rivalry in that quarter; and safe we were.

In trying to get the equipment I met with checks and rebuffs, and in return was the cause of worry and concern to various bureau chiefs who were unquestionably estimable men in their private and domestic relations, and who doubtless had been good officers thirty years before, but who were as unfit for modern war as if they were so many smoothbores. One fine old fellow did his best to persuade us to take black powder rifles, explaining with paternal indulgence that no one yet really knew just what smokeless powder might do, and that there was a good deal to be said in favor of having smoke to conceal us from the enemy.

I saw this pleasing theory actually worked out in practice later on, for the national guard regiments with us at Santiago had black powder muskets, and the regular artillery black powder guns, and they really might almost as well have replaced these weapons by crossbows and mangonels. We succeeded, thanks to Wood, in getting the same cavalry carbines that were used by the regulars. We were determined to do this, not only because the weapons were good, but because this would in all probability mean that we were brigaded with the regular cavalry, which it was certain would be sent immediately to the front for the fighting.

Delays in Service.

There was one worthy bureau chief who was continually refusing applications of mine as irregular. In each case I would appeal to Secretary Alger—who helped me in every way—and get an order from him contenancing the irregularity. For instance, I found out that as we were nearer the July date than the January date for the issuance of clothing, and as it had long been customary to issue the winter clothing in July, so as to give ample leisure for getting it to all the various posts, it was therefore solemnly proposed to issue this same winter clothing to us who were about to start for a summer campaign in the tropics.

This would seem incredible to those who have never dealt with an inert officialdom, a red tape bureaucracy, but such is the fact. I rectified this and got an order for khaki clothing. We were then told we would have to advertise thirty days for horses. This meant that we would have missed the Santiago expedition. So I made another successful appeal to the secretary.

Other difficulties came up about wagons and various articles, and in each case the same result followed. On the last occasion, when I came up in triumph with the needed order the worried office head, who bore me no animosity, but who did feel that fate had been very unkind, threw himself back in his chair and exclaimed with a sigh: "O, dear! I had this office running in such good shape—and then along came the war and upset everything!" His feeling was that war was an illegitimate interruption to the work of the war department.

The regiment assembled at San Antonio. When I reached there the men, rifles, and horses, which were the essentials, were coming in fast, and the saddles, blankets, and the like were also accumulating. Thanks to Wood's exertions, when we reached Tampa we were rather better equipped than most of the regular regiments. We adhered strictly to field equipment, allowing no luxuries or anything else unnecessary, and so we were able to move off the field when ordered with our own transportation, leaving nothing behind.

I suppose every man tends to brag about his regiment, but it does seem to me that there never was a regiment better worth bragging about than ours. Wood was an exceptional commander, of great power, with a remarkable gift for organization. The rank and file were as fine natural fighting men as ever carried a rifle or rode a horse in any country or any age. We had a number of first class young fellows from the east, most of them from colleges like Harvard, Yale, and Princeton, but the great majority of the men were southwesterners, from the then territories of Oklahoma, Indian Territory, Arizona, and New Mexico.

They were accustomed to the use of firearms, accustomed to taking car of themselves in the open; they were intelligent and self-reliant; they possessed hardihood and endurance and physical prowess; and, above all, they had the fighting edge, the cool and resolute fighting temper. They went into the war with full knowledge, having deliberately counted the cost.

In the great majority of cases each man was chiefly anxious to find out what he should do to make the regiment a success. They bought, first and last, about 800 copies of the cavalry drill regulations and studied them industriously. Such men were practically soldiers to start with, in all the essentials. It is small wonder that with them as material to work upon the regiment was raised, armed, equipped, drilled, sent on trains to Tampa, embarked, disembarked, and put through two victorious offensive—not defensive—fights in which a third of the officers and one-fifth of the men were killed or wounded, all within sixty days. It is a good record, and it speaks well for the men of the regiment; and it speaks well for Wood.

Takes Charge of Drill.

Wood was so busy getting the regiment ready that when I reached San Antonio he turned most of the drilling of it over to me. This was a piece of great good fortune for me, and I drilled the men industriously, mounted and unmounted. I had plenty to learn, and the men and the officers even more; but we went at our work with the heartiest good will. We speedily made it evident that there was no room and no mercy for any man who shirked any duty, and we accomplished good results.

The fact is that the essentials of drill and work for a cavalry or an infantry regiment are easy to learn, which of course is not true for the artillery or the engineers or for the navy. The reason why it takes so long to turn the average civilized man into a good infantryman or cavalryman is because it takes a long while to teach the average untrained man to shoot, to ride, to march, to take care of himself in the open, to be alert, resourceful, cool, daring, and resolute, to obey quickly, as well as to be willing, and to fit himself, to act on his own responsibility. If he already possesses these qualities, there is very little difficulty in making him a soldier; all the drill that is necessary to enable him to march and to fight is of a simple character. Parade ground and barrack square maneuvers are of no earthly consequence in real war. When men can readily change from line to column, and column to line, can form front in any direction, and assemble and scatter, and can do these things with speed and precision, they have a fairly good grasp of the essentials. When our regiment reached Tampa it could already be handled creditably at fast gaits, and both in mass and extended formations, mounted and dismounted.

I had served three years in the New York National guard, finally becoming a captain. This experience was invaluable to me. It enabled me at once to train the men in the simple drill without which they would have been a mob; for although the drill requirements are simple, they are also absolutely indispensable. But if I had believed that my experience in the National Guard had taught me all that there was to teach about a soldier's career, it would have been better for me not to have been in it at all.

There were in the regiment a number of men who had served in the National guard, and a number of others who had served in the regular army. Some of these latter had served in the field in the west under campaign conditions, and were accustomed to long marches, privation, risk, and unexpected emergencies. These men were of the utmost benefit to the regiment. They already knew their profession and could teach and help the others.

But if the man had merely served in a national guard regiment or in the regular army at some post in a civilized country where he learned nothing except what could be picked up on the parade grounds, in the barracks, and in practice marches of a few miles along good roads, then it depended purely upon his own good sense whether he had been helped or hurt by the experience. If he realized that he had learned only 5 per cent of his profession, that there remained 95 per cent to accomplish before he would be a good soldier, why, he had profited immensely.

Start with Handicap.

To start with 5 per cent handicap was a very great advantage, and if the man was really a good man he could not be overtaken. But if the man thought that he had learned all about the profession of a soldier because he had been in the national guard or in the regular army under the conditions I have described, then he was actually of less use than if he had never had any military experience at all. Such a man was apt to think that nicety of alignment, precision in wheeling, and correctness in the manual of arms were the ends of training and the guarantees of good soldiership, and that from guard mounting to sentry duty everything in war was to be done in accordance with what he had learned in peace. As a matter of fact, most of what he had learned was never used at all and some of it had to be unlearned.

Almost all of the junior regular officers, and many of the senior regular officers, were fine men. But, through no fault of their own, had been forced to lead lives that fairly paralyzed their efficiency when the strain of modern war came on them. The routine elderly regular officer who knew nothing whatever of modern war was in most respects nearly as worthless as a raw recruit. The positions and commands prescribed in the text books were made into fetishes by some of these men, and treated as if they were the ends, instead the not always important means by which the ends were to be achieved.

In the Cuban fighting, for instance, it would have been folly for me to have taken my place in the rear of the regiment, the canonical text book position. My business was to be where I could keep most command over the regiment, and, in a rough-and-tumble, scrambling fight in thick jungle, this had to depend upon the course of events, and usually meant that I had to be at the front. I saw in that fighting more than one elderly regimental commander who unwittingly rendered the only service he could render to his regiment by taking up his proper position several hundred yards in the rear when the fighting began; for then the regiment disappeared in the jungle and for its good fortune the commanding officer never saw it again until long after the fight was over.

Leave for Tampa.

At San Antonio we entrained for Tampa. In various sociological books by authors of continental Europe there are jeremiads as to the way in which service in the great European armies, with their minute and machine-like efficiency and regularity, tends to dwarf the capacity for individual initiative among the officers and men. There is no such danger for any officer or man of a volunteer organization in America when our country, with playful lightheartedness, has pranced into war without making any preparation for it.

I know of no larger or finer field for the display of an advanced individualism than that which opened before us as we went from San Antonio to Tampa, camped there, and embarked on a transport for Cuba. Nobody ever had any definite information to give us, and whatever information we unearthed on our own account was usually wrong. Each of us had to show an alert and not overscrupulous self-reliance in order to obtain food for his men, provender for his horses, or transportation of any kind for any object.

One lesson early impressed on me was that if I wanted anything to eat it was wise to carry it with me, and if any new war should arise I would earnestly advise the men of every volunteer organization always to proceed upon the belief that their supplies will not turn up, and to take every opportunity of getting food for themselves.

Tampa was a scene of the wildest confusion. There were miles of tracks loaded with cars of the contents of which nobody seemed to have any definite knowledge. Gen. Miles, who was supposed to have supervision over everything, and Gen. Shafter, who had charge of the expedition, were both there. But, thanks to the fact that nobody had had any experience in handling even such a small force as ours—about 17,000 men—there was no semblance of order. Wood and I were bound that we should not be left behind when the expedition started. When we were finally informed that it was to leave next morning we were ordered to go to a certain track to meet a train. We went to the track, but the train never came. Then we were sent to another track to meet another train. Again it never came. However, we found a coal train, of which we took possession, and the conductor, partly under duress and partly in a spirit of friendly helpfulness, took us down to the quay.

Bedlam at Quay.

All kinds of other organizations—infantry and cavalry, regular and volunteer—were arriving at the quay and wandering around it, and there was no place where we could get any specific information as to what transport we were to have. Finally Wood was told to "get any ship you can get which is not already assigned." He borrowed without leave a small motor boat and commandeered the transport Yucatan. When asked by the captain what his authority was he reported that he was acting "by orders of Gen. Shafter," and directed the ship to be brought to the dock. He had already sent me word to be ready, as soon as the ship touched the pier, to put the regiment aboard her.

I found that she had already been assigned to a regular regiment, and to another volunteer regiment, and as it was evident that not more than half of the men assigned to her could possibly get on, I was determined that we should not be among the men left off. The volunteer regiment offered a comparatively easy problem. I simply marched my men past them to the allotted place and held the gangway. With the regulars I had to be a little more diplomatic, because their commander, a lieutenant colonel, was my superior in rank, and also doubtless knew his rights. He sent word to me to make way, to draw my regiment off to one side, and let his take possession of the gangway. I could see the transport coming in, and could dimly make out Wood's figure thereon.

Accordingly I played for time. I sent respectful requests through his officers to the commander of the regulars, entered into parleys, and made protestations, until the transport got near enough so that by yelling at the top of my voice I was able to get into a — highly constructive — communication with Wood. What he was saying I had no idea, but he was evidently speaking, and on my own responsibility I translated it into directions to hold the gangway, and so informed the regulars that I was under the orders of my superior and of a ranking officer, and—to my great regret, etc., etc.—could not give way as they desired. As soon as the transport was fast we put our men aboard at the double. Half of the regular regiment got on, and the other half and the other volutneer regiment went somewhere else.

We were kept several days on the transport, which was jammed with men, so that it was hard to move about on the deck. Then the fleet got under way and we steamed slowly down to Santiago. Here we disembarked, higgledy-piggledy, just as we had embarked. Different parts of different outfits were jumbled together, and it was no light labor afterwards to assemble the various batteries. For instance, one transport had guns, and another the locks for the guns; the two not getting together for several days after one of them had been landed. Soldiers went here, provisions there; and who got ashore first largely depended upon individual activity.

THIS GETS A LAUGH FROM SOME IN VAUDEVILLE

M'VICKER'S.

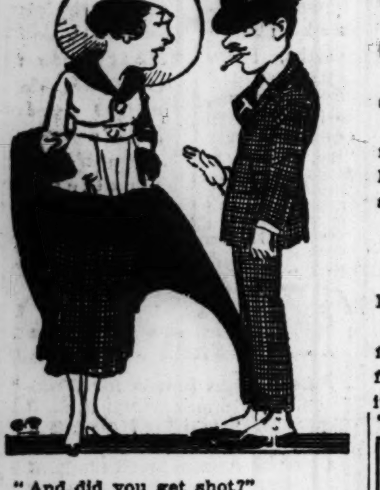
Jacque and Tone Weir:

"Well, if it isn't my old love, Jim!"

"Yep, that's me."

"You're not looking well. What has been happening to you?"

"Since I left you I became a soldier."



"And did you get shot?"

"O, yes; and I've had stitches in my side ever since."

"Well, why didn't you go and see a doctor?"

"I did."

"What did he say about you?"

"He said it was all right; it's just the bones knitting."

"Were you ever in battle?"

"Of course I was, and the first battle I was in—that's when I got shot."

"O, the first battle you were shot in."

"Of course."

"Then you must have been shot below the boundary."

"Didn't I just tell you I was shot in the side?"

"After you captured the hill, were there many dead left on the hill?"

"Dead? Why, the whole hillside was simply alive with dead soldiers."

"And when you were shot were you attended by a nurse?"

"Yes, indeed, and a pretty nurse, too. And what do you think?"

"I don't know."

"I asked her to marry me."

"And did she say yes?"

"Yes, and she promised to marry me when I got well."

"Then why didn't she?"

"She said that was only part of her treatment."

"What was part of her treatment?"

"To keep the patients cheerful."

"I suppose she tells each one the same thing?"

"Yes, she told me she promised to run away with a married man, one who had both his legs shot off. We had an awful polite fellow in our regiment."

"Who was he?"

"He was a Quaker."

"What made you think he was polite?"

"One day as we were fighting on the field one of the enemy appeared before him, so the Quaker said, 'Friend, it's very unfortunate, yet thee standest just where I am going to shoot,' and he blazed away and down came his man."

MAJESTIC.

Gladys Clark and Henry Bergman:

"What's your name?"

"Everybody calls me crazy."

"Why?"

"Because for eight years I have lived in Oak Park."

"I feel like 36 cents."

"You mean 30 cents."

"Well, 6 cents war tax."

RIALTO.

Pinto and Martelle:

"You hate yourself, don't you?"

"No. I'm on good terms with me."

"How long have you worked here?"

"On the 32d of last month it will be six years next September."

"And has the boss increased your wages?"

"O, yes; when I started I only got $11 a week."

"And now?"

"Now I get nine."

"What work do you do here?"

"As little as possible."

Slams of Life
By J. P. McEVOY

AIN'T IT THE TRUTH?

You have a nice assortment
Of stratagems profound,
That you are always showing off
When no one is around.
But when a visitor arrives
To whom we've sung your praise
You are a small but perfect boob,
In fifty-seven ways.

When we're alone, you're awful smart,
And stunts you have a score;
You know a coupla scales by heart,
And sing them o'er and o'er;
You dance with airy, fairy grace
When we're alone, somehow;
But when a stranger's in the place
You're graceful like a cow.

I tell my friends how cute you are—
Ingenious, clever, keen;
I praise you as a youthful star,
I boost your childish bean.
And when they come in gangs and herds
To see your wondrous tricks,
And hear your coruscating words,
Your brains are mostly nix.

It isn't right, it isn't fair,
Our plans to wreck and jam;
We always bill you for a bear
And you turn out a clam.
And when my friends have snuck away
You're clever as of yore.
I tell them . . . but they sadly say,
"We've heard that stuff before."

News of the Religious World

Baptists Want Big Fund for Benevolent Work

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

BAPTISTS are in a campaign which closes March 31 to raise $6,000,000 for the benevolent boards of the church. Last Sunday was the date fixed for the completion of $1,992,464, the total which was apportioned to the churches to be raised by general contributions. During ten days early in March a special drive will be made to secure large gifts from individuals to supplement gifts already obtained. The amount which must come from individual gifts if the total is raised is $3,396,321. It is planned to have the full amount of $6,000,000 paid in by March 31.

Last year the Baptist churches of the Baptist northern convention raised a total of $3,766,526, including the special war emergency fund of $1,000,000. The excess over last year which must be raised to meet this year's total is $2,233,474.

The way in which the $6,000,000 will be apportioned to the various objects is as follows: Foreign missionary society, $1,637,273; women's foreign missionary society, $697,282; home missionary society, $425,462; publications society, $304,464; ministers and missionaries' benefit board, $869,000; board of education, $200,000; war commission, $100,000; publicity, expenses, emergencies, and advance work, $777,058.

The amount apportioned to the churches is $407,541 more than was paid in from the same source last year. It is said not more than one-third of the membership of the churches gave anything last year to the benevolent boards and the aim this year is to make the proportion of givers much larger as well as to receive larger gifts from those who have previously given. The campaign is called the victory campaign and the advice of the leaders is that a church which exhibits the statistics of its church membership with pride will not fail to make the statistics mean more than mere figures.

The chairman for Illinois is Senator Francis W. Parker; state treasurer, Charles R. Holden; and state director, the Rev. Dr. T. L. Ketman, 125 North Wabash avenue.

Meetings in the interest of the campaign are scheduled on the following dates: Port Byron, March 3; Monmouth, March 4; Aledo, March 5; Berwick, March 6; Wyanet, March 7, and Osceola, March 9. Among the speakers will be the Rev. J. B. Brown, "Some Studies of the Soil"; the Rev. B. E. Allen, "Church Efficiency," and the Rev. C. G. Bromley, "Missionary Work in India and Its Bearing on Life in Illinois."

Dr. Rupert Blue, surgeon general of the United States public health service, has sent a request to all pastors in the United States to observe today as health Sunday in order to carry over into the period of peace the stringent and successful measures which were in operation in the army and navy during the war to prevent the spread of contagious diseases caused by vice. The question is not an easy one to present in the pulpit and the department of public health has furnished printed information which can be distributed. An address has also been furnished which can be read in the pulpit setting forth the need of law enforcement, medical measures, education, and provision for wholesome recreation. Church leaders regard the request coming from Washington as significant of its importance and of the confidence had in the churches as agencies through which beneficial results can be obtained.

There will be a recognition service for returned soldiers and sailors today at 11 a. m. at St. Paul's on the Midway Universalist church, 6010 Dorchester avenue, the Rev. L. Ward Brigham, pastor.

The Rev. B. L. Smith, lieutenant in the marine service the last two years, has been added to the staff of the Episcopal Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul. Lieut. Smith is a graduate of St. Alban's school, Trinity college, and the Western Theological seminary. He will preach today at 11 o'clock.

Archbishop G. W. Mundelein of Chicago made the address last Thursday at the Catholic university in Washington, D. C., at the golden jubilee of Cardinal Gibbons. The address was a eulogy on the career and character of Cardinal Gibbons, whom he characterized as "America's first citizen."

Eight priests from the faculty of Notre Dame university, Indiana, served as chaplains in the war and 2,000 of the students and alumni. A memorial is in preparation in which all the names will be recorded.

The Rev. Charles F. Wishart, D.D.

Dr. Wishart will occupy his pulpit today at 11 o'clock in the Second Presbyterian church, Twentieth street and Michigan avenue, for the first time since Thanksgiving. The last month he and Mrs. Wishart have spent in California. Dr. Wishart and his entire family were among those most severely stricken with influenza. The California trip was made possible by a gift of over $1,100 presented by the women of the congregation on Christmas day. Tomorrow evening a banquet will be given in the church gymnasium in recognition of his return.

Dr. Wishart has been pastor of the Second church since 1914. He is a graduate of Monmouth college and of the Pittsburgh Theological seminary and took special work in oratory at the University of Chicago. He was the winner in intercollegiate and interstate oratorical contests. He was the founder of the Eleventh United Presbyterian church of Pittsburgh, where he led in the erection of a large stone church edifice. He then became professor in the Pittsburgh seminary and from there came to the Second Presbyterian church of Chicago. He is a member of the University and the Beverly Country clubs.

Many churches will recognize today as Boy Scout Sunday and will also make it the occasion of honoring returning soldiers and sailors. The Chicago council of Boy Scouts of America is asking for $100,000 to finance the work in Chicago for the coming year.

The Ravenswood Presbyterian church Sunday school will observe today as "Old Shoes day." This is an annual observance in this Sunday school. Arrangements are made for repairing and distributing the shoes to the worthy poor, and if persons do not care to bring the shoes they will be sent for by volunteers from the Sunday school.

The Illinois district of the Walther league, representing a membership in Lutheran churches of 4,000, will meet in annual convention today at St. Mark's Lutheran church, Twenty-third street and California avenue. Preparation will be made for the international convention to be held in Chicago in July. The Walther league has completed a fund of $30,000 for the soldiers' camps overseas.

The annual day of prayer for missions, under the auspices of the interdenominational committee of the central west, for missions representing seventeen denominations and over twenty national boards of home and foreign missions, will be held next Thursday in the woman's building of the Moody Bible institute. The morning session will be from 10:30 to 12:30 and the afternoon session from 2 to 3:30. Mrs. C. F. Vickers, chairman of the interdenominational committee, will preside.

The fifteenth session of the Winona summer school of missions will be held at Winona Lake, Ind., June 19-26; the first session of the school at Lake Geneva, Wis., will be held June 26-July 3, and a luncheon at which the interests of these schools will be presented will be held at Marshall Field's at 12:30, April 7.

The Chicago Church federation will meet for dinner tomorrow evening at 6 o'clock in the Hotel La Salle to hear the enlarged plans of the federation. The first 500 applications are given complimentary tickets. It is expected the number will exceed 500. The speakers will be the Rev. Roy B. Guild of New York, Judge Victor P. Which, you may see, places the wife in an ward position.

Finally the stranger's memory is re- and he is quite upset to dis- the trick that has been put upon him. Also he realizes that he has fallen hopelessly in love with his alleged wife. And she, in turn, confesses a heart interest in him. But neither knows what to do. The conclusion is fixed for them by the capture of the murderer and his self-destruction rather than face trial.

Being well acted "The Net" is a much more interesting entertainment than it may sound. Kathleen MacDonell is the unhappy wife, Charles Millward, returned from a long vacation in the studios, is the forgetful stranger; Byron Beasley the bad husband, and both Charles Dalton and Ben Johnson have important rôles. Maravene Thompson, novelist, is the author.

When John Tainter Foote wrote "Toby's Bow" he expected that the actor who played it would choose the part of Toby himself, an aged Negro servant, because it really is the star part of the play. But it happens that the manuscript, after a series of travels to and from managers' offices, fell into the hands of John D. Williams, who needed a light comedy for Norman Trevor, a favorite English player, and he decided to do it with Mr. Trevor playing the straight part of an American novelist and to give Toby to George Marion.

Marion years ago was something of an actor, scoring one of his bigger successes, as I remember it, in "The College Widow." But he gave up acting to become a stage director, and has confined his attention to that division ever since. He went on as Toby, however—and the next day, or soon thereafter, the streets and the clubs in the theater district were singing his praises. He had scored the hit of his career, and his performance was frankly linked with those of Leo Ditrichstein and Mrs. Fiske as being one of the histrionic high spots of a fairly spotless winter.

The ancient Toby is a delightfully sympathetic character drawing, played with infinite care, detailed down to the flicker of an eyebrow. Long in the service of the old Virginia family he serves, Toby refuses to recognize with his famous "family bow" any but members of the family. Thus the young novelist recuperating in Virginia after being down on his luck in New York and started for hell and Greenwich village via the liquor route, has to marry the proud daughter of the south to be so recognized by the old Negro. A simple tale, but human and heart-warming. Norman Trevor and Doris Rankin play the novelist and the girl.

The juvenile felt that he was being treated unfairly by his sweetheart, and he did not trust the men with whom she apparently preferred to be. Subconsciously, it may be, he thought that some day he would be even with all of them. He was at Lake George at the time and starting back for New York. Waiting for his train at the station, he picked up a copy of "The Count of Monte Cristo" and began to read. Slowly the scene changed, and out of the pages of the old romance stepped Mercedes and Fernand, Danglars, Haydee, Edmond Dantes, and the rest. Thus the dreaming juvenile becomes "Monte Cristo Jr."

That is how they start the story of the midwinter extravaganza at the Winter Garden. It is not exactly a new trick, but it is as effective as ever and serves its intended purpose. As the juvenile dreams there unfolds an alternately comic and extravagant review of the Monte Critan adventures, with the chorus, as Comrade Broun says, making "its annual stand for the freedom of the knees."

There is clog dancing at the Chateau d'If, and a row of comic prisoners, but when Edmond Dantes comes to escape he does so in a moving picture sea of impressive realism dashing against the back drop and breaking into spray against the wings and tormentors—not meaning the stage hands. There is a water nymph ballet on the Island of Monte Cristo, also a cave of jewels, animate and inanimate, considerable ballet dancing, hundreds of gorgeous costumes, acres of powdered epidermis and bushels of brilliants.

The cast is also impressive, with Charles Purcell, Audrey Maple, Sam Ash, the Watson sisters, the Dooley brothers, Chic Sale, Tom Lewis, Ralph Herz, Adelaide and Hughes, Flore Ravelles, and a newcomer who promises to be a Broadway favorite soon—a one time Chicago stenographer named Esther Walker. Miss Walker sings songs and patters along entertainingly.

Cut Your Shoe Bills With Neolin Shoes

"The answer to the problem of shoe wear lies in the use of Neolin Soles"—so says H. L. Evans of Steubenville, Ohio.

"For five months," says Mr. Evans, "I have been wearing the same pair of Neolin-soled shoes at my work at the La Belle Iron Works and they are good for two months' more wear. As my work takes me to all parts of the mill daily, where I have to walk over cinders, slags, etc., it is simply out of the question to buy anything else to take the place of Neolin Soles."

You, too—and your whole family—will find Neolin-soled shoes wear long and so save money. You can get them in the styles you like at almost any good shoe store. And any repairman will re-sole your worn shoes with Neolin Soles—scientifically made to be durable, comfortable and waterproof. They are made by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, who also make Wingfoot Heels—guaranteed to outwear any other heels.

Quick, Safe Way to Remove Hairs

Keep a little Delatone powder on your dressing table and when ugly, hairy growths appear, make a paste with a little of the powder and some water, apply and let remain on the hairy surface for two or three minutes, then rub off, wash the skin, and the hairs have vanished. This treatment is quite harmless and rarely more than one application is required, but to avoid disappointment care should be used to buy the real Delatone.

Remarkable Health Protection Plan of Physical Examination (Directed By the Physicians of Mudlavia and Their Associates) Showing Your Condition of Health

You can now know the intimate, vital facts which concern your physical welfare (in strict confidence for your information only). In other words, "Know thyself."

If you have aches or pains, if you suffer from lassitude, or nervousness, or high blood pressure, if you have any symptom whatever of present or coming disability, you can have, without leaving home, a complete, expert physical examination which will tell the cause of it—you can know the trouble—and what to do for it.

Even if you feel well and strong, you can make sure that your belief is correct—or you can learn of any possible hidden trouble which if not removed may later bring ill health.

You will know yourself as you really are—you will be told by physicians whose word is authoritative. Whatever you may think of your condition, whether you have any ailment or feel sound in every way, you should at least be fair to yourself—find out just where you stand. At least write. Ask for detailed facts about this Health Protection Plan.

The Mudlavia Health Protection Plan for Every One

This plan which, without leaving your home, gives you such vitally important information is offered by the medical staff of the famous Mudlavia Health Resort at Kramer, Indiana—in co-operation with physicians of the highest standing in your own locality.

For thirty years Mudlavia has been helping ailing people back to health and has been helping well people to stay well. And now its service is to be extended to those who cannot come to Mudlavia—it is to protect you—to help prevent illness by uncovering the signs which call for action before serious difficulties arise.

For years people everywhere have wanted such a service. It is the opinion of the best scientists and physicians that this protective examination should be used by every one. Those who came to Mudlavia always received it. Thousands and thousands of others would have been saved suffering and expense if they could have had it. Now all can have it. Anyone, anywhere, can benefit from the vast experience of the institution which now sends this message to the world.

Thousands Yearly Helped By Mudlavia

What gives this Health Protection Plan—with its physical examination—importance is the fact that Mudlavia is back of it.

Nearly everybody knows of Mudlavia and its famous treatment based on elimination—which means the driving of poisons out of the body—a treatment which every year brings relief to thousands. They come with rheumatism in its various forms, or with aches and pains from other causes, high blood pressure or a general "run-down" condition, and leave free from suffering and with every nerve and muscle relieved of its tension ready again for life's work.

Physicians send patients here for treatment which is given in strict co-operation with their own instructions plus the advantages offered by the Mudlavia Treatment, the spring waters, the prescribed diet and the restful atmosphere which surrounds the beautiful hotel resort situated among the hills and valleys of western Indiana.

Here has been gathered a staff of medical specialists who have at their command every modern facility for pathological investigation in perfectly equipped laboratories and who have had the broadest opportunities for the study of every phase of human ailments.

It is this medical staff which has devised the Mudlavia Health Protection Plan for Physical Examination. Their experience is brought to your very door—you receive their actual analysis of your condition at home. If you value your health learn what this means to you.

You Need This Service Now

Everybody needs it. You are not an exception—no matter how you feel. "How strange," you say, when you hear of some friend who has gone, "He looked so well—seemed to feel so well."

That man might have lived for years had he known himself as he really was. And others become invalids who could in the same way have been saved from wreckage—just by finding out and heeding the warnings.

No argument needed to convince the ailing ones of their need to know. Now there is no excuse for them not to know. Mudlavia offers this special physical examination, which will find every weak spot or show you that you are well—just as the case may be. Why not make sure of yourself?

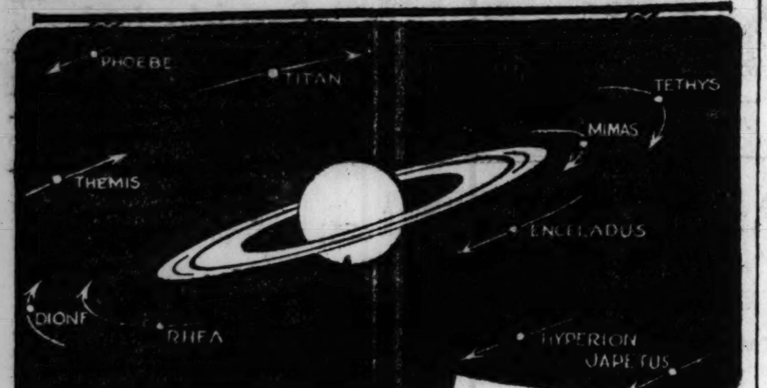
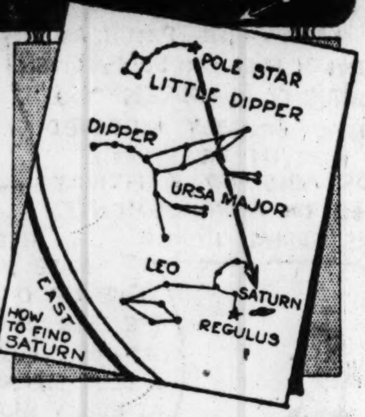
ASTRONOMY



SATURN'S FAMILY
DRAWN by S.F. MAXWELL



SATURN AND ITS RINGS.

WHY does the earth lie 93,000,000 miles from the sun? Why not 83,000,000 or an even 100,000,000? Such questions are legitimate ones in the minds of those who study the heavens.

It does not suffice to say that it merely happens to be a fact. Nothing ever "just happens," in the strict sense of the word. There is always some rule which applies, and everything that exists obeys definite and immutable laws.

The solar system is in equilibrium and has remained so since it was a nebula, many ages ago. Stable laws are governing the positions of the planets. The planet Saturn furnishes us with an example which is easily understood.

Saturn is surrounded by a thin, flat ring. This ring is neither in one solid piece nor yet made of liquids, but is composed of myriads of tiny moons. Each moonlet pursues an independent course around Saturn, but there are so many of them that it produces the effect of continuous sheets. Saturn also has ten large moons just outside the ring. Being further from Saturn, they revolve more slowly than the moonlets.

The ring, it is found, has empty rifts in places, while the moonlets are densely crowded in other zones. This emptiness and crowding embodies the germ of truth which explains all planetary positions.

It will be found that the position of an empty space in the ring is an exact commensurate of the period of revolution of some moon. Thus the moonlets which would ordinarily travel in the space occupied by Cassini's division, the largest of the rifts, revolve twice around Saturn, while Mimas, the nearest moon outside the ring, revolves once. At every second revolution the moonlets and Mimas are running together in parallel paths, and Mimas, by its superior power of attraction, drags them out of their orbits. The sheets of moonlets in the crowded zones occupy places as near as possible to exact incommensurability with the disturbing moons, so that no one moonlet will be kept in line with a moon long enough to be thrown out of its course.

This, in a broader sense, is what happens in the entire solar system. Although separated by many millions of miles, the planets interfere with each other to an appreciable extent, and have pulled and tugged at each other until the whole solar system has arranged itself in such a fashion that their mutual perturbations have the least effect.

Saturn is conveniently placed for an easy identification. It is in the constellation of Leo, rising early in the evening. Leo represents a crouching lion and Saturn [illegible] between his paws. An imaginary line drawn from the north star through the shoulder of the Great Bear passes close to Saturn. Saturn shines with a steady yellowish luster and is much brighter than any other star in its vicinity.

By Guy F. Lee.

Once they staggered beneath the load,
  Titles and medals and cash and credit;
Homage and hullabaloo bestowed
  Every which way on them—you said it!
They were the high-cockalorum kids,
  Cream of the cheese, oh, quite so, Steven!
But they have slidden the well known skids,
  And where are the Nobs of Yestereven?

Wilhelm and Karl, his Sultanic Nibs,
  Crown Prince Fritz of the Six Humdingers;
Constantine, Ferdy, and lesser Squibs,
  Erst of the gang of Royal Stringers;
Jack Johnson, alias the Spanish Flu,
  Pests who are jests that reek to heaven,
All have bid us a last adieu,
  Where are the Nobs of Yestereven?

Gone, with the Never-Do-Returns,
  Gone where the storied woodbine twineth,
Gone where the whangdoodle yearns and burns,
  And for his first born whineth, pineth;
Sent to the tall, uncut Skidoo,
  Banished forever, and no one grievin';
Lost in the Land of Hopes Askew:
  There are the Nobs of Yestereven!

Oh, that he, also, boards the gig

De Palma Smashes World's Records on Goodyear Cords

When Ralph De Palma shattered a galaxy of world's automobile speed records at Daytona Beach on Lincoln's Birthday, he rode on Goodyear Cord Tires.

As his Packard Special bulleted forward in its furious attempt against time, perhaps the heaviest strains of the test were concentrated on these tires.

Think of the intense heat and friction resisted by his Goodyear Cord Tires, revolving 1500 times per minute on a soft beach!

Think of this gruelling contest being kept up for 20 miles at the rate of nearly 150 miles per hour, the fastest time ever made by a self-propelled vehicle on mother earth.

We wish you could have seen De Palma's Goodyear Cord Tires at the end of the ordeal, looking fresh and unscathed.

You might have realized then that their spectacular performance meant more than their return to all motor activities, following a brief scarcity during the war.

It meant that Goodyear Cord Tires are now being built to meet even larger expectations of mileage, heavier tasks, more varied service than at any previous time.

It meant that although the superiorities of these tires may cost a little more in the beginning, more than ever now they cost less in the end.

Your nearest Goodyear Service Station is now prepared to supply Goodyear Cord Tires for your car.

Go to this station and get these tires—and yourself enjoy the kind of tire-goodness that carried De Palma to victory.

Fittedfor Utmost Service

—Yet These Are Low-Cost Cars

The Oakland Sensible Six is designed and constructed to do everything that a fine automobile is expected to do, to serve unusually well and long and yet to deliver this service on a basis of minimum ultimate cost.

The overhead-valve high-speed engine delivers 1 horsepower to every 48 pounds in the touring model. Still this high-power for hill climbing, quick getaways and hard, steady long-distance work is delivered economically—costing less per horsepower than in other cars, for Oaklands run 18 to 25 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

Consider the size of the family models—the touring car and the sedan—in which careful design has contrived 110 inches of body room on the 112 inch wheelbase. This gives a solid suggestion of Oakland value.

Style Cars for Everyday Use

The combination of beauty, power, comfort and thrift of the Oakland Sedan and Coupe is not equaled in any other year 'round cars built.

They are smart carriages, charming for social occasions and practical for general utility, which require but a minimum outlay for a family's or an individual's automobile transportation—figuring ownership and operation together.

Italian Garden" Feature in Local Artists' Exhibit

as dawn of a summer's day, ve slept curled in the heart of a rose,
d by the beat of a butterfly's wings,
ing such dreams as no man knows

as noon of a summer's day.
ve sprang' awake from the passion flower,
purple and red he garlanded him,
d played with the joy of the passing hour.

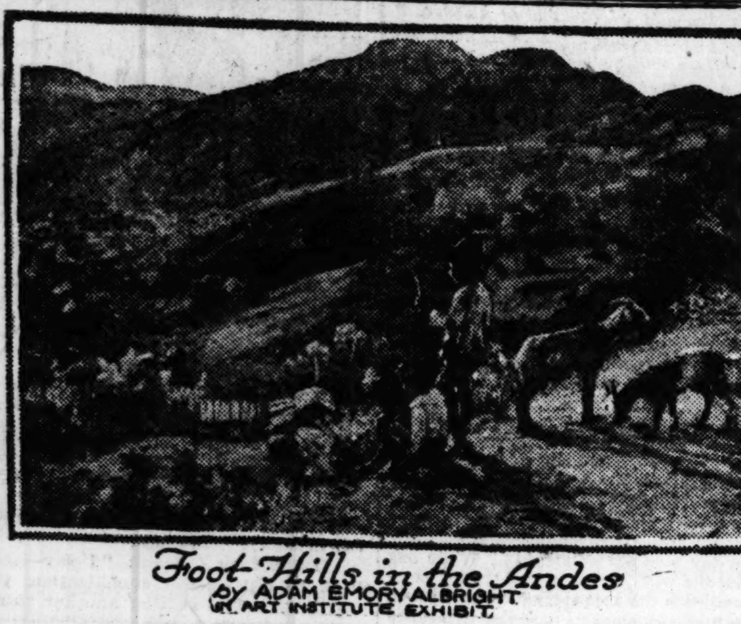
as dusk of a summer's day,
ve lay alone in the black nightshade—
d, dead, with a broken heart—
d the play, and the one that played.

was in an old, forgotten garden, where the red of the sun had faded into the blue of twilight, and the thin, silver disk of the moon rose ously to the liquid summons of nightingale, singing his heart out a thicket fragrant with roses. In center of the garden was a green tain, where the water fell musi- y, telling off the hours on its crystal ry. And man passed by outside. passion struggled and dawned and d within.

mund S. Campbell, in "An Italian den at Sunset," has stayed a little the wondrous magic of this forgot- garden. The water color hangs in present exhibit of paintings by Chi- artists in the new wing of the Art itute. It possesses that charm so ficult of definition, but which is as gerous as the soporific instigations the lotus. The world were well lost ld one tread at will that sunset out of the cool green depths where thrush and lark sing, and the blos- bloom in fragrant perfection, ring- the green pool with their soft fin- down the narrow path of the ris- moon, beyond the broad highway crimson that widens and fades with fading of the day.

Cornelius Botke, in "A Nocturn," ves a little, too, with the spirit of t. Beside the blue-purple, unrip- d surface of a lake rise slim towers the star studded sky. A path ds past the water, and tall cypress gs its every turn. Down an open h wanders the figure of a woman, d in her beauty to the nakedness the night sky. And dusk rides apace ugh the purple shadows. A shiver- g, gloating, daring, irresistible dusk is more treacherous than twilight, powerful than dark. It floats along the ground. The gray that clothe it fly out be- catch on the branches and catch and tear and drop in of mist over the earth, until world is shimmering in a veil of purple that folds it then, suddenly, changes, dis- deepens, hardens, takes body, the velvet, broad sweeping, black, sheltering wings of night.



Foot Hills in the Andes
BY ADAM EMORY ALBRIGHT
IN ART INSTITUTE EXHIBIT.

And the twilight mystery is again told in "The Outpost," by Edgar S. Cameron. There is gray sand, stretching for miles under a gray sky. On a slight rise stands a gray house, perhaps a chapel, and outside, tied with a loosely knotted rope, a horse, himself a shadow, is picketed against the coming of other ghosts.

The portraits by Cecil Clark Davis in this exhibition are interesting. "Lionel Barrymore" is a clever painting of that clever actor's mobile features. The likeness of Sam Sothern in "Dear Brutus" is possibly more artistic, but not less excellent. "Miss Thayer" is a charming study.

There opened at the Arts club last Tuesday afternoon an exhibition of paintings by Canals and André, and an exhibit of convulsive modernism by a group of contortionate, acrobatic, American modernists.

The pictures by André are charming, though not perhaps particularly vital. There is about them, as Paul Bartlett suggested, a little of the feeling for mass color that is found in the painting of Renoir. This is possibly shown best in "La Femme à la Promenade," a portrait of a young girl walking, accompanied by a rather large, ungainly dog, with on either hand soft reaches of grass, as though André had dipped his brush in velvet and rolled it on with never a thought as to the sacredness of the individual blade.

The color throughout the group of paintings is unusually good, clear, pure, a trifle hard. Personally I prefer the still life of Canals to that of André. "Nature Morte Fleurs Tasse et Oranges," by Canals, is really lovely. On the other hand, "Laurier Rose et Fruits," by André, is cleverly done, but "Poires et Raisins" rather puckers one's mouth, the pears are so undoubtedly green and firm.

In Canals' paintings the most vital feature is his masterly control of spirited movement in color. The exuberant swaying of the figures in "Danseuses Espagnols" is almost instantaneously conveyed to the spectator, and one hears the clacking of the castinets and the pungent cracking of the fingers as the impatient, graceful dancers follow the changing steps of the dance. In the "Bal Champetre" we find the same movement. The "Combat de Tauraux" is full of color and vigorous action, and, though bull fighting is not a sympathetic sport to a northern mind, yet the dusty arena with its beasts and men, and the hot rows of seats filled with gesticulating crowds give an impression of momentary excitement that thrills nearly as much as a scene would showing the close of a horse race, on a well run course.

It seems almost a desecration of art to give even a second's serious contemplation to the grotesque canvases displayed in the exhibit of American modernists. In the first place, the pictures belie their title. They are not modern. They date back with their affected curves and outrageous forms, their cubist tendencies and flattened traceries, to that time at least ten years ago, when it was the fashion to be madly, paintfully incomprehensible.

There are in this present exhibition only two sketches that are at all possible. These form part of a series painted by Maurice Stern, and the one is "A Burmese Dancer" and the other a sketch of "Three Boys." They are not so bad. But go from them across the room and examine the hybrid product of William Zorach and Marguerite Zorach. William shows a rare conception of a seaside scene. He calls it "Man and Child on Beach." It might be called anything, with equally good results. There are a pryamided set of colors, against which in silhouette are two bullet headed figures, with their backs to us, staring blankly into nothing. Above them in a circle rides a wooden ship with paper sails upon a thread of ruffled blue water.

Rare as this is, the pictures by Marguerite Zorach are more rare. "The Garden" should be preserved under glass. A group of prehistoric persons, thick necked, grotesque, wooden, immobile, fantastically perverted bodily and facially, are watching with slanted, beady eyes, the peculiar growths which might be, in a commoner scene, that of beans, and squash, and pumpkins. But, to go this one better, one has but to look at "The New England Family" by this same artist—though in this a trace of ironical humor might be said to save what little of the day it is humanly possible to save.

There is not space, nor have I the inclination, to dilate further on this type of picture, and, indeed, there is scarcely need for it, because no one in their right mind would give more than a passing glance at these rather pitiful leanings towards the unattainable — the incomprehensibility of beauty.

The group of sculpture by Hunt Diederich in this same room is good. The Sea Lion is particularly likeable, probably because he feels, and knows himself to be, so far above the clamorous crudities upon the walls.

The Chicago Camera club has at present on exhibition a number of prints by B. F. Langland. They are, some of them, charming. "At Midnight" is almost as perfect as an engraving. A church is shown dark against a darker, storm swept sky. In "Haunt of the Winds" we see a cliff breaking off sheer into a valley of mist, and crowned by a clump of slim, crowding trees. His landscape is interesting, showing a stretch of fertile fields blocked out with heavy forest growth. "The Dusty Road" is full of the smell and heat of summer. Two teams of horses follow each other through the sand, and the dry particles fly up from the wheels and hoofs, filling the air with scintillating, golden clouds of dust. "Cats Cradle" shows two little children with their nurse, and "The Young Student" shows a clever study.

It may be of interest to note that the Camera club is going to move soon into new quarters in the Northwestern Univeristy building.

Finding a Market for the Producer

WITHOUT a market, agriculture could not be the basis of our national prosperity that it is. Marketing turns production into wealth and those agencies that help farmers find profitable outlets are important aids to the country's welfare. Stripped of all discussion, the function of the packers is to find markets. Because of their success in doing this, Armour and Company are today "The American Farmer's Biggest Customer."

Outlets must be maintained for normal supply. Foreign sales must be developed for excess yield. In a shortage of any product, acceptable alternatives must be distributed to relieve the need and to keep markets ready when the yield is again heavy. Fresh commodities which will not bear transportation, and would thus be unprofitable to produce, must be packaged for reserve use elsewhere. There must be manufacture and sale of all by-products. And these are among the services which Armour and Company render—one of the economic reasons why we handle food in so many different forms.

To perform efficiently, our entire system has to operate as a whole. It will not function piecemeal. Our preparation plants, at points where foods are grown, would become choked without our four hundred Branch Houses absorbing production. Our Branches, carrying the several days' reserve supply that makes users well nigh independent of railroad uncertainties, must continually wage a competitive fight for sales. We must finance producers for the thirty, sixty or ninety days necessary—pay cash for raw products, and then prepare, transport and sell on customary credits. Our refrigerator cars have to be steadily carrying the supply forward to the tables of the nation. As the Interstate Commerce Commission in its report of August last says:

> "The carriers (railroads) of the country could not so effectively handle the entire refrigerator car equipment as is now done by the intervention of private owners. The meat packer could no more do business on an economical and efficient basis without his private cars than he could without his modern equipped refining or packing plant."

Marketing, however, does not consist merely in taking what producers offer and selling it. Scientific selling must begin with the best growing of those foods the country most needs. To this end our Farm Bureau was inaugurated—as a point of contact with growers and to help bring about a better understanding of mutual problems.

And it is largely because Armour and Company are thus continuously working to market the products of the American farm that you are sure of steady food supply. Understanding this, you must appreciate that in asking your dealer for Armour Products, you are lending your support to a system that works to the country's economic good and to your own best interest.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

"A damneder scoundrel God Almighty never permitted to disgrace Humanity," said George Washington of Edmund Randolph at a time when Edmund Randolph was particularly obnoxious.

"Your impertinent letter," he wrote to a man who had shown cowardice in action at Great Meadows, "was delivered to me yesterday. As I am not accustomed to receive such from any man, nor would have taken the same language from you personally without letting you feel some marks of my resentment, I would advise you to be cautious in writing me a second of the same tenor."

"One hundred thousand dollars will be but a flea bite," was his remark on a contemplated appropriation by congress—for preparedness.

The George Washington who said these things was not the mythical Washington foisted on the American schoolboy. The mythical Washington, who did not lie about the cherry tree, is not an adequate explanation of so vigorous a nation as the United States has been. It was not the mythical Washington who sired the United States.

The father of our country was the man whose vigorous language has been quoted. He would be saying things even more vigorously if he were alive today. He found a great deal to disagree with in the colonies and in the United States after they ceased to be colonies. He made himself disagreeable whenever there was anything to be gained for the United States by doing so.

Thus Washington as a lieutenant colonel of the Virginia troops, posted on the borders to keep the Indians in check, could not keep the Indians from burning because he had insufficient men and doubtful authority; nor could he keep his temper in check. He was 25 years old and trying to overcome the stupidity of a colonial government in the matter of defense.

"My orders are dark, doubtful, and uncertain; today approved, tomorrow condemned." And he wrote a friend, after a series of political assaults on him from disgruntled officers, "As to Col. C's gross and infamous reflections on my conduct last spring, it will be needless, I dare say, to observe further at this time than that the liberty which he has pleased to allow himself in sporting with my character is little else than a comic entertainment, discovering at one view his passionate fondness for your friend, his inviolable love of truth, his unfathomable knowledge, and the masterly strokes of his wisdom in displaying it." It was his way of calling Col. C. a liar.

But at this time, as always, he was absolutely trusted by the people he was trying to defend from the outrages of the Indians, and Gov. Dinwiddie could not damage his hold on them.

Washington loved a fight as much as he hated inefficient backing for his fights. If he ever got over the excitement of contest, it was not until he was an old man. When he wrote, after his first brush with the Indians and the French, "I heard the bullets whistle, and believe me there is something charming in the sound," his letter got into the English papers and won for him the reputation of a brave young braggart.

But when there was not some public duty of this nature he did not hold office or play politics. He went to his estate and practiced the strenuous life he believed in.

"1768, Jan. 8th. Started a fox and run him four hours. Took the hounds off at night." "Mar. 2. Catched a fox with a bob'd tail and cut ears after 7 hours chase, in which most of the dogs were worsted."

Perhaps that could be expected of him. A colonial gentleman of large estate was, of course, strenuous in his sports. But we should hardly expect the same colonial gentleman to define for himself and his friends the exact attitude which the struggling colonies should maintain toward their French allies.

Washington was pleased to accept French aid, but he foresaw the irritations and misunderstandings which alliances engender. He had to settle them when they occurred. He knew that the enthusiasm over French aid would be exaggerated by the people and the army. He knew also that if the French aid failed—as it did for various reasons—there would be offensive, outspoken criticism of the French. But he chiefly feared a diplomatic entanglement which would leave the young United States at the mercy of European diplomacy.

"It is a maxim," he wrote about the proposed French expedition into Canada, "founded on the universal experience of mankind, that no nation is to be trusted farther than it is bound by its own self-interest."

Washington's record as a general is, of course, well enough known. He accomplished a victory over England, but chiefly he accomplished the freedom of the United States and later maintained that freedom.

It is difficult to conceive in these days of cable and telegraph how any one could achieve celebrity and personal popularity which became Washington's. He had to establish rules governing tourists visiting Mount Vernon. (They were simple. Any one might come who was not drunk. But visitors were to be given only claret unless they were personal friends, which might be allowed the refreshment of Madeira.)

Without photography and telegraphs and railroads he gained a popularity among the people which only one other American has ever approximated. He gained it without any concessions to popularity.

It is amazing that America allowed such a man to be mummified as he has been. They could not do it while he was alive. But the original tea and cakes spirit, embodied in an itinerant parson named Weems, began to make out of him an engraving fit to adorn a good book for bad children.

They made him bloodless and turned him into a figurette to fit their theories. That Washington was a myth. The real Washington was a man.

We wish George Washington were alive. We had a reëmbodiment of his vigor at Sagamore Hill, but that too is gone. We need the real George Washington in America today, not the myth of him.

OLSON FOR MAYOR.

We believe it will be a good thing for Chicago if Mayor Thompson is not reëlected. We believe it was a bad thing for Chicago when he was elected.

When he was a candidate four years ago he said that it was his real desire to do something for the city, to be elected as its mayor, to serve it and be of genuine service to it.

There is no good reason for failure if a man with the ancestry and traditions and experience of William Hale Thompson has this idea.

Thompson was then a man of questionable political associations, but there was much that was good in his experiences and there was hope that he meant what he said. He was of good stock and of attractive personality.

He has failed in everything that could be hoped for him and has succeeded in most things which could be feared of him. It will be a good thing for the city of Chicago if he is not returned to office.

He might be eliminated in the Republican primaries. He might be defeated in the election. If he is eliminated in the primaries the city may go into the election with better prospects.

Against him in the Republican primaries are two men who, in spite of the faults which seem to be inherent in politics, are in the main excellent. The trouble is there are two of them. If there were one there would be a better chance of upsetting the organization which Thompson has created and of defeating the particularly disagreeable vote which will be cast for him.

Merriam has an excellent record. Olson has an excellent record. But one undesirable candidate may beat two good ones because it is one against two, which is a bad thing unless it be in politics. Then it may be a good thing for the bad candidate.

THE TRIBUNE does not care whether Thompson is mayor of Chicago or not except as it cares for the city. Thompson, reëlected or defeated, cannot hurt THE TRIBUNE. Reëlected or defeated he cannot help THE TRIBUNE. He is negligible to this newspaper organization. There is nothing he would be permitted to do for it. There is nothing he could do against it.

So far as the business of conducting a newspaper is concerned the mayor of Chicago does not exist. We might even say that a bad mayor makes more news than a good one. But a newspaper cannot be indifferent to the city conditions and remain a good newspaper.

Now how to beat Thompson. It will be difficult. It may be impossible. If Merriam had the greater strength, or if we thought he had the greater strength, our advice to Republican voters would be to support Merriam. We believe that Judge Olson is the stronger of the two Republican candidates against Thompson.

It is not just now the question which would make the better mayor of Chicago. The question is which has the better chance of being mayor of Chicago.

We believe that Olson has the better chance. The candidate with the better chance is entitled to support. For that reason we think that the voters of Chicago who have been disgusted by a mayor who, while our country was at war with Germany, could think of the city as "the sixth German city" would make their protest against him in the polling places most effective if they voted for Olson.

THE PASSING OF THE RICH MAN'S SON.

America used to support an aristocracy at Palm Beach and at Newport and in continental watering places. There wasn't any utility in the American aristocracy except perhaps that of decorating the pages of the Sunday newspapers and providing an ideal for the models in the collar advertisements.

It is said that the English aristocracy was the finest flower of the earth, but that the earth bore this flower because it was manured with the rest of the English nation. At least the British aristocracy did things. It sacrificed itself in this war. The young aristocrat may have had the best of things, but he gave back to his country the best he had. Ours did not do this. It gave us at best a sickly plant without beneficence.

We are glad, at that, it is going. It had no utility in our scheme of things. It took no responsibility for leadership and none for the nation. Large inheritance taxes, large income taxes, are going to put our rich men's sons to work.

Americans are not going to fertilize a bed for such plants as they have proven themselves to be. Whatever real aristocracy we may have will not need inherited fortunes to assert itself.

Editorial of the Day

WASHINGTON'S LETTER ON PREPAREDNESS.

[From an article by W. Lanier Washington in the Forum.]

Mount Vernon, Sept. 9th, 1799.

My Dear Sir:

Brigadier General Washington called upon me on Saturday evening and went off again on Sunday morning. His anxiety to get to Carolina as soon as possible (having been detained to the Eastward longer than he expected) prevented him passing more time with me. He gave me the model of the cannon which you was (sic) so good to present to me, and by him I wrote a hasty line to you acknowledging the receipt of it, &c.

This morning I had the pleasure to receive, under a blank cover from the War Office, your obliging favor of the 3 of August, and a letter addressed to Brigadier Washington, which I shall forward so as to get to his hands before he leaves this State.

Permit me, my dear Sir, to repeat my thanks for the model of the Cannon, and to assure you of my grateful acknowledgment for the kind and friendly sentiments contained in your letter. No man can wish more sincerely than I do, that we may not be drawn into the conflict in which the European Powers are now involved; but at the same time, no one is more anxious that we should make every possible preparation to meet such an event, if it should be unavoidable. In order to do this, we should embrace the present moment to make our establishments as respectable as circumstances will permit, and neglect no opportunity of introducing into them every improvement in the military art that can be useful, let it come from what quarter so ever it may.

Your Affect. friend & Obed't Ser.

FRENCH WOMEN ASK SUFFRAGE

BY CONSTANCE DREXEL.

[Special Correspondence of The Tribune.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, Feb. 9.—"Millions of men have been killed in this war; they cannot speak of their sufferings. But the women who loved them need not be silent. The women who have borne the horrors for four and a half years and must live on are ready to say 'Never again!' They should have a voice in the peace settlements."

It was Mme. DeWitt-Schlumberger, the granddaughter of King Louis Philippe's prime minister, speaking, in her luxurious salon. Her husband is not German, but Alsatian, for she married into the well known Alsatian family and lived there for thirty years.

"When the youngest of my five sons, on reaching 17," she explained in telling why they settled in Paris ten years ago, "also had to leave our home never to return again, because he did not wish to enter German military service, we decided to give up all our interests and to come live in France because of our sons. My husband had their positions in life ready for them in his affairs, but we could no longer stand the German demand that our sons either enter German military service or never set foot in Alsace again."

These five sons have all been officers during the war, as well as her son-in-law, so she knows what it is to be a mother with sons on the firing line. One was killed; the others are still mobilized, one being in Washington on duty with the French high commission and another, a well known professor in l'Ecole Technique before the war, has just been appointed chief engineer in control of the mines in Alsace, now regained by the French.

But there are more urgent reasons why Mme. Schlumberger is of interest to American women. She is first vice president of the International Suffrage alliance, of which Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt is president, with headquarters at 171 Madison avenue, New York, and she is president of l'Union Française pour le Suffrage des Femmes. This is the association which, last June, addressed a memorandum to President Wilson, asking that woman suffrage be incorporated as one of the future world laws. This memorandum was presented to the president by a delegation of prominent American suffragists at the White House last June and an answer sent Mme. Schlumberger.

As Mme. Schlumberger spoke of these world events she was in black, of course, for her son, but with some beautiful diamonds on her fingers to match her white hair. In a neighboring room of the apartment a tiny baby's wail was heard.

"A month old," she said. "My fifteenth grandchild, and I hope to have more."

Children's voices outside, speaking English with their governess, were also heard. And the telephone bell kept incessantly ringing. Then an interruption from a white-capped nurse.

"My husband who broke his leg two days ago," explained madame as she got up to follow the nurse, "thinks that I, and I only, can do certain things for him, but I'll be back in a minute," she called back in her perfect English.

"Now he is comfortable," she said on returning to the salon. "But I find that the baby's nurse has been taken ill with influenza and we must send her to the hospital, which means that I must take the child in my room, for his mother is not well. So, you see," she added smilingly, "I do not allow outside interests to interfere with my family."

How madame does it all is a wonder, for she seemed to have the international situation at her finger tips.

"During the war," she said, "we absolutely turned our faces on any thoughts of peace because we felt that this war had to be won by our side, and I must confess we often found ourselves out of patience with some American women who did not seem to understand our cause. We were entirely opposed to the women's international conference at The Hague in 1915, but now it is otherwise, and I, for one, am not afraid to say that I would follow the ideas of President Wilson rather than those of our present government as regards permanent future peace guarantees."

Then she took up Le Matin, a morning newspaper, and read from a verbatim report of Clemenceau's answer the day before in a historic session of the chamber of deputies, when a group of the people's representatives insisted upon asking questions about the government's foreign policy. The premier had replied quite bluntly that he was not in agreement with President Wilson. He was sustained by a vote of confidence from the chamber and the credits asked for by the government granted, but Mme. Schlumberger read from his reply as to the policy as follows:

"I remain faithful to the old system of countries organizing their own defense, having armaments and well guarded frontiers."

"It seems to me," she declared, "and my husband spoke of it this morning, that here is no step forward whatever. It is the same old system of national preparedness and jealousies with inevitable wars. Far better, President Wilson's idea for a league of nations with an international instead of a national defense. The men who have suffered and died because of the old system are silent, but their women feel for them. Woman's voice ought to be heard at the peace conference and we shall bring up the matter to Presidnt Wilson."

"In addition to questions of commerce, territories, and such," she said, "I think questions of interest to women who, alas! now make up more than one-half the population of the civilized world, should be brought up. I might mention equal pay for equal work, the responsibility of fathers for their natural children, and, above all, for us here in France, the question of the vote."

Asked how she had happened to become interested in suffrage for women, Mme. Schlumberger declared that some years ago, when she had tried to ameliorate certain conditions, she found that the vote only would be able to bring about certain necessary reforms.

"We have had a bill in the chamber of deputies for some time," she said, "and we are very anxious that it be acted upon before the next elections, so that French women who wish to may then vote. It probably will come up at the same time as the question of electoral reform, which asks that our deputies be elected proportionately, as in your country, instead of as now in France, one for each of the several hundred arrondissements, regardless of its population. We also hope to bring up our woman suffrage bill for discussion.

"At best," she continued, "it is very limited, for it only allows women over 30 to vote at all, and then neither for deputies (like your congressmen) nor senators. Nor would we be eligible for any sort of office, but nevertheless the bill would allow us a vote in municipal affairs, in the small villages and towns as well as in the big cities."

In order that American women who want the vote may not think that Americans have been so slow after all in granting them that privilege, I append herewith a literal translation of the woman suffrage bill which it is thought may be presented in the chamber of deputies about the middle of January. The one advantage that French women have over American women is that this bill, if it becomes effective at all, will be law for all of France.

Article 1. Voters are all French people of both sexes, with the following reserve: (1) If of the masculine sex, when they have reached the age of 21; (2) if of the feminine sex, when they have reached the age of 30.

Article 2. The above article is not applicable to the election of deputies (i. e., representatives to national legislature called chamber of deputies), in which election only voters of masculine sex are qualified to take part.

Article 3. All voters of the masculine sex in the commune may vote for delegates who elect the senators.

Article 4. All registered citizens of the masculine sex are eligible to the general council.

Explanatory note—The above two articles are a revision of the former law in inserting the words "of the masculine sex," so as to make sure that women can take no part in the election of senators, who in France are chosen by delegates and not by direct popular vote.

Article 5. Women are not eligible to councils of the arrondissement.

PLAGUES AND EPIDEMICS.

A FEW weeks ago the newspapers published a statement that 10,000,000 people had died from influenza since the epidemic started in Europe just about a year ago. About the middle of December a committee of statisticians reported to the American Public Health association that 400,000 had died from the disease in the United States between Sept. 1 and Dec. 1.

Efforts made by health departments to control the disease have not been satisfying to them nor to the public. The efforts of the research men to find the bacterial cause of the disease and the method by which it is spread likewise have proven disappointing. These failures and disappointments in the control of so severe an epidemic have caused much speculation.

Since the more orthodox explanations of the method of spread of the disease there have been all sorts of theories on the subject. Many of the theories connect the epidemic with meteorologic phenomena and some with the war. I find by reading that whenever there has been no satisfying explanation of a great terrifying epidemic there always has been a disposition to saddle the blame either on the Almighty or on telluric, meteorologic or climatic phenomena, or on war.

About 1838 Hecker, a professor at the University of Berlin, wrote a book on the epidemics of the middle of the fourteenth century. This book was translated into English and published by the Sydenham society of London in 1844.

He studied epidemic of three diseases—black death, St. John's disease, and the sweating sickness. The black death in all probability was the disease known now as bubonic plague. It is known now to be spread by rat fleas. Twice this century it has gotten a foothold in this country—once on the Pacific and once on the gulf coast, and each time it has been brought under control with inconsiderable loss of life. In 1348 it swept over the world, paralyzing every country touched by it. Boccaccio is said to have written one of the best accounts of it to be found in the literature.

Hecker says the foundations for this epidemic began to be laid in 1333. In that year there was an unparalleled drought in China. The next year there were equally unparalleled floods in the same region, and we are informed that 400,000 Chinese were drowned. Then followed twelve years of great disasters. Some of the worst earthquakes in history occurred in this period. Mount Ætna erupted. Hecker recited a long list of "inundations, earthquakes, and famines." There was a terrible cyclone in Cyprus. From time to time locusts swarmed over important sections of the country.

The German accounts tell of a stinking mist which swept from the east over Italy. Noxious vapors escaped from great chasms in the earth. There was at least tradition of a meteor of great size striking the earth and changing the composition of the atmosphere for a long distance. One earthquake lasted for ten days, killing large numbers of persons.

Hecker speaks of decompositions of the atmosphere. He also tells of a pillar of fire reaching from the heavens and standing over the pope's palace in Avignon, and of a fire ball over Paris. He says: "The insect tribe was wonderfully called into life as if animated beings were destined to complete the desolation which astral and telluric bodies had begun. The corruption of the atmosphere came from the east, but the disease itself came not upon the wings of the wind but was only excited and increased by the atmosphere where it previously had existed. The disease was a consequence of violent commotion in the earth's organism."

In 1799 Noah Webster of dictionary fame wrote a book on epidemics in which he held telluric and astral bodies responsible for the beginning and spread of epidemics. Hecker might easily have borrowed his ideas from Webster, though in no footnote does he acknowledge that he had ever heard of Noah Webster. The only time the great Berlin professor was anywhere near right was when he alluded to insects, and even then his mind was running in the wrong direction.

When we forgot about stars, earthquakes, comets, and meteors and began catching fleas and killing rats the black death—bubonic plague—became a disease of minor importance. Some day some scientist will stumble upon the truth about influenza and we will get down to work, quit blaming God, forget about the weather, and wipe out the disease.

Some of us think our epidemic is a bad one. Let us see how it compared with the black death. The epidemic of black plague killed 13,000,000 in China. India was depopulated. In Cairo 10,000 to 15,000 deaths a day occurred when the epidemic was at its height. In Cæsarea none was left alive. In Aleppo 500 died a day. In Gaza 22,000 died in six weeks. In the east outside of China it killed 23,840,000. The number of deaths caused in various European cities, according to Hecker, were:

Florence, 60,000; Venice, 100,000; Marseilles, 16,000 in one month; Vienna, 70,000; Paris, 50,000; St. Denys, 14,000; Avignon, 60,000; Strasbourg, 16,000; Lubeck, 9,000; Basle, 14,000; Weimar, 5,000; Limburg, 2,500; London, 100,000; Norwich, 5,110; Yarmouth, 7,200. In Vienna 1,200 died a day at the height of the epidemic. A great pit was dug and 50,000 bodies were buried in it in tiers. At Avignon the cemeteries were filled and it was necessary to throw the excess of bodies into the Rhone.

By way of contrast in 1918 in Chicago, with almost 3,000,000 people, only 13,971 died from influenza and pneumonia combined during the year, and the greatest number of deaths from all causes on any one day was 520 on Oct. 16. While our epidemic was fearful it was trifling compared with the 1348 epidemic of the black death or any one of a score of epidemics occurring in the last several centuries.

At this point I want to wander far enough to say a few words about health departments and their work during last autumn. While they did not protect us as we had hoped they would and as we hope they will learn to do before this epidemic has fully passed, they rendered a great and in many ways a successful service. We were all horrified when we learned that in New York City a trench digger was being used to dig long burial trenches.

I know something about yellow fever epidemics. In those epidemics it was customary in some cities to dig trench graves at the height of the epidemic and everybody was glad to get it done. Thousands died without any sort of medical or nursing service. In New York City 100 years ago an epidemic of yellow fever caused 120,000 people to flee and only 3,000 were left behind sick, caring for the sick, burying the dead, and caring for business.

In Memphis in 1878 and 1879 conditions were about as bad. Knowing as I do of the conditions during yellow fever epidemics, I say that our health departments did successful work and deserve the highest praise and the completest backing.

One theory advanced is that the influenza epidemic resulted from decomposition of the bodies of those killed on the European battlefields. While many people were killed on the battlefields the number was less than the number dying from natural causes among the nations at war. For example, we lost 50,000 in battle, but one and a half million of our people die yearly.

In fact, deaths in battle have not materially increased the death rates of the warring countries for 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, and 1918. As many people died from influenza in 1918 as have died from the war since August, 1914. This explanation of the epidemic is not only without proof, but it is also illogical.

The second epidemic studied by Hecker was St. John's disease. This was a wave of St. Vitus' dance which followed in the wake of the great epidemic of black death. The already oppressed and borne down people broke under the strain of the great epidemic. The wave started in Germany on St. John's day during religious exercises and spread by way of Aix la Chapelle into Belgium, Holland, and France. Hecker says:

"The festival of St. John's served to bring to a crisis a malady which had long been impending. When a wave of the disease spread to Italy Kircher wrote music for the jerks and steps of the affected and a song was composed for them to sing as they danced and jerked."

The third disease studied by Hecker was the sweating sickness. The nature of this malady is still a mystery. It suddenly appeared in England after the battle of Bosworth, Aug. 22, 1485. Following in the rear of Henry's victorious army, it spread in a few weeks from the distant mountains of Wales to the metropolis of the empire. It was so severe that the king could not be crowned. In fact, the ruler fled from the disease on two occasions. During the first epidemic the disease was limited to England, sparing even Wales, Scotland, and Ireland. When it crossed to Calais, then under British domination, it affected only the English inhabitants.

Hecker ascribed it to a wave of gluttony and bestial drinking which the victory celebrating English indulged in. However, he does suggest that certain mists and periods of great humidity were something of a factor. The disease later reappeared in England and also in various parts of Germany, France, and Italy.

The glutton excuse failing we read of comets, eruptions of Vesuvius, the circumstance of a figure of a golden eagle falling from its pedestal and knocking over a black eagle as being factors in the spread of the epidemic.

While it may be found that meteorologic phenomena play some part in this epidemic of influenza, the probability is that we will finally discover that some germ is the cause and that it is spread in some simple, entirely natural manner.

RESULT OF INFLUENZA.

E. W. writes: "About four months ago our children had influenza. My little girl of 8 years had a very high fever. Now her hair is falling out in handfuls. I have used crude oil and vinegar to cleanse the hair. Do you think this treatment would cause it to fall out? Or is it the after effects of the influenza fever? Would you advise having the hair cut?"

REPLY.

This is a result of influenza. Brush her hair thoroughly several times daily and keep the scalp clean. Baldness due to acute fevers is not permanent, as a rule. Good care of the scalp and hair is the only treatment required.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE FOUR MINUTE MEN.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In this morning's paper there was an article on the wet and dry controversy saying that the wets were going to employ the service of four minute men in furthering their interests. Relative to this may I not quote a portion of a letter from President Wilson, bidding farewell to the Four Minute organization:

"Now that this work has come to its conclusion and the name of the Four Minute Men (which I venture to hope will not be used henceforth by any similar organization) has become a part of the history of the great war, I would not willingly omit my heartfelt testimony to its great value to the country."

As a member of this organization I feel that we are justified in asking the support of our greatest newspaper in carrying out the president's wish that our name be not used henceforth; most especially in such a cause.

JOHN REED TYSON.

GERMAN IN THE SCHOOLS.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—It seems to me that a crusade should be started in the state of Illinois to abolish the use of the German language in grade schools.

The abuse of the German language in certain schools makes it absolutely essential that Americanism be fostered, encouraged, and developed in all schools in the English language only.

If this is not done the few Americans living in America whose hearts are in Germany and will remain there, even if they live in the United States, will develop into a power which may eventually influence politics enough to forgive Germany, and when Germany is forgiven she will have conquered the world.

Adjutant (who has been interrupted in his real work by a summons from the colonel): "Yes, sir?"

Temporary Colonel: "I say—er—Smith—it's so uncertain how long we shall be out here—demobilization, you know. Er—fact is—do you think it worth my while getting another pair of breeches?"

RESTRICTIONS ON TRAVEL.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—My husband has been assigned to new duties in the army which will keep him in France for several months. Are there any restrictions which would keep me from going over now until he returns? MRS. H. L. R.

The state department has not modified the restrictions on travel to European countries. Passports are issued to civilians only in cases where the trip is of most urgent and important nature. It is not to be expected that the department will lift these restrictions very soon, as the ships are needed for transport of troops and also for food supplies.

This ruling, however, does not apply to persons wishing to visit neutral countries.

MANY QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Carl U., North Manchester, Ill.—The Third field artillery is not in the army of occupation. It is with the Sixth division and is still in France. No information has been given out about their return.

Mrs. A. D.—The Three Hundred and Seventeenth remount depot is at Camp Pike, Ark.

Rose Maher—The One Hundred and Forty-sixth, One Hundred and Forty-seventh, and One Hundred and Forty-eighth regiments of artillery belong to the Forty-first division and are in the army of occupation. The remainder of this division has been ordered to prepare for return home. This includes the One Hundred and Sixteenth engineers.

Mrs. Harry Costello—The One Hundred and Eighteenth engineers are in Nevers, France, and are unattached to any divisional organization.

C. K. E.—The One Hundred and Twenty-second field artillery is part of the Thirty-third division, which was assigned to the army of occupation.

Mrs. Charles Keck, Decatur, Ill.—The One Hundred and Fourth transportation corps is at present in Rochefort. The war department has made no announcement about its return.

Marie Clark.—The First engineer service company (forestry) is attached to the First division. This division is in the army of occupation.

Mrs. Walsh—The Fifty-sixth infantry is in the army of occupation and is therefore not expected to return at a very early date. This belongs to the Seventh division. All divisions which were assigned to the occupation army have not left France yet.

Private Haddon—Do not wear the two chevrons on one sleeve. Wear one on the coat sleeve and one on the overcoat sleeve. It is not customary for a silver chevron and gold chevron to be worn together. A soldier who served in the United States only wears the silver chevron for each six months' service complete, and the gold chevron is for men who have served overseas. One chevron for each six months' complete service is worn.

M. Newkirk, Goshen, Ind.—The One Hundred and Fifty-seventh infantry is located in the Fortieth division. All the train headquarters and infantry regiments in this division have been ordered to assemble for embarkation.

R. B. W.—A. P. O. 780 is in Chatillon-sur-Seine, France. A letter addressed there shoud reach your son if he has named the postoffice in his address.

BOND ISSUE ROUTE NO. 2.

Cobden, Ill., Feb. 18.—[To the Friend of the People.]—What road was designated between Carbondale and Cobden, to be built out of the $60,000,000 bond issue, voted on last November?

2. Do the engineers have the power to cut out as much as six miles, or all of the road designated, and open up a new road that is not even laid out for a road yet, and has one feeder and taps one country school district, where the marked trail has nine feeders, and taps four country school districts, but marked trail would be about 2,000 feet longer on a six mile proposed change and woud cost probably $1,000 per mile more to build?

3. Would it be necessary for parties living on designated trail to petition state highway commissioners for a hearing, provided they consider petitions for a change of route? H. H. L.

The law describes bond issue route No. 2 as follows:

"Beginning in a public highway near Beloit, Wis., and running along such highway in a general southerly direction to Cairo, affording Rockford, Oregon, Dixon, Mendota, Peru, La Salle, El Paso, Bloomington, Clinton, Decatur, Pana, Vandalia, Centralia, Du Quoin, Carbondale, Anna, Cairo, and the intervening communities reasonable connections with each other."

2. Engineers have been making a reconnaissance survey to determine location of the road this last week.

3. The writer will be notified of the time and place of the public hearing to be held before the route is finally decided on.

CLIFFORD OLDER,
Chief Highway Engineer.

CORRECTION HOUSE INMATES' MAIL.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is a person in the house of correction allowed to receive and send mail?

I have been having an argument on this point and would like to have you settle it. My friend says the person cannot receive mail, and I say they can. Also please inform as to whether it is opened or not. H. W. EASTON.

Inmates are permitted to receive mail as often as their relatives and friends desire to send it. They are allowed to write one letter every thirty days. Letters received for inmates are opened. JOSEPH SIMAN, Superintendent House of Correction.

ARE REPAINTING RECEPTACLES.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—[To the Friend of the People.]—A number of people in the Fifty-first precinct, Twenty-third ward, would like to know why the receptacles for paper and street sweepings have been removed? OBSERVER.

The boxes referred to have been taken into the ward yard to be repainted.

F. S. MITCHELL,
Superintendent of Streets.

HOLDING OUT ON THE LANDLORD.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I notice you have stated several times that a person was justified in deducting from their rent excessive gas bills used in heating their flats. I had some experience at this the first of the winter and would like to know how the meek tenant can get away with it. I kept money out of my rent to pay for excessive gas used. They brought suit against me for not paying rent in full, and when we were called before the judge they nonsuited the case (to keep the judge from deciding it). Then on the strength of the lease I signed the Municipal court bailiff served me with an "execution on judgment confessed" notice signed by the court clerk, saying I must pay all rent in full up to date, court costs, bailiff fees and the agents' attorney fee. And there is a clause in the lease that says they can sue me and I must pay the attorney fee and court costs whenever they wish to bring suit against me. And this is a standard lease used by one of the city's largest renting agencies. It is outrageous that the city allows such one sided leases to be used. W. N. C.

Hire a lawyer to have the judgment set aside. If you can prove your facts the attorney fee will be knocked out.

ORAL AGREEMENT CONTROLS.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I signed a lease Nov. 1, 1917, for eleven months. Oct. 1, 1918, I made a verbal agreement to stay for the winter.

1. Does my lease automatically extend itself for eleven months more or twelve months, or is it void?

2. Can my rent be raised this spring?

3. How much time does the law require me to give the owner of my intention to move? R. C. J.

1. The oral agreement controls, assuming that both parties understood something definite by "the winter."

2. Yes.

3. You can move without notice at the expiration of the agreed period.

DIVORCE IN NEW JERSEY.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is it possible to obtain a divorce on the ground of desertion in either New York state or the state of New Jersey?

2. If desertion constitutes legal grounds for divorce in these states, how long a residence is required before the matter can be brought before the court? READER.

1. Yes, in New Jersey.

2. Two years of bona fide residence.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

THE PIANO AND THE PATRIOT

By Gilbert K. Chesterton

THE most inspiring irony of these days has been this: that books were becoming more prosaic in order to be like life; when life itself became poetic in spite of books. The first law of the new novel is that the hero must not be heroic. He certainly is not; we know now, after four years of fighting, that it is the ordinary man who is heroic. But even the extraordinary man is not so ordinary as he is painted; especially by the realistic novelists.

A number of novels have been written of late, with a certain theme and tone of thought, of which perhaps the ablest example was "Mendel." It describes the life and loves of a genius of the musical sort; and most of the geniuses so described are of the musical sort. Morally, of course, he is not a model, and we have no right to assume he is meant for a model. If his story proved anything about the general relations of music and morals, it could only prove a sort of contradiction to the great tag of Shakespeare. It must be meant specially to show that a man who has music in himself will always be particularly fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils.

But we have no right to assume that it is meant to prove anything about music and morals. All that it proves, so far as I am concerned with it just now, is that the cleverest kind of modern novelist feels, in the most emphatic sense, that every novel should be a novel without a hero. It is not merely that the life described is loose, but rather that it is limp; that it is not only immoral but illogical and inconsequent, inspired by no strong purpose or fundamental conviction.

This prosaic person apparently is the musical genius of fiction. And the flaming fact is before our very eyes at this moment, to show how much more prosaic he is than the musical genius of real life.

FOR instance, to touch again on the musical genius as cleverly sketched by the lady novelist. Without pretense of doing justice to the details of what she does make him do, I will answer for some things that she does not make him do. She does not conceive him as consumed through all his life by a visionary love for a lost nation that has long literally vanished from all the maps of men. She does not conceive him as staking all on a scheme that involves the overthrow of the three enormous empires of the earth.

She does not show him as casting aside artistic ambitions in order to defy and even insult the highest crowned heads of Europe. And most certainly she does not describe her moody musician as acclaimed, as with a clash of swords, as the first president of the most perilous and splendid of the new republics of the world.

Yet all this epic of world politics, and highly practical politics, is happening before our very eyes to a real professional musician. It is happening to a pianist, whom many a politician would have counted as some improvement on an organ grinder.

WE have always known that Ignace Paderewski was not only a great pianist but a great patriot; and that he had refused the compliments and commands of the Russian and Prussian autocrats as a protest against the wrongs of Poland. But we have since seen him called by a whole people to play the part of a statesman and a soldier, amid the ruins of all the statecraft and soldiery of the two tyrants he defied. The story is surely sufficient to suggest that the life of an artist need not be quite so inartistic as our scientific fiction thinks it necessary to suppose. Surely it suggests that realism is rather duller than reality.

I would not be misunderstood as having the smallest faith in the genius as a substitute for the saint, or even for the honest man. I was never carried away by the cult which Carlyle called Hero Worship, and which he rapidly turned into Hun Worship. I will not follow him into the discussion of whether any man is a hero to his valet; I rather suspect that a hero has not got a valet. Anyhow, I myself have not the graces or even the virtues of a valet; and I certainly have not a blind confidence in the artist as arbiter.

I do not think the Polish patriot the only typical musician; I only resist a certain atmospheric assumption that a sulky German Jew anarchist must be the only typical musician. The truth is, I believe that any sort of a man may happen to be a genius; so that there is a hint of the equality of men even in the inequality of men. All sorts make a world; and all sorts may make a work of art.

THE geniuses are just such a job lot as you would get by taking any arbitrary test. If you took the hundred tallest men there would be a man as wild as Byron and a man as mild as Wordsworth. If you took the first fifty men in the street there might be a man as happy as Whitman or a man as gloomy as Poe. I do not deny that the classics can include the waster, the worldling, the miser, the snob, and the sneak. I only demur to a tendency to leave out altogether such trifles as the hero, the martyr, and the patriot.

Of this there is much negative evidence in the novels of our time. But to this there is surely a very full and flat contradiction in the actual events of our time. The contrast is so extreme that we might almost call it the time of realistic books and romantic men. Certainly the men who rise into a practical prominence are not always the least romantic of the men. And even that unhappy being, the artist, does not always deserve to be condemned for being unpractical; or, what is worse, to be praised for being unpractical.

In the epic experience through which the world has just passed even artists have done artistic things, and even musicians have achieved some harmony with their human lot. Even poets have not all been prosaic; and even lovers of the beautiful have not only left ugly stories behind them. That is why it is worth while to say a word of criticism about that cruel psychology which is the affectation of so many artists in fiction; and to point out that our æsthetics are still somewhat unworthy of our ethics and politics.

There is surely some moral miscalculation about man, when we can open so many novels about the life of musical or literary genius, and be sure that the novelist will never dream of anything so wild and wonderful as Paderewski lifted to a throne under the White Eagle of Poland, or D'Annunzio flying in heaven high above all the eagles of Austria.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

By Fanny Butcher

"SONGS OF A MINER" [Putnams], by James C. Welsh, is a little volume of real poetry. There's a lot of conversation wasted about the absolute values of poetry. More or less rhythmical combinations of words are hailed as great poetry. Poetic cults are built upon such foundations, as the realism of garbage cans or chromatic or the waves of emotion which are stirred up by a pebble of a so-called poet when he begins to drop himself into the puddle of life. Poetry, real poetry, satisfies the souls of men and women and that's about the summum bonum of poetry after all's said and written, isn't it? A poem which sings the note that sets our soul strings vibrating has fulfilled the destiny of a poem. I certainly do not mean that great poetry is full of sloppy sentimentalisms nor even that it is filled with sentiment. I do not mean that real poetry celebrates emotions only. I do mean that unless a poem quickens the souls of men and women it is nothing more than a craftsmanlike job. And that is because all beauty has a vivifying potency.

James Welsh is a real miner, a worker in the pit for twenty-four years, beginning at the hoary age of 12. But in the blackness of the earth he has found beauty, the "epic of work." Part of "The Miner" is characteristic of his poetry:

That which was forests of trees—
Flowers of the ages long gone,
Come we to hive—human bees—
Honey of gold for the drone.

Lieut. Stoops, an absent member of "The Tribune" art department, now with the Sixth F. A., American army of occupation, has here depicted a humorous saying of war. "Cooties," they say, get so thick one can "read his undershirt," so closely does it resemble the printed page of a newspaper.

The Monroe Doctrine

You have heard much about the Monroe Doctrine of late and perhaps, knowing of it only by hearsay, you have wondered just what the doctrine is. Here it is:

The Monroe Doctrine was enunciated by President Monroe in his message to congress Dec. 2, 1823. Referring to steps taken to arrange the respective rights of Russia, Great Britain, and the United States on the northwest coast of this continent, the president went on to say:

"In the discussions to which this interest has given rise, and in the arrangements by which they may terminate, the occasion has been deemed proper for asserting, as a principle in which the rights and interests of the United States are involved, that the American continents, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintain, are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European power. . . . We owe it, therefore, to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere. But with the governments who have declared their independence and maintain it, and whose independence we have, on great consideration and on just principles, acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny by any European power in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States."

FEBRUARY-MARCH

Edge of March

SNOW and sunshine, thaw and glaze of frost; a soft wind from the south, a raw wind from the east, a wind which brings down some of the brown veterans of last year's foliage, brown veterans which still hang to white oaks and have defied all of winter to loose them from their attachments.

White light and gray days, with the sun marching north along the western rim of the world; lengthening days and something almost as an evening intervening between day and night, between sunset and Sirius, between sunlight and the sky of winter stars.

Hens at large in the brush, scratching the leaves when the thaw takes them out of frost; crows calling from far away woods; the crow of a cock; the early morning barking of a dog; the chickadee in his spring song; a flight of cross bills from the conifers; days related to April, days related to November, days which are all of January and days which promise all of May.

The edge of March is a door ajar. It may be closed. It may be opened. It will be both closed and opened. The song increases. The sun comes north. The days lengthen. Hepatica buds are growing under the new snow. There is red in the stems of the wild rose and the lilac buds are fat. All the subtleties say spring is close to the edge of March.

VOCAL VALUES AND PERSONAL

By James Gibbons Huneker

THE penalty of publicity is one that singers seldom evade. Little need to give the reason; nevertheless for sensitive souls it is a trial to see one's personality put in the wash, squeezed and hung up to dry with other linen in the pitiless laundry of the press. Some singers are born advertisers, some achieve advertising, but few have advertising thrust upon them. That sort usually fade into shadowland rather than face the fierce white light which beats upon the operatic throne. Really, it must be disconcerting for a woman singer to hear herself discussed as if she were a racehorse. Every point in her makeup is put on a platter ready to serve up hot in the newspapers.

The private life of a prima donna is not unlike that of a racing mare's. Flesh reduction, all the succulent food—and champagne—are banished; indulgence spells decadence, and decadence is eagerly noted by the psychic detectives known as music critics. We are not in the game to find fault, as simple souls imagine, but to register values, vocal and personal values. It's a pity, but this is a condition and not a theory. We have heard of a Mary Garden cult.

Now, as has been said by Dr. Wicksteed, a cult is always annoying to those who do not join in it, and generally hurtful to those who do. But is there such a Garden cult? We doubt it. She has a certain elect following—the "twelve superior persons scattered throughout the universe," and for them she can do no wrong. She has aroused the critical antagonism of some who, rightly enough, point out her obvious limitations. To these the gruff reply of Brahms is appropriate. A presuming youth called his attention to a theme in a work of his which was evidently borrowed from Mendelssohn. "That any fool can see," said the crusty Johannes.

The voice of Miss Garden is sometimes a voice in the wilderness—sandy, harsh, yet somehow expressive. The same may be said of Geraldine Farrar, who every year is gravitating toward the zone, not of silence, but of the singing actress. A Gallic, not an Italian zone. Voice does not play the major rôle; acting, that is, dramatic characterization, does. Not to recognize in Miss Garden the quintessence of this art—not a new one, and its most perfect flowering is the art of Yvette Guilbert—is to miss the real Mary Garden, Voila tout! We saw a like misunderstanding of Eleonora Duse. Immediately she was compared, and unfavorably, with Sarah Bernhardt, when she was achieving something vastly different and, I think, vastly finer. Sarah was more brilliant; Duse more human. The one an orchestra; the other an exquisitely balanced string quartet. Mary Garden is the nearest approach to Duse on the lyric stage.

MARY GARDEN, too, is "different," in the sense Stendhal meant the banal word. Her cadenced speech is not singing in the Italian manner. To begin with, her tonal texture is not luscious. But there are compensations. Every phrase is charged with significance. She paints with her voice, and if her palette is composed of the cooler tones, if the silver grays and somber greens of a Velasquez predominate, it is because she needs just such a gamut with which to load her brush. She is a consummate manipulator of values. To be sure, we do not expect the glorious torrential outbursts of Margaret Matzenauer. Why confuse two antithetical propositions? I don't look at one of the Paul Cézannes in the rare collection of Miss Bliss expecting the gorgeous hues of a Monticelli. Cézanne is a master of values. And if these similes seem far fetched—which they are not; music and color are twins in the Seven Arts—then let us pitch upon a more homely illustration: Mary Garden is an opal, Margaret Matzenauer a full blown rose. Voltaire said that the first man who compared a woman to a rose was a poet; the second, an ass. I hope Mme. Matzenauer will accept the simile in the poetic sense.

Nuance, which alone makes art or life endurable, becomes an evocation with Miss Garden. I lament that she is not in a more intimate setting, as the misted fire and subtle modulations of her opaline art and personality are lost in the huge auditorium of the Lexington theater. I saw her, a slip of a girl, at Paris, early in this century, and framed by the Opéra Comique, of whose traditions she is now a distinguished exponent. She was then something precious: a line of Pater's prose, the glance of one of Da Vinci's strange great ladies; a chord by Debussy; honey, tiger's blood, and absinthe; or like the enigmatic pallor we see in Renaissance portraits; cruel, voluptuous, and suggesting the ennui of Watteau's "L'Indifferent."

She is all things to all men. There are those who see in her the fascinating woman. And they are justified in their belief. There are those who discover in her something disquieting, ambiguous; one of Baudelaire's "femmes damnées" from whom he fashioned his Beethovenian harmonies, fulgurating, profound: "Descendez le chemin de l'enfer éternel! . . . flagellés par un vent qui ne vient pas du ciel." . . . And there is still another group, to which I adhere, one that envisages Mary in the more lucid light of an admirable artist, who has fashioned of her body and soul a rare instrument giving forth the lovely music of attitude, gesture, pose, and rhythm.

There are moments when she evokes the image of the shadow of a butterfly on a star; and often she sounds the shuddering semitones of sex; as in Thaïs. The Mélisande moods are hers, the dim remote poesy of antique sonorous tapestries; and the "modern" note of Louise, grazing the vulgar, though purified by passion. But the dissenters no doubt believe in the Cambodian proverb when estimating the singing of both Geraldine Farrar and Mary Garden. It runs thus: When in Hades it is bad form to speak of the heat.

WITH Amelita Galli-Curci we enter another vocal territory. Here the domain of pyrotechnical vocalism. And, let it be added, the public cares more for fireworks than lyric-dramatic art. To rival the flute is more to the groundlings than to declaim "Ah, mon fils!" as does magnificent Matzenauer. Everything in its place, au fur et à mesure. Galli-Curci did not win the popular ear merely on the east wind. To begin with, she has a beautiful voice, and, while she has some lamentable mannerisms, not to say vocal vices, her personality is "simpatico," her temperament, though not passionate, is musical. Her face in its length reminds one of either Paganini or George Eliot. She has been called "a Botticelli." Yes, a Hebraic Botticelli, which is manifestly a contradiction in terms. In "La Traviata" she recalled a quaint and lovely daguerreotype, or an old Cosway miniature. She has the appealing pose; she seems to plead with her audience. In the case of little women it never fails. Think of Maude Adams. And Galli-Curci has "such a wye with her," like the cockney song. If her voice lasts and she grows artistically—well, it is easy to predict her future.

A live larynx is worth a ton of vocal history. It is all right for oldsters, like myself, to boast of the voices of yesteryear, but Patti, Melba, Eames, Calvé, Lehmann, Ternina, Sembrich—these are only names to conjure with, no longer realities. Amelita Galli-Curci, youthful, charming, a singer born, faces the present generation and sings. The great shadows vanish. Ouf! but it grows chilly and drear in the lonesome latter years. Ring down the curtain on the past. The queens of coloratura are dead! long live the queens of coloratura! Saluto! Amelita—Galli the Curch, as Raymond Hitchcock calls her—with the birdlike voice. Also salute resurrected "Linda di Chamounix"! And may the Lord temper the wind to our venerable ears!

CLEMENCEAU AS PROFESSOR

By Mary E. Walton

HAVING recently seen in various papers and magazines many erroneous statements in regard to the American years of Dr. Georges Clemenceau and his American wife, I feel that the actual facts in regard to that period of his existence may prove interesting, and that I may be able to correct some of the reports which, in widely varied forms, are appearing daily.

I was a pupil of Miss Aiken's seminary in Stamford, Conn., for six years, during three of which I was a pupil of Prof. Clemenceau.

The girl he married—Mary E. Plummer—was a friend of mine. When she entered the school Miss Aiken sent for me, introduced her to me, and asked me to take her under my wing and make her acquainted with the girls and help make her feel at home. From that hour she and I were boon companions.

Prof. Clemenceau was a fine teacher—erratic, sudden in his movements, kindly, and just. He had a knack of presenting a point in such a manner as to impress it upon the student, and the power of simplifying even the rules of grammar so that they seemed clear and reasonable and stayed in the memory.

His own memory was marvelous, as a recent cordial letter to me proves. In it he assures me he remembers me well, and proceeds to describe me as I then was—even to the color and arrangement of my hair. This after all these years is wonderful in view of the varied experiences he has lived through and the thousands whom he has met in his public life.

DR. CLEMENCEAU was virtually exiled from France during the last empire owing to his too liberal utterances. He decided to travel, and went first to London. There he met John Stuart Mill, with whom he agreed so well that the distinguished author told him he was the only man he had ever met to whom he would be willing to intrust the translating of his philosophy into French.

Wishing to extend his travels and to increase his knowledge of English, he came to America and landed in New York City about 1865. After traveling in this country a while he returned to New York and decided to teach French in order to learn English more perfectly.

He registered with a teachers' agency, and about the same time Miss Aiken, needing a French professor for her school, applied at the agency for some one to fill the position. He taught French in that school for nearly three years, during all of which time I was his pupil. He never taught us to ride—as one article stated—there were riding masters who came out from New York certain days for that purpose. Nor did he ever even ride with us.

He was full of oddities and a constant source of amusement and amazement to his classes. Sitting quietly in class explaining some idiom he would suddenly jump up and kick the door shut—with his foot on a level with the knob—as if making some college high jump. Then back to his seat as solemn as an owl.

At dinner he always tossed bits of bread into his mouth with a quick jerk of his hand which rested on the table. This was quite a fascinating performance and we were always watching to see him miss the mark—which he never did.

He was very artistic, and while waiting for some slow pupil to answer he would sketch on loose pieces of paper in his text book. Once one of the sketches was seen by a teacher who exclaimed: "Those eyebrows are like Mary Plummer's!" He crumpled the paper in his hand and stopped sketching for a while.

MARY PLUMMER was a very pretty brunette—a lovely girl of 18 or 19 years she entered the school. She never graduated, caring very little for study—and least of all for French, which she never seemed able to learn. Hers was a very romantic story, and I have often heard Miss Aiken threaten to "write it up" under the title of "From a Cabin to a Palace." Her home, instead of being in Springfield, Mass., as recently stated, was in northern Michigan or Wisconsin, in a forest region, far from any town. She was the eldest of six children, and her father had died leaving them in dire poverty.

One night, as I have heard her relate, one of the younger children was taken ill and there was no one to go for a doctor but Mary. So this 12 year old girl, with a shawl over her head, went through the dark woods, alone, those four or five miles, in terror of wolves, and in the face of many dangers, and brought the nearest physician back with her.

When Mary was about 17 an aunt, living on Fifth avenue in New York City, suddenly woke up to a sense of her responsibility and offered to take one of the children to educate. The mother chose Mary as the one to go, and a year later the aunt placed her at Miss Aiken's, with an outfit of pretty, fashionable clothes which must have been a great contrast to anything ever dreamed of by this girl from the backwoods.

There was, however, an innate grace and refinement in her which made the new clothes and the new surroundings seem suitable and as if she had always been accustomed to both.

By the end of her first school year at Stamford there were whispers of the French professor's admiration of her beauty, and before the second year was over they were married.

We had seen no love making and it was a complete surprise to all but Miss Aiken. Mary had gone to her aunt's in New York City for the week-end and had been married at the city hall, with Miss Aiken and the aunt as witnesses.

This was not because Prof. Clemenceau did not approve of the religious ceremony, as stated in a recent article, but because a civil marriage service was the only legal one, at that time, in international marriages. It was followed by an ordinary marriage before a regularly ordained minister.

PROF. CLEMENCEAU did not go to France to get his family's permission to wed, as has been stated. He taught his classes daily up to the time of his electrifying marriage.

We were all much worried by Mary's marriage, fearing she had been deceived by an adventurer, perhaps. We doubted the reports of his fine ancestry, his wealth, his large establishments and estates. This was not because he merited or aroused suspicions, but because it was all too romantic to be true.

We feared to believe in the genuineness of it all, though we admired and liked the man, who was attractive and full of fascinating surprises, though always maintaining a dignity proper to his position. His marriage was quite of a piece with his ordinary conduct.

During the summer vacation Miss Aiken went to Paris and visited Mary, and on her return told us entrancing tales of her beautiful home in Paris, with its many servants, and of their country place with its twenty-five or more servants, and of the doctor's "shooting box" in the mountains, until it all sounded like a fairy tale, and our fears that he might be a charming impostor were allayed.

After twenty years they were divorced, and the wife issued cards to all her old schoolmates offering her services as guide to tourists in Paris. A few years after she died in some town in Iowa.

Prof. Clemenceau was, as I have said, a fine teacher. He was also a good physician, somewhat of an artist, and always a leader. The characteristics which have kept him in the limelight all these years were shown even in the schoolroom. He was at 30 a many sided, wonderful man, always on the side of what he considered the right, and never afraid to express his opinions or act on his convictions.

News and Comment of MOTORDOM Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER

Trucks, Roads in Service of Mars

BY MAJ. E. M. LUBECK, M. T. C.

[Maj. Lubeck, a Chicagoan, is chief motor transportation officer of the Fourth U. S. army corps.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY OF OCCUPATION IN GERMANY, Jan. 25.—The good roads of France and the motor transportation of the allies taken as one item contributed as much toward winning the war as munitions and men. It might be said that by including the good roads and transportation under the head of motors that the entire war was a battle of men, munitions, and motors.

To those who in America had no opportunity to witness the benefits of the good roads of France in the war I shall attempt to give an idea of what part the road building of hundreds of years played in this mighty struggle of men, as an idea of what value good roads will have to play in the world's greatest battle, in which America will have the leading part, the battle of commerce.

It is unquestionably true that without the good roads of France, the building of which has always been a commercial necessity and a large part of their preparedness, together with a similar part played by Germany, neither side would have been able to throw its forces here and there into the struggle with the speed which has on several occasions amazed the watching world, although Germany had one big advantage, the splendid railroad system with which she supplemented her motors and good roads.

Germany used her railroad system in bringing troops to the frontier. The allies used their railroads to good advantage, but the feature of the allies' speed was the troop transport train, the supply train, and the ammunition train—motor trucks which conveyed night after night material, munitions, and men from the railheads right up to the trenches.

None of this could have been done without good roads, no matter how good the trucks were, and there could have been no such startling shifting of divisions as directed by Gen. Pershing from one sector to the other, throwing in seasoned shock and support troops wherever necessary, had it not been for the vast network of good roads of northern and eastern France from the Belgian sector down to the Swiss border, which permitted rapid transportation of troop train convoys.

The tremendous needs of the allied armies was such that no railroad system, no mater how good it might have been, could have handled the various widely separated situations involved during the war. Even the giant locomotives and huge American freight cars sent over to haul larger loads and make longer hauls failed to relieve the needs of the armies.

The motor transport corps, taking advantage of its equipment and the good roads, undoubtedly played the biggest part in the supply system, for from the five base ports day after day there were sent forward convoys of motor trucks through the S. O. S. sections, through the intermediate sections and into the advance sections where night after night the rumbling motors handled by expert daredevil drivers who, without a light to guide them and to whom even the glow of a flashlight tended to drive them off the road instead of guiding them, carried their loads of men and munitions and supplies through the darkened country right up to the trenches, often arriving just in time for a battery to get into action or bring food for a battalion about to go in, or to bring up reserves for a daybreak attack.

When the American supply depots were considered in central France, the national roadway connecting Nancy, Toul and Ligny en Barrois with Is-sur-Tille, Langres, and Gievre, with excellent paralleling roads, led to the establishment of the depots at the latter named points, enabling the daily movement of innumerable convoys of supplies and men to the sector occupied by American troops.

If transportation had been left to the railroads it is doubtful if supplies in many cases would have ever gotten to the front lines, for it is a notorious fact that supplies sent up from even the farthest points south would often reach the front lines over the network of good roads in twelve hours, while of the French railroading system was the best the railroads ever did because twelve days.

Along about the 1st of September interest began to center around Toul, which was the central point of the big St. Mihiel salient. News of an entirely American attack began to leak out, and while the exact time, or what is known in military circles as the "D" date and "O" hour, were not known, tremendous preparations were being made for a big move.

Extending north from Toul and Nancy right up into "No Man's land" were several of the finest roads in France—beautiful roads twenty feet wide, affording in several places three-way traffic, while from Commercy, and Bar le Duc towards Verdun, which practically served the left flank of the proposed attack, there is perhaps the finest roadway to be found anywhere.

It was over these roadways and paralleling single-way roads which were used for return traffic that the guns, men, supplies, and other paraphernalia of war of the First, Fourth, and Fifth corps of the American army, numbering over 300,000 men and thousands of animals, traveled early in September, preparing to make its debut under Gen. Pershing in the St. Mihiel drive on the 12th.

When one recounts the events of the twenty-four hours beginning at 1 a. m. on the 12th, which ended with the retaking of 240 square miles of territory held by the Germans for four years, the capture of 16,000 prisoners and 443 guns, and the number of men the American forces had in readiness, it is easy to establish the fact that it was good roads only which permitted these preparations to be made and the successful carrying out of the program of battle orders.

While it is easy to see what commercial benefit such roads are to the peasants, who in peace times are able to move their farm products to the central markets, no roads in the world have ever been called upon to stand the tremendous wear and tear to which these roads were subjected at this time. Yet today they are still in wonderful shape.

A glance at a French road map shows the entire country netted with the best kinds of hard roads leading off the main or military highways. All these roads are practically ballasted roads with foundations not less than four feet deep covered with a hard, flinty stone or the chalky limestone which acts as a binder and prevents breaking up by weather. In the event of loosening or breaking up through the wear and tear of heavy truckage, the road repairers, who are constantly on the job, find every few hundred yards a pile of rock and surface binder.

Seldom does a day intervene between the time a break in the road is first discovered until a road workman with a small hammer and a shovel begins enlarging the hole with a view to finding the weak spot and filling it up, often going through the road surface a foot or more in order to lay a sufficiently strong foundation for the repairs. Filling up a hole with loose rock and trusting to passing traffic to crush it into shape as is done in the States is not tolerated. It is this constant watching which keeps the road in repair.

Another feature of all French and German roads is the trees which line the roads, being planted at intervals of about twenty feet. These trees break any high winds which might sweep the dust off the roads, keeping the roads intact and in war time act as a natural camouflage for modern aeroplane or balloon observation of road traffic.

The tremendous saving of time accomplished during the war by sending tonnage over the roads from the base ports shows the advantages of the military highway as well as the enormous commercial saving in peace time. Naturally enough all the highways led to the frontier. All these roads, including the big national highway which in France led down through central France, were built with a view to two way traffic.

In Germany the national road leading from Bonn, Coblenz, Mayence, and Strasbourg along what military critics would call the frontier connected with the roads from the main German supply town.

It is interesting as a student of good roads and as a spectator of the preparations of the St. Mihiel drive to recall some of the events beginning Sept. 1, when it first became apparent that a big move was on as to the part played by the good roads. It is also interesting to call attention to the American truck driver who performed the remarkable and dangerous feats of transportation, for it must be remembered that "No Man's Land" was only a short distance from Toul, from which almost all the preparations centered, and that because of the alertness of the German airmen and the eagle eyes of the German balloon observers, who swung their ballons all along the front line in open defiance of the American airmen, it was necessary to carry on all the preparations under cover of darkness.

Even then, except when it rained, there was not one night for weeks, even previous to Sept. 1, that the airmen did not cross the lines, often coming several times during the night, their approach being signaled by the peculiar buzz buzz of their motors and their arrival being heralded by the screeching of sirens sounding out the alerte or pounding of the brass plates or mingling of bells in every village and town forcing every one to cover in cellars, caves, or other protective places. Consequently all road operations were conducted at night without lights, for the display of a single light, no matter how small, would disclose the whereabouts of troops.

With the roads crowded with thousands of rumbling trucks, regiment after regiment of infantry on foot, guns of all calibers, from the 75s to the big naval guns, each occupying from fifteen to fifty feet of road space, being hauled up to the front by groaning and snorting artillery tractors, machine gun companies moving up in silent procession being drawn by the good old army mule, and then the horse drawn artillery, moving motor cars, barking motorcycles, you can easily picture the congestion of men, animals, and machinery.

Each section had its place, each had its guides and on and on they moved in darkness so black that you could not see your hand before your face, even the sky line between the trees being obliterated by the murky darkness. Here and there a truck suddenly slips off the road. The procession stops. An order barks out from somewhere and suddenly like magic a hundred men furnishing the most flexible power in the world get behind the truck, pulling and pushing, and onto the road it goes.

Sometimes a truck gets into the ditch and there is nothing to do but unload or leave it, and with the shrill whistle signal of the train commander the convoy goes on and the procession starts again. In a little while again the whistle sounds and down the line there is a halt. A voice calls out from somewhere, "What outfit is that?"

"Who are you?" is the reply.

"This is an M. P. with a guide."

"Well, this is the 'Steenth Ammunition train."

"Who's behind you?"

"The Umpty-ump Supply train."

"All right Ammunition train, you turn right and look out for sharp turn on steep hill going down, then turn left, go three kilometers through small town. Look out for narrow streets, turn right and go east to 'Steenth Artillery brigade ammunition dump. Coming back you follow same road through the small town then turn right to main one way road and don't let me catch you coming through here.

"Supply train, you go straight north, turn left at cross roads and guide at that point will show you the ration dump. Coming back you will come through here at six miles per hour and no faster, get me?"

The whistles sound again and on they go, each section getting its orders from the M. P., the drivers making a wide turn as the crossing M. P. yells "turn right" and if it is a narrow turn the M. P. usually puts his hands on the front fender and walks around the turn with each truck, giving caution signals by tapping on the fender with a stick.

American motor trucks found themselves in many picturesque situations before the war was over, but few brought the old and the new into more striking contrast than when these leviathans of commerce were used to rush food and supplies to the destitute peoples of Asia Minor. Here's a White five ton truck, built in Cleveland, U. S. A.—the kind of thing that belongs on State street, contesting the right of way with a string of street cars—making its first entrance into Jerusalem through a breach in the walls at the Jaffa gate. The descendants of the Pharisees and Sadducees must have experienced a sensation or two these last few months.

Nothing contributes more to the increasing demand for the Overland Model 90 car than the valuation business men place upon it as an efficiency asset. By word of mouth these men have firmly established the reputation of the Model 90 as a dependable, economical car. It deserves the public's appreciation because it meets everyday needs. It is important to observe that women praise its fine appearance and comfort as enthusiastically as men endorse its faithful performance.

Illustrations Numbers 1 and 2, show in an enlarged way the difference in globules before (2) and after (1) being "cracked up" by the Chalmers Hot Spot.

How the Hot Spot Makes Chalmers One of the Few Great Cars

The cylinders of an engine are like the stomach of a man.

Unless food is thoroughly chewed up before it reaches the stomach there is liable to be indigestion.

In most cars today gas arrives in the cylinders in too large globules.

The Hot Spot in the Chalmers prevents this. For it "cracks up" and heats the gas.

As soon as it strikes the Hot Spot gas is "pulverized" into a most minute "vapor powder."

Engineers call this "dry gas."

Then the gas is passed quickly through the Ram's-horn which equally distributes the gas among six cylinders and makes it arrive at each cylinder at exactly the same time and travel the same distance.

Which means not only more power from less gas, but hitting on all six all the time, amazing ease in starting on a cold day, less friction, less vibration, and hence a cool running engine on a red hot day.

To miss a demonstration in a Chalmers nowadays before purchasing a car—no matter what price you pay—is to miss an experience worth making a day's march to find.

News and Comment of MOTORDOM

Why Throw Away Money on Tires?

BY HIGH SPEED.

It is unfortunate that it is necessary to warn the average American who owns and drives a motor car not to waste money in tires. But that is exactly what the said average car owner does. He literally throws away a goodly number of his hard earned dollars every year through failure to get the mileage from his tires that is in them.

In the aggregate this wastage amounts to millions of dollars every year, so that any educational campaign, any means of pointing out to owners their mistakes in this particular is a direct contribution to our national prosperity.

During the last few years the big tire companies have conducted campaigns to educate their patrons in how to get the proper returns on money invested in tires. There is no question that this has done much good, but there still remains much to be done. There is no other item of wastage in the operation of the car of equal magnitude to this, except possibly in excessive consumption of fuel through incorrect carburetor adjustment and operation.

The failure that causes the greatest loss in tires is under inflation. The big tire companies are a unit in agreeing on this. It is for this reason that all the tire manufacturers are so careful to instruct their patrons in the air pressure needed by any given size of tire. If the pressure is permitted to fall even five points below that proper figure it is bad for the casing, obviously ten pounds is worse, and below that is atrocity to tires.

The weakest part of the tire is its side walls. When the air pressure is below the mark, these side walls bend and flex as the weight of the car falls upon them in the course of travel. This induces friction, which inevitably breeds heat. Soon the rubber is loosened from the fabric, dirt and stones force their way under the tread, and soon the casing is a complete wreck.

Through education car owners are becoming a little more careful about actual under inflation, but very few of them realize that all the effects of under inflation may be produced in quite other ways. For instance, suppose a 34x4 tire is designed to carry a load of 900 pounds. If 1,200 pounds are loaded on this tire, we have all the effects of under inflation, though the pressure is actually at the designated poundage.

Of course, it is impossible to ask a car owner to weigh his passengers as they take their places in his vehicle, nor is it possible to avoid carrying an overload in cases of emergency, but it is possible to avoid habitual overloading. Simply do not carry seven passengers in a five passenger car, nor four in a small roadster. And if it is necessary to carry a considerable overload for an extended run, it is not difficult to increase the pressure in the tires to care for the added weight.

After under inflation as a destructive agent for tires, I believe that pure neglect will come next. Few owners are as particular as they should be in keeping the treads of their casings whole, by making immediate repairs of cuts and abrasions that appear in the rubber surface. After all, the rubber tread of the tire is simply the protector that shields the fabric base underneath. The rubber is selected for this purpose because it has elasticity to bend as is necessary and at the same time strength to assist the fabric in withstanding the pressure of the air within.

If cuts in the rubber tread are allowed to remain open, dirt and water and even stones are able to work their way into the fabric base. The water rots this and a blowout is the result. Dirt and small stones entering a cut force their way along the fabric, separating the rubber from the cotton cloth as they go. Again the result may be a terrific blowout, sometimes half way around the casing. The only remedy for this is constant watchfulness and plugging of small cuts as fast as they appear. Larger cuts, over half an inch, must be vulcanized without delay.

A word as to the modus operandi of tire mending may not be out of place. The cut to be plugged or vulcanized must always be thoroughly cleaned in the first place. A cloth soaked in gasoline is the best medium for cleaning the cut. If it is a deep one the cloth may be used on the end of a screwdriver.

After the cut and the surrounding area has been thoroughly cleaned and is dry a coat of cement is applied to the sides and bottom. After this has dried another coat is put on, and when this has dried the tire filler is applied. A bit of the filler is worked into the cut with the blade of a knife or a screwdriver. In case the tire must be used on the road immediately a small piece of cloth or paper should be cemented over the repair to keep dirt from being picked up.

No car should go on the road without a complete tire repair outfit, portable vulcanizer, cement, filler, patches, etc. These outfits may be had in a variety of forms and they will repay their cost times over.

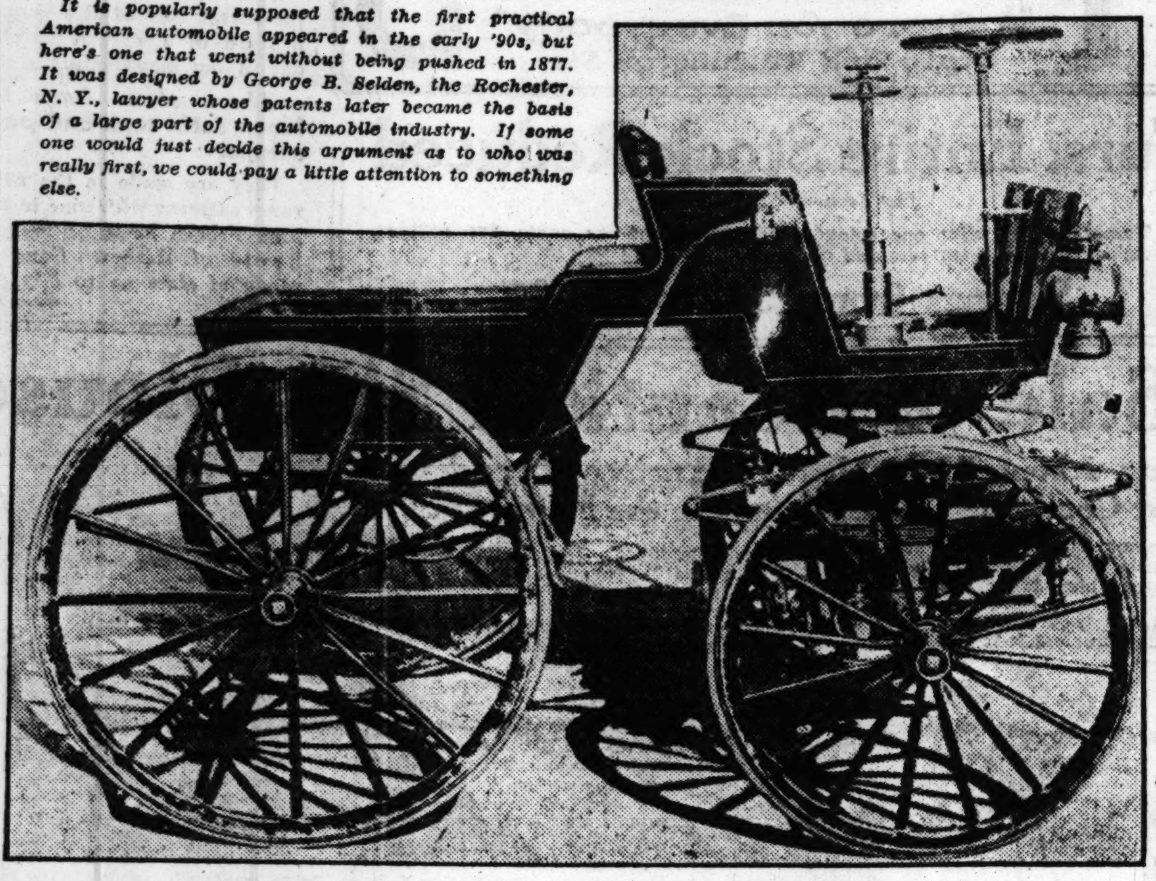
Another common cause of tire failure is found in misalignment of the front wheels. This condition sets up a scraping movement of the tires in addition to their rolling. The result is that the tread rubber is ground off by the rough surface of the ground. This trouble may be eliminated by having the alignment of the wheels checked up a couple of times a year and as often as a bump or accident might lead one to suspect that they had been knocked out of line.

One mistake in driving that costs much tire wear consists in the common failing of driving up to a stopping place at twenty-five miles an hour and then throwing on the brakes. This locks the wheels and the tires are scraped along for some yards and inevitably leave some of their rubber on the way. A similar failure comes from the tires striking a sharp stone or similar object. This causes a stone bruise of the fabric base and the result is a blowout that may not occur until weeks after the accident.

Mistakes in fitting the inner tubes cause considerable tire trouble. Talc should be used, but not in excessive quantity; just enough to cover the tube and keep it from sticking will do the trick. A carelessly inserted flap, which folds and extends out under the bead, is also likely to cause trouble.

It is popularly supposed that the first practical American automobile appeared in the early '90s, but here's one that went without being pushed in 1877. It was designed by George B. Selden, the Rochester, N. Y., lawyer whose patents later became the basis of a large part of the automobile industry. If some one would just decide this argument as to who was really first, we could pay a little attention to something else.



On Agin, Off Agin for Tire Size Plan

PERTURBED motorists who have been wondering what they are going to do about tires when the manufacturers stop making the sizes they use, may now draw a long breath of relief. The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce announced last week that committees representing both the tire and motor car makers have decided to abandon the restrictions adopted as a war measure last summer and to make tires and rims of all sizes as long as there is a demand for them.

The agreement by which the production of various sizes was to be dropped, a few each year, was a voluntary one, approved, but not ordered, by the government, so that those who entered into the compact have full authority to abandon it.

It was purely a wartime conservation plan and carried on the face of it the implication that it would not persist after the war. Nevertheless certain of its provisions brought a storm of perplexed protests from many quarters.

Chiefly these came from users of 34x4 and 30x3 inch tires. Both sizes, according to the schedule, were to have been discontinued Nov. 1, 1920, despite the fact that they are now in use on more cars than all other sizes put together. Apperson, Buick, Chalmers, Chandler, Chevrolet, Haynes, Hudson, King, Kissel, Lexington, Mitchell, Moline-Knight, Moon, Nash, Oldsmobile, Reo, and Stearns, for example, all employ the 34x4 size, or did when the regulations were drawn up. The 30x3 has long been the Ford size.

In many cases the car builders have changed the rims on their late 1918 and 1919 models to fit tire sizes that were designated to be continued, but this would not have helped the millions of owners of earlier models.

It is perilously easy, of course, to criticize things in retrospect, but one wonders, after all, precisely what was gained by the ponderous agreement as to what kinds of tires should be made more than two years in the future—an agreement virtually certain to be abandoned before its allotted time ran out. Manufacturers who have spent good money on wholly unnecessary alterations of their rims sizes probably would have something interesting to say on the subject if any one should ask them.

Please publish the best road from South Bend, Ind., to St. Louis, Mo. Also tell something of the condition of the roads and if it would be possible to make the trip now.

Mrs. F. E. Hopkins,
South Bend, Ind.

I should go through Plymouth, Rochester, Logansport, Lafayette, Crawfordsville, Terre Haute, Paris (Ill.), Mattoon, Shelbyville, Pana, Litchfield, and Edwardsville to St. Louis. The roads as far as Terre Haute are mostly excellent—macadam and gravel, which is usually kept in good condition—but across Illinois the roads are all dirt. The latter are good in dry weather, but in winter one is likely to find them in fearful shape. I should not attempt the trip at this time unless it is absolutely necessary.

Kindly tell me if in your opinion one can repaint his car. There are a number of "overnight" varnishes advertised that guarantee a brilliant finish and lasting gloss, and, according to the instructions given, no great amount of experience is necessary to apply them. My car was repainted last year, but the finish has become dull and worn, and if possible I should like to brighten it up without a $50 expense bill and a two weeks' layup. If these "home paints" are satisfactory do they give even better results if two coats are used, or one coat of prime and one of finish? Is it necessary to keep the car in a hot room for drying?

J. J. R., Chicago.

If you have ever visited a paint shop that turns out good jobs of car finishing, you will readily understand that the so-called "overnight" brands of varnish or paints will not give you a very neat appearing car. If it were possible to get the results so easily car makers certainly would take up this method of applying the finish. In the first place, the average owner has no place to do the work, for a dustproof room is essential. The old finish, if it is in bad shape, should be removed altogether, and the steel of the body rubbed with steel wool. Then comes the primer, which is a metal paint especially suited to the leaded steel of which most motor car bodies are made. This requires about twenty-four hours to dry. After this comes the flat color coats, as many as three or four being applied. Then the several coats of varnish are put on, each coat being rubbed with pumice stone and water. So you see it really takes about two weeks to do a decent job of this kind.

Striking Reduction in Package Delivery Cost Wins $500 Prize for Truck Driver

FIRST PRIZE in Class C of the Packard National Truck Efficiency Test goes to a truck driver in Chicago. Working his truck on modern business methods taught by the Packard Freight Transportation Department, this driver handled in August 6,873 packages, and reduced his carrying cost 1 cent per package—a saving of $68.73 per month, or $825 for the year.

Wholesale grocery business, delivering boxed, barreled and bagged goods to a route of retail stores.

Frequent stops and starts with short runs. Starting with full load and returning empty or practically so.

In August alone he saved enough to pay the owner at the rate of 15 per cent a year on the cost of the truck.

* * *

Many a truck owner does not realize the difference between the two classes of truck load—

The solid capacity load, hauled in its entirety from origin to destination—

And the load made up of a number of smaller shipments to be dropped off here and there along the route.

In the second case he should have a smaller truck.

Here is a distinction which may make a difference of $700 per truck on his fleet investment, and as much as $200 to $250 a year per truck in his operating costs.

It is a matter of buying the truck to fit the job.

Guessing at the size of truck needed is one cause of much of the excess cost in motor trucking.

Motor trucking, its service, its costs and economies, is one of the livest issues of the day.

The business man needs first of all to get the facts—the experience of people competent to speak.

That is the function of the Freight-Transportation Department of your local Packard Branch or Packard Dealer.

It is a Department not of Sales but of Service.

Its place and purpose are to tell you, the truck owner and driver, how modern business methods, applied to your present make of trucks, will effect transportation economies in your business.

Its services are without charge. Make use of them freely.

Some Results of Packard 100% War Work

Figures released for publication at the close of hostilities show that the Packard Trucks on the fighting fronts numbered 1000 more than the trucks of any other make.

Over four and a half million pounds of freight and express for the Packard Company were carried by Packard trucks during the past year. Exactly 3,699 Packard vehicles were sent to consignees under their own power which, with the freight and express transportation noted, released at least 2,000 freight cars to haul the mountains of war materials so desperately needed abroad. This is a very substantial realization of the slogan "Save a Freight Car for Uncle Sam," by those who originated it.

The truck transportation included work for the government as well as for the Packard Company, and frequently trucks were used in transporting material on urgent calls to points as much as 400 miles distant. Over 3,000 of the trucks sent overland were for army use, and many of them carried three tons of merchandise to the port of debarkation.

The value of this relief to the railroads by this freight movement over the highways cannot be comprehended in ton miles, for a large measure of it was achieved at the very time when weather conditions last winter practically blockaded the great munition carrying lines. It was just a year ago December 14th that the first train of 30 Packards set out overland for Baltimore. They left in 2-below-zero weather and contended with snow-filled roads all the way to the sea.

A cut of 50% in gasoline consumption, as a result of accurate cost-keeping, is reported by one express company employing a fleet of twelve Packard Trucks.

The saving covers the three months of the Packard Truck Efficiency Test, and all costs were recorded on the National Standard Truck Cost System, as perfected by the Truck Owners' Conference.

The National Standard Truck Cost System is the cost-accounting method adopted from the combined experience of several of the largest makers of trucks.

It is complete, exact, impartial—applicable to any truck and any business.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

By March 1, Willys-Overland will have attained a production of 400 cars a day, it is announced. This number will be increased as rapidly as circumstances will permit, with the new "little Overland," before long, constitutin ga large part of the output.

The White and Goodyear branches plan to stage a truck run to Milwaukee today to demonstrate the advantages of pneumatic tires on heavy vehicles used in long distance hauling. One of the White trucks which made the transcontinental trip from Boston to San Francisco last year will be used, with a fleet of touring cars to carry the observers.

J. G. Tennant, head of the financial service department of Tennant Motor, Ltd., thinks most people who buy automobiles on time fulfill their obligations. "Out of 1,800 clients on our books last year," he says, "less than 3 per cent turned back their cars after making a few payments. Most of these were men who went to the colors."

Charles G. Barley, president of the Indiana Truck corporation, submits the idea of a "hotel on wheels" as his contribution to the joys of motoring. He has fitted up a sleeping room, living room, and kitchen on a two ton Indiana chassis, and with Mrs. Barley, another couple, and a driver, plans to make a 4,000 mile trip to California and back this spring. All the comforts of home are provided, he says, with some you don't usually find around the house.

The new Essex added to its laurels in San Francisco the other day, it is reported, by averaging twenty-three miles to the gallon in a 115 mile test.

Paige expects to produce about 4,000 cars within the next three months. "By the first of June," reports Vice President Fred L. Jewett, "we look for normal conditions, which will enable us to get back into 'peace' production and a total output for the calendar year of between 17,000 and 20,000 cars."

The electric motor car business of the Anderson Electric Car company is to be incorporated under the trade name of the Detroit Electric Car company. The manufacture of trucks and motors for passenger cars will be segregated in the Cleveland plant, and the present Detroit factory will be devoted exclusively to body building, painting, trimming and fender production.

The Barley Motor Car company, builders of the Roamer, announce the addition of a custom body department to their factory at Kalamazoo, Mich.

Trucks, Roads in Service of Mars

truck takes up the proper distance, the drivers sensing as it were the distance between himself and the truck ahead. When the leader, who is supposed to know his truck train distance, has reached what he thinks is his train length around the turn the whistle sounds again and with screeching brakes the train stops.

Footsteps are heard pattering down the road and along comes the lieutenant in the darkness slapping his hand on the front and rear fenders of each truck, counting as he goes, so that he can tell whether or not his entire convoy has made the turn. If any are missing, back to the turn he goes and in the darkness he calls and yells until he has found the missing driver who generally stops when he does not hear the sound of a truck ahead of him. If the lieutenant is satisfied he has all his trucks, he blows his whistle and away they go.

Back on the main road the infantry, marching two abreast, plods along in the darkness, the men feeling every so often for the man in front while behind them is a small troop of cavalry. American cavalry is peculiar. The men don't believe the old saying that horses can see in the dark, for each man every so often turns his head, and, puckering up his lips, whistles a peculiar screeching owl-like whistle, which is answered by the man behind. On they go, each turning when the crossing M. P. calls out, "What outfit is this?" All night long the procession keeps up. The feel of the hard road keeps them on the road. They keep to the right, for to crowd to the middle means a chance to get knocked down by a truck or car going the other way.

The convoys, many of them half a mile long, keep going, making their turns when signaled by the guards or the M. P.'s. There is plenty of noise and blustering, and cursing, but no disorder and no trouble. Each knows his job and his duty, and no one tries to encroach on the others' rights.

Night after night I have been out on the dark roads, been through towns with convoys with streets so black and narrow that it would be a trick even in daytime to drive through them, been down roads where the flash of military police flashlights brought forth from the drivers billingsgate of the worst sort, trying to discover the reason for the uncanny driving of the American truck driver during these night stunts.

It was during the night of the St. Mihiel drive, with the sky pouring rain and the northern sky ablaze with the wild fire of the guns and torn here and there with brilliant flashes of the American cannon, putting over the greatest barrage in military history, that I found out.

I was out on the road near the front amidst the greatest congestion of men, trucks, automobiles, horses, and other road travelers I have ever seen. Waiting just below the crossroads was a truck train with lumber and road material of the engineer corps waiting to go forward at daybreak across No Man's land to lay the road over the trenches, enabling the troops to make their advance.

I jumped on the first truck to get under cover and sat watching the blazing sky and listening to the roaring of the guns, almost holding my ears to drive out the noise when the whistles sounded and we were off. Now and then there would be a lull and the driver, who was a high school student hailing from Texas, held his truck in a straight line as we led the way.

Then would come a brilliant flash from a nearby gun and off the road he would go narrowly escaping hitting a tree. Kelly, for that was his name, would let out a curse, "Damn that light!" I was beginning to observe that every bright flash of a gun would throw him off the road, while in the darkness he drove with the cunning of a cat.

I asked him about night driving. He said, "It is the good roads. When I feel the road I know when I am off or on. When the right wheel feels as though it is dragging then I turn to the left. I know just how far I go, for by the echoes that come from the trees as the truck passes and by running my car right up to the truck ahead of me, if I am behind, and the sound it makes, I can tell just where I am and the truck ahead is the only thing I am watching and listening for at night. But the light flashes or any light that hits my eyes throws me off for I steer right at it no matter where it is, and after you are used to night driving you can drive through the narrow filth covered streets of the towns and never hit a thing. A light of any kind is the worst thing I can think of."

The German roads south and connecting with the splendid roads of Luxembourg over which the Third army traveled on its way to the Rhine, are marvels to Americans. These roads are old Roman roads, built to connect the old Romish colony towns. Some places along the Moselle river they cling to the mountain sides, while through the valleys they run along the river, roads, boulevard like from an American standpoint, and roads, no matter what the weather is, that permit driving of any kind whether fast or slow.

No one knows where their foundations begin, for centuries upon centuries of constant filling up and repairing have made them as solid as the hills themselves. The Germans have taken advantage of the volcanic rocks of the hills and use it for their roads. And few of them have suffered from the thousands of German trucks which through the shortage of rubber when the war broke out compelled the Germans to shoe the heavy cargo truck wheels with steel tires.

The value of good roads for military purposes and the necessity of repairs of a permanent nature is recognized by both the Germans and the French. Every inch of road in that part of France occupied by the Germans since 1914 was in splendid shape when the American army of German occupation traveled over it in late November and early December, 1918, for Germany used a great portion of her prisoners of war on road work.

America's coming big battle, not of arms, but of commerce, depends on good roads. America will have good roads for the impressions and benefits of good roads as seen by 3,000,000 good red blooded American soldiers will have a voting power ready to put over good roads legislation.

Mistakes Graflex Buyers Make

Just as long as there is a used Graflex on the market you will make a mistake if you buy a new one. First of all, you can get a used Graflex at a tremendous discount from the list price of a new one. Second, a used Graflex will take just as good pictures as a new one, and picture taking efficiency is what you want. No one buys a Graflex as an ornament.

There is nothing about a Graflex that gets "second hand." The lens certainly does not give you second hand work, and the focal-plane shutter works just as well in a machine that is 5 years old as it does in a new machine.

All that you sacrifice in buying a used Graflex is the brightness that comes with newness, but this soon wears off anyway! The moment you take a new Graflex out of the store, it becomes a second hand Graflex.

We take in trade every style of Graflex. This we guarantee when we sell any Graflex. Do not make the mistake of buying a new Graflex when you can get a slightly used, perfect appearing, and perfect working Graflex at such a big discount. Note prices below.

1 A Graflex, 1918 model, B. & L., Zeiss Tessar f:4.5 lens. List $113.00. Our price, $92.50.

3A Graflex, Wollensak f:6.3 lens. List $110.00. Our price, $64.50.

5x7 Auto Graflex, 8¼ Euryplan f:5.6 lens. List $142.00. Our price, $105.00.

4x5 R. B. Telescopic Graflex, no lens. List, $110.00. Our price, $47.50.

These are only a few of the hundreds of Graflex Bargains now available to those who act quickly. Every Graflex we sell is guaranteed to give complete satisfaction.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

SALESMEN—EXPERIENCED TIRE SALESmen. Our need is for men to aid in the rapid development of this company. Our business has reached the proportion where it is necessary for us to build up our own distributing organization.

Capable men who are really producers will be able to qualify for executive positions. In the next few years there will be more big jobs than big men.

Men who meet our qualifications must be above the average.

We do not want the salesman who is continually seeking a change. We want men who have ability to think for themselves, who plan ahead, and who in their present capacities do not see the chance to display their ability or to have it rewarded. We want men who are successes and the only reason they would consider changing is because their present organization is too big or too hidebound.

This opportunity is no way to sudden wealth. You would start with us on your present salary. It will be up to you to convince us.

But you will later receive salary in proportion to your earnings and your worth to this company.

We have no so-called starting salary, nor do we have a regular scale of increase. It is absolutely up to the individual.

Neither will you step into an executive job at once.

We promote men from our sales force and make our selection on ability that has been proven.

There are several territories open. They are all in the Middle Western States. In some territories the salesman will make his headquarters away from Chicago. He will find the work hard and calling for all his ability, but he will have the backing of intelligent sales direction and a product second to none.

The big field jobs are yet to be made. Our future executives are probably in our sales force. This opportunity is identical to that offered by the biggest companies in the early days of their expansion, but our expansion has been more rapid and the job will come quicker to those who make a success with us.

Tell us about yourself by letter. The way you present yourself on paper will decide whether or not a personal interview will be arranged.

All replies will be treated with the strictest confidence. Address P N 94, Tribune.

WHEAT

Europe is hungry for wheat. The United States and Canada must supply it. Saskatchewan is the greatest spring wheat district in North America and its products bring the best prices in the world's markets. It also leads in average yields, as its soil is especially adapted to small grains. We have a number of improved farms for sale. We improved these farms ourselves and know that the cultivation is as good as can be done. These farms are ready for the actual settler to make a home or we will get a renter for nonresident investors.

These farms are capable of paying for themselves in a very short time, as the annual income is large and sure.

We sell on easy terms with small cash payment, so that you need only a small amount of money to own a first class, productive farm. No crop failures at Davidson, Sask.

Write for our free, illustrated, and questions and answers booklets.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

GOING, GOING,==

GET SOME LAND right away, even if you can't farm it for a few seasons to come. You are getting older every day and sometime you will be glad to have a nice little farm to go to. Land will never be any cheaper, but will continually increase in value as new settlers move in and develop the country. Some of the largest fortunes have been made by owners of ground from developments made by owners of surrounding ground.

WHAT NEW LAND now is left in the United States is very rapidly being sold out. There will never be any more. When it's all taken up those who have failed to get some of it will be the loosers.

OUR DISTRICT in Kalkaska and Antrim Counties is settling up fast. Every newcomer will mean money in your pocket if you own a piece of land there. In the back-to-the-land boom that is now on, our location is very popular with both investors and actual settlers, because of its capacity to produce fine crops of potatoes, beans, oats, rye, clover, alfalfa, wheat, fruit, and vegetables. It is already well supplied with market towns, schools, churches, hard roads, telephones, and R. F. D. You very seldom find these conveniences in a new country where good land is selling for only $15 to $30 per acre. You can now buy on easy terms 10, 20, 40, or 80 acre tracts, or larger tracts for stock raising.

THE SWIGART LAND COMPANY has been operating in Michigan for the last 20 years and the organization has reached a high state of efficiency with which no other concern can compete in the services rendered to patrons. In the numerous money saving ways they are able to co-operate with the landseeker in establishing him on a farm home of his own. Some of the special features are free insurance, expert farm advisers, money loaned to build and buy live stock. All told in a well illustrated free booklet. THERE WILL SOON BE NO MORE NEW LAND FOR SALE. GET YOURS NOW.

SEND THIS COUPON TODAY.
Please mail to me your big free booklet about land, without obligation on my part. Also explain how new settlers are exempted from taxes for five years and how your free insurance protects purchasers. Also tell me about your loaning money to settlers to buy live stock and build, and numerous other ways you help them.

FOR SALE—SOUTH DAKOTA LANDS—

I bought this land while living in South Dakota before going into the U. The section contains 655 acres and is located one mile from the county seat; price $16,000. The one-half section is priced at $5,000. The quarter sections at $2,500 each. This particular country raises excellent alfalfa and corn and the land in question is a good investment. If I was out of the army I would prefer not to sell it, but additional income is necessary, therefore wish to dispose of it on the above or similar terms. Address Capt. Don H. SALES PLANS NOS. 1 AND 2.

1—We build you a house and barn, sink a well, furnish cow, calf, pigs, sheep, chickens, fruit trees, tools. We also furnish dynamite on credit for blasting stumps and rent clearing and farming machinery. On this plan we require $500 down on 40 acres, with no further payments for five years on principal and interest. Larger tracts on similar terms.

No. 2—Land without improvements: $25 down, $10 to $15 per month, or annual payments of $100 down and $120 per year on 40 acres. When $500 is paid we give you the benefits of Credit Plan in Sales Plan No. 1.

Our prices range from $20 to $25 and $30 per acre for agricultural land. Stony land is sold as grazing land at very low prices. Light sandy land and swamp land we do not offer for sale.

INCREASED VALUES.

You want the greatest reward for your labor in developing land. You do not want to expend labor and money improving land that crop returns and increased values will not warrant. Therefore it is important that you be careful in the selection of soil. Poor soil is of little value, even if it is close to market, because it will produce little or nothing without expensive and careful building up. Take into comparison the districts with which you are familiar where land values range from $50 to $200 and $300 per acre for improved land. The variation in price is invariably due to the soil.

Oconto River Valley Land.

Forest and Oconto counties, Wisconsin, will stand the test as to soil and location. The soil here is a rich clay loam wtih sufficient clay and loam to retain moisture and prevent seepage. Will not bake or crack. It contains the essential elements, such as nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, calcium, magnesium, iron, sulphur, etc., and will stand heavy cropping of wheat, oats, barley, rye, corn, potatoes, clover, timothy, and all root crops. Small fruits and apples do well.

It is located close to railroad towns, roads, and social centers. Within easy reach of Chicago and Milwaukee by railroads and Great Lakes transportation. Many lakes, creeks, and rivers. Much timber, which, when converted into cordwood, pulpwood, ties, etc., furnishes ready cash while clearing. All in all, this district offers splendid opportunities for men who desire land for general farming, stock raising, dairying, or ranches.

REAL ESTATE—CATTLE RANCHES.

FOR SALE—CATTLE, SHEEP, HOG, GRAIN, alfalfa, and fruit ranches, from 40 acres up to 82,000 acres, prices ranging from $10,000 to $1,250,000. Some of these ranches are owned by old people wanting to retire, some are estates that have to be settled, some have been poorly managed and must be sold.

We have ranches that are stocked with cattle and sheep, are paying splendid profits, and will be sold with or without the live stock at fair and reasonable prices. We have large improved ranches that present wonderful possibilities and can be bought right. We also have large tracts of land good for ranching and colonization, irrigation and subdivision. There are many small ranches and farms ranging from $10,000 to $50,000. All of the above can be sold on good terms.

According to the 1919 Almanac and Year Book the total value of all the real and personal property of the great state of Illinois, including its cities, railroads, etc., is less than $15,000,000,000.00 [fifteen billion dollars]. The United States government in Bulletin 641 estimates that in two counties of Colorado, containing about 1,900 square miles, there are shale beds capable of producing 20,000,000,000 [twenty billion] barrels of oil and 300,000,000 [three hundred million] tons of ammonium sulphate. This means an average of more than 10,000 barrels of oil and more than 240 tons of ammonium sulphate [fertilizer] per acre. We can sell some of this land as low as $800.00 for 160 acres. Nothing like it. This is where truth is stranger than fiction. It is the greatest opportunity that ever came to you. See us at once before it is all gone.

Having been engaged in ranch management for years, I may be of service in assisting you in the selection of a profitable ranch. Remember, we have ranches for sale in California, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Kansas, Missouri, Texas, and Oklahoma. No trades considered. These lands are for sale. Come in and talk with us. JAMES A. ODELL, Room 1403 Great Northern Bldg., 20 W. Jackson-blvd. Phone Wabash 5223.

Selecting a Car

The Templar Motors Corporation is building the finest car of moderate size that skill and money can produce. Templar Cars are designed to fulfill the growing demand for a medium size car of superfine quality, which incorporates the beauty and refinement of design inherent in the highest priced products, and the quality of materials and workmanship which heretofore have been confined to the large, high-priced cars.

Today the automobile buyer is looking for, first of all, performance; next, appearance; and then, true economy, not only in gasoline and tires, but in upkeep as well. He demands a car that is light, flexible in traffic, one which will breeze up all ordinary hills on high—a car that will run every day in the year with little attention, and one so designed that all parts are easily accessible when adjustments are necessary.

Templar is superfine in quality, beautiful in appearance, light in weight, small in size and inexpensive to operate. It is luxuriously comfortable, easy to control, and most completely equipped. In fact, it is the pioneer in a field heretofore without exponent. It is the rich man's demand—quality and economy; it is the poor man's need—economy and quality. 30 day deliveries.

PACKARD

After millions of dollars had been spent, Europe confirmed and proved the Twin Six principle as first commercially introduced by Packard. It has been adopted exclusively or partly by such well known makers abroad as DeDion, Renault, Sunbeam, Sterling, Royal, Panhard, Wolseley, Napier, and even the conservative Rolls-Royce. Where can you find a better indorsement of the Twin Six?

A renewed Twin Six retains all of its original qualities and at its moderate price makes it a very desirable motor car investment. There are available today:

1917 model 2-35 seven passenger touring car, renewed, new paint, new tires, guaranteed. Complete fitting.

Twin Six seven passenger brougham. A single compartment enclosed car with a strong appeal to the family man who likes to drive. This body while comfortably roomy is mounted on the shorter chassis, which can easily be handled in congested traffic. The body is new, the chassis guaranteed; only one of this type available for immediate delivery. Act quick.

PRODUCE TRADE

Stormy weather made trade in produce light, only buyers who had to have supplies being out. No session of the butter and egg board was held, but there was a good demand for butter, with the market in a healthy condition. Prices on standard creamery advanced ½c to 48½c, while 92 scores were unchanged at 53c. Cold storage stocks here are 4,425,905 lbs. compared with 5,028,758 lbs a week ago.

Eggs advanced ¾ to 1c with a large trade and sales at 38 to 38½c for fresh firsts. Receipts are large here and at other points and consumption heavy. Arrivals here for the week were 32,167 cases by express, against 46,000 last year.

Offerings of live poultry were small and trade also light. Prices were unchanged at 30c for live turkeys, 31c for fowls and springs, and 21c for roosters.

Potatoes were taken slowly, owing to bad weather and large arrivals, 50 cars for the day and 266 cars for the week, compared with 301 cars the previous week and 223 cars last year. Prices dropped 10c per 100 lbs, with sales of a few cars of fancy dusty rurals at $1.65 to $1.70, and of Wisconsin white stock at $1.55 to $1.60 on track.

Strawberries were easier, with 36 freezers in from Florida, and sales were at lower prices, the range being 60 to 70c per qt.

Market for grapefruit is firmer at $3.75 to $5.00 per box as to count. Oranges are selling freely, with light offerings of California at $4.00 to $5.00 and Floridas at $3.00 to $4.75.

INSURANCE NEWS IN ALL BRANCHES EAST AND WEST

Fraternal Officials Meet to Discuss Their Problems.

BY THOMAS R. WEDDELL.

The president's section and the legal counsel of the National Fraternal Congress of America closed a three days' session yesterday at the Hotel Sherman. Among the important subjects considered were the effect of the influenza epidemic and the various methods of meeting the greatly increased claims, the legislation desired by the fraternals at the current sessions of the state legislatures, and the attitude of the Modern Woodmen of America, which recently withdrew from the National Fraternal congress.

The congress has appointed special committees in each state to look after fraternal legislation. Wherever the Mobile bill is in force the fraternals are seeking to amend it to conform to the New York conference bill, and where the New York conference bill is not in force to have it enacted. They are also seeking the passage of the whole family protection bill and of the model bill regulating the merging of fraternal insurance companies.

NON-BOARD CONFERENCE.

The executive officers of the non-board casualty companies will meet in Chicago Monday to consider automobile liability, property damage, and collision rates for the central western territory. The conference companies have recently made material changes in their schedules and rates, making reductions in many cases, and the conference companies will seek to maintain their advantage.

CAUSES OF DEATHS.

Of 12,912 claims in the New York Life during 1918 4,187 were due to influenza and pneumonia during the closing months of the year. The other leading causes were war, with 1,344; consumption, with 894; cancers and tumors, with 859; Bright's disease, with 756; war claims, with 641; apoplexy, with 608; and accidents, with 559. Of the 12,912 deaths, 4,860 were merchants or their employés, 2,302 manufacturers and their employés, 1,488 professional men, and 1,215 farmers.

SOUTHERN SURETY FIGURES.

The new figures of the Southern Surety company of Des Moines show assets of $2,770,083, an increase during the year of nearly $200,000. The unearned premium reserve is $816,276, and, after setting aside ample reserves for all other liabilities, the company has a net surplus of $482,067. The capital stock was increased during the year to $1,000,000. The Illinois premiums for 1918 were $270,000, of which $69,000 was surety business written through Chicago with a notably low loss ratio.

INSURANCE NOTES.

The annual meeting of the field men of the Hartford Fire, the Hartford Live Stock, and the Hartford Accident and Indemnity will be held in Chicago Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday. The business sessions will be held at the Morrison hotel, closing with a dinner at the Mid Day club Friday evening. President Bissell and Vice President Palache will be present from the home office, with Dixwell Hewitt from the San Francisco office.

James A. Campbell, agency director of the central branch of the New York Life in Chicago, has received an engrossed testimonial signed by the officers of the company certifying that the central branch in 1918 paid for more business than was ever paid for in any year by it or any other branch of the company.

A. S. Jacobs, state agent of the Queen, has been elected a member of the executive committee of the Illinois Conservation association, succeeding H. A. Yates of the Hartford, who has removed to Tennessee.

The field men of the Michigan Fire and Marine will meet at the home office in Detroit Monday and Tuesday for a business conference.

A large increase in shingle roof fires is reported due to the use of soft coal and the resultant sparks.

GOV. HARDING IS IMPROVING.

PRICE OF HOGS REACTS AFTER HIGHER START

Packers Buy Quantity at $18.00, Top Mark of Week.

After a steady to slightly higher start the hog market closing day of the week reacted, some transactions being 10c below best time of the morning. Packers bought quite a number as high as $18.00, the week's top. Day's general average at $17.73 was only 1c below Friday, 8c above a week ago, and 40c higher than a year ago. Armour's drove cost around $17.64.

There was a liberal run of hogs, the total at 28,000 swelling arrivals for the week to 245,100, being second largest since the 309,990 total received six weeks ago, which was second largest on record at Chicago. While hogs are coming in liberally in point of numbers the estimated average weight for the week at 223 lbs was 8 lbs lighter than previous week and lighter than the 232 lb average of a year ago, being the first time in many months when the average dropped below corresponding week a year ago.

Combined receipts of hogs at the eleven principal markets for the day were 69,000, being 18,000 more than previous Saturday, and 29,000 less than a year ago. For the week eleven points were credited with a total of 824,000, being 26,000 more than arrived the previous week, 12,000 more than a year ago and 269,000 more than the ten year average of corresponding weeks since 1908.

Sheep Score Sharp Gain.

Sheep and lambs during the week sold on a relatively higher level than any other offerings. Moderate receipts, coupled with an improved local and outside demand, caused a sharp advance in prices. Range of sales was narower than usual, as the in-between grades sold comparatively higher than the best classes. Top lambs for the week showed only 90c advance, while numerous sales were $1.00 and even more higher than the previous week.

General average price of lambs at Chicago last week advanced 95c, or $17.85, standing highest since last August, $3.70 higher than Christmas week of 1918, the low week last year, and $9.00 above the eight year average of corresponding weeks since 1910. The average price of aged sheep at $11.80 last week was $1.20 higher than the previous week, improved quality helping to boost the average.

Cattle market for the week proved one of the most uneven in the history of the trade. After starting on a sharply higher basis, prices broke rapidly, steers losing more than they gained early, while butcher stock closed on a basis steady with the previous week. On the other hand canner demand improved and prices strengthened.

Unusual for this time of the year, calf prices advanced $1.00@1.50 above the previous week. Top grades at $16.75 showed $1.25 gain, while most of the lighter weights, selling around $16.25@16.50, showed $1.50 advance. A better market in the east was responsible for the gain.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 50,000 hogs, and 18,000 sheep, against 17,131 cattle, 54,133 hogs, and 14,722 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts 69,000 cattle, 235,000 hogs, and 70,000 sheep.

Take Comfort to Your Sole; Sloppy Footing to Vanish

Good news comes from the weather front. The snow and mud porridge which has filled the streets for thirty-six hours is due to vanish today. The weather bureau predicts cloudy weather without snowfall.

No great change in temperature is expected.
